If you have suppressed or painful periods, weakness of the stomach, indigestion, bloating, pelvic catarrh, nervous prostration, dizziness, faintness, "don't-care" and "want-to-be-left-alone" feeling, excitability, backache or the blues, these are sure indications of female weakness, or some derangement of the organs. In such cases there is one tried and true remedy—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

YOU CANNOT CURE

all inflamed, ulcerated and catarrhal conditions of the mucous membrane such as nasal catarrh, uterine catarrh caused by feminine ills, sore throat, sore mouth or inflamed eyes by simply dosing the stomach.

But you surely can cure these stubborn affections by local treatment with which destroys the disease germs, checks discharges, stops pain, and heals the inflammation and soreness.

Paxtine Toilet Antiseptic

Paxtine represents the most successful local treatment for feminine ills ever produced. Thousands of women testify to this fact. 50 cents at druggists.

AN UNUSUAL OPPORTUNITY.

Florence Drug Co. Will Pay Back Your Money if Pepsikola Fails to Cure Your Indigestion.

"Never in the history of this store," remarked one of the above druggists to an interested customer, "has there been so great a demand for a new remedy as there is just now for Pepsikola Tablets. Clanton people are coming in every day inquiring if it really is true that we sell Pepsikola with the understanding that it will cure dyspepsia or pay back the money. "Not one person in fifty has asked for their money, and it may surprise you to know that at least a dozen within the last ten days have been in to tell us how much they have been relieved and how glad they are to know at last there is a remedy that really will cure indigestion and dyspepsia." Pepsikola braces up and tones every nerve and fibre, helps digest the food, puts new life into the digestion, improves the appetite, cures coated tongue, dizzy spells and sour stomach.

Try it for ten days, and if you don't see a big improvement step in and tell Florence Drug co., and they will hand back your quarter cheerfully and without argument.

Men Past Sixty in Danger

More than half of mankind over sixty years of age suffer from kidney and bladder disorders, usually enlargement of prostrate glands. This is both painful and dangerous, and Foley's Kidney Cure should be taken at the first sign of danger, as it corrects irregularities and has cured many old men of this disease. Mr. Rodney Burnett, Rockport, Mo., writes: "I suffered with enlarged prostrate gland and kidney trouble for years and after taking two bottles of Foley's Kidney Cure I feel better than I have for twenty years, although I am now 91 years old." Timber Land, Act June 3, 1878

United States Land Office,
Montgomery, Ala., June, 5, 1906

Notice is hereby given that in compliance with the provisions of the act of Congress of June 3, 1878, entitled "An Act for the sale of timber lands in the States of California, Oregon, Nevada and Washington Territory," as extended to all the Public Land States by act of August 4, 1892, William P. Lay, of Gadsden, county of Etowah, State of Alabama, has this day filed in this office his sworn statement No. 20, for the purchase of the Southeast part of Fraction "A" or the Sw ¼ of Ne ¼, of Section No. 24, Township No 22 N, Range No. 15 E, and will offer proof to show that the land sought is more valuable for its timber or stone than for agricultural purposes, and to establish his claim to said land before Clerk Circuit Court, at Clanton, Ala., on the 1st day of September, 1906.

He names as witnesses: E. M. Pinckard, of Clanton, Ala.; W. H. Foshee, of Clanton, Ala.; Hugh Simpson, of Clanton, Ala.; Abe Kanter, of Clanton, Ala.

Any and all persons claiming adversely the above described lands are requested to file their claims in this office on or before the 1st day of September, 1906.

Sour Stomach

No appetite, loss of strength, nervousness, headache, constipation, bad breath, general debility, sour risings, and catarrh of the stomach are all due to indigestion. Kodol cures indigestion. This new discovery represents the natural juices of digestion as they exist in a healthy stomach, combined with the greatest known tonic and reconstructive properties. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure does not only cure indigestion and dyspepsia, but this famous remedy cures all stomach troubles by cleansing, purifying, sweetening and strengthening the mucous membranes lining the stomach.

Mr. S. S. Ball, of Ravenswood, W. Va., says:— "I was troubled with sour stomach for twenty years. Kodol cured me and we are now using it in milk for baby."

THE JAMESTOWN EXPOSITION.

The great expositions of the world have usually been held in or near metropolitan cities. The knowledge of this fact has caused some to question whether Norfolk will be able to furnish adequate hotel accommodations for the immense throngs which next year will visit Jamestown Exposition. No anxiety need be felt, however, on this score.

The Jamestown Exposition is pecularly fortunate in its situation. Although it is but a scant six miles from Norfolk, it is hardly a greater distance from Portsmouth, Newport News or Hampton. It is within a few minutes ride of some of the most famous seaside hotel resorts in America: Ocean View, Virginia Beach, Pine Beach and Fortress Monroe, or Old Point, long famous as an all year health and pleasure point. The cities enumerated above are are well equipped with modreu hotels, and cottages for the accommodation of summer visitors line the shores of Chesapeake Bay, the roadway to the sea and the Virginian coast.

Several large hotels are now building in the cities near the Exposition, and a number of temporary hotels are going up in the vicinity of the grounds. Further to assure comfortable and attractive accommodations for its guests, there is being constructed within the Exposirion grounds an Inside Inn, which is unique among the Exposition hotels. This Inn will be a real hotel not a hastily constructed barn with shallow partitions, built for a day. It will be a permanent affair, lasting after the Exposition is over and will add one more to the well known resorts of the section.

It will have a frontage of six hundred and fifty feet and a depth of four hundred and fifty feet, and will be three stroies high. It will contain nearly one thousand rooms, accommodating two thousand guests. It is located near the main entrance of the Exposition and faces Hampton Roads, separated from this sheet of water only by a shady boulevard. To the left of the hotel is a splendid grove of stately pines; to the right, separate some hundred yards, is the Amusement erection of the Exposition, named by General Lee "The Warpath." At the rear of the Inside Inn is the Forestry and outdoor Horticultural Exhibit. It will be seen from these items of surroundings that the situation of the Inn could not be improved.

NOW IS THE TIME!

Now! when this weather just makes one dream of the cool and delightful retreats of the Adirondacks.

Of the Thousand Islands of the St. Lawrence.

The thousand lakes and streams of Michigan, Canada, and the northwest:

Where one can roam with fishing rod along shady forest streams and swing the line out over deep pools.

Or paddle through quiet waters with only the music of the forest or the ripple of the water to break the deep quiet of the solitude.

Now is the time to consult your nearest Big Four Agent as to routes and rates and get his information as to through sleepers from St. Louis, Indianapolis, Cincinnati, Dayton, Springfield and Columbus to Boston, Cleveland, Buffalo, New York

Or Cincinnati, Dayton, Springfield to Toledo, Detroit, Mackinac.

Or Cincinnati to St. Louis, Peoria and Chicago;

And remember also those comfortable Parlor Cars and those hunger-satisfying Dining Cars that serve the best meals on wheels

Four cents in stamps will bring our "World's Playground."

MAKE MONEY.

Here is an interesting study: Make out a list of all the people you know, and estimate the amount of money each one earns in a year. Total it up. The amount will be surprisingly large. Now, of all those people, only the few who SAVE SOMETHING really MAKE anything at all. Simply earning money isn't making it; what slips through the earner's fingers is finally "made" by somebody else. Don't forget to count yourself in on the list, and if you are not "making" money, begin now to save with us. One dollar will open your bank account.

Death of Miss Exie Wilson.

A beautiful life was cut short when last Satday Miss Exie Wilson breathed her last, after a sickness of only two weeks. She was the beloved daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. N. Wilson, only nineteen years of age, a charming girl, whose loss will be sadly felt by the members of Maple Springs church, of which she was a member. The funeral took place at the Eiland graveyard Sunday. Our prayers are with the bereaved parents and family

Energy.

Crops are sorry, except corn; cotton is sorry, there is a good weed but there isn't much fruit on it.

A few words in regard to the singing school that was taught by Mr. W. B. Robinson, at Bethany church; it was a great blessing for all our young people; Mr. Robinson did all that was in his power to learn us how to sing, and that isn't all, he taught us how to do right, and if we will take the advice that he gave us we will live a better life than we have in the past. I will give Mr. Robinson my best thanks, hoping to go to him again and wishing him good luck in his other schools.

Little Angel's Flight.

Saturday at 7:30 p.m. little Russie, four months old, the earthly jewel of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Maddox closed its precious eyes in sleep to never awake no more here. But in heaven we know this darling awoke to never sleep again. It was the bright jewel of that home, and we say mother and father, today he is one of heaven's sweet angels. Weep not for your precious one, for at last you can go to him where parting is no more. Sunday at three o'clock the funeral took place at Concord church; Rev W. W. Robinson made a grand talk and proved to all present that the dead did rise at the last day and that heaven's angels were precious babes like unto this one, he said, and except all repent and become as one of these little ones we can in no wise enter the kingdom. Now our earnest prayers and deepest sympathy is for the bereaved family of their little one, who now is in the arms of our blessed Savior.

CLANTON, ALA.

Only four of Queen Victoria's twenty-one granddaughters now remain unmarried. Eligible young men will have to speak quick or be everlastingly too late, warns the Boston Globe.

Consider the hen, admonishes the Chicago Tribune. She is in favor of the widest publicity as to the date on which her product is placed on the market. In fact, she announces it to all the world in a loud tone of voice.

It is predicted that the British Government will not allow another accident like that at Salisbury to occur on an English railroad, says the Philadelphia Inquirer. How different from our own beloved country.

With the tide successfully harnessed for the raising, moving and placing of a ponderous bridge span, men will be inspired anew to consider the practicability of making general industrial use of the enormous and inexhaustible potentiality of that phenomena of the seas, muses the New York Tribune.

The Pennsylvania farmer who blew up an Indian altar stone because people trampled his wheat in going to see it lacked the Barnum imagination. A tent and ten cents a head would have made a better venture than blasting powder. But the farmer, after all, was quite as far-seeing as the enemies of Niagara.

The net debt of London is $225,000,000; that of New York was $421,557,114 last November. The budget of the London County Council for one year is $50,000,000; that of New York, including some costs not borne in London by the Council, is more than twice as great. They growl in London about extravagance.

The professional humorists who for years have been turning out jokes about the business rating of fashionable brides and bridegrooms should try a new turn, thinks the New York World. Nowadays divorce proceedings get mixed up with the financial news and stock-market reports. Dun and Bradstreet may soon have to issue lists on marriage failures with the terms, how much on the dollar, the husband expects to pay the first wife before resuming business with a new partner.

The London Spectator, in a reassuring mood, says: "The British people are essentially friendly to America, and even though they may sometimes express themselves bluntly, clumsily and injudiciously, what they are condemning is not the American people, but that small minority of persons who have done so cruel a wrong to the American people." This comment is called out by the beef disclosures, and on the whole may be said to be extremely graceful in its compliment.

Says the Boston Transcript: Highwaymen are around again and we should all make up our minds how to behave should we meet them. One way is to hold out a hand to the thug and say: "Why, how are you, old man? Glad to see you! Put it there!" This perplexes him, and it's sous to francs he shakes hands. Then you exclaim: "By the way, have you got a cigarette?" Utterly disconcerted, he offers you one. Thus you have gained time and employed it in thought. It's astonishing how actively the mind works in the presence of a highwayman. In a few seconds you have worked out a plan. "Just a moment, old man," you say, "wait till I ask one of those chaps back there for a match."

Says the Atlanta Constitution: The provincialism—too often a term sadly misapplied—that has given a saliency and a point and a pugnacity to the careers of young men in New England has done the same thing for young men in the South. The spirit of domesticity, the absolute ignorance of wander-lust which have given to the South a generation of simple, kindly, conservative and cautious "old folk," are different only in externals from the forces that make the expatriated New Englander proud to call the little tier of States his home, and that brings moisture to his eyes when he thinks of the part the traditions there ruling have had in marking out the boundaries of his life.

TREASON OF GUARDS

Nicholas Nicholaievitch Had Narrow Escape From Assassination.

WAS DRILLING THE TROOPS.

During Blank Fire Practice a Shower of Leaden Missiles Hissed About His Head.

St. Petersburg.—Grand Duke Nicholas Nicholaievitch, president of the council of national defense, narrowly escaped assassination at the hands of the imperial guard at Krasnoye-Selo.

Thus far only meagre details of the affair has been obtained, from which it appears that the grand duke was personally reviewing, maneuvering and putting the troops through blank fire practice, when he suddenly was startled by the wasplike hiss of bullets about his head. Fortuniately neither himself nor his horse was touched.

The command to cease firing was immediately given and the soldiers of the regiment from which the bullets came were marched back to their quarters, and an investigation was begun in the hope of ascertaining from the barrels of the rifles which of the soldiers fired ball cartridges. Several arrests are understood to have been made.

One of the grand duke's aid-de-camps, who, however, was not personally present, advanced the theory that possibly the bullets were fired by accident, but he considered that beyond a doubt there was a plot on the part of a number of guardsmen, who deliberately planned to take the grand duke's life under cover of the general blank cartridge firing.

"It was no more an accident," said the aid-de-camp, "than was the firing of the charge of grape from the saluting battery at the winter palace on the occasion of the ceremony of blessing the waters of the Neva by the emperor a year and a half ago."

The bold attempt on the grand duke's life caused an immediate change in the plans of the emperor, who had arranged to go to Krasnoye-Selo and spend a week with the soldiers of his imperial guard.

Afterwards it was definitely established that the shots were fired by the First battalion of the sharp-shooters of the guard, who advanced in rushes while making a sham attack on an entrenched position. Fully a hundred shots were fired, but the impatience of the conspirators led them to open fire at such a distance as to frustrate their object.

Before the maneuvers began all the ball cartridges were taken from them and the officers had taken the precaution to make a special examination of the cartridge poches of the soldiers immediately before the inauguration of the troops.

Knocked Down Bridge.

Duluth, Minn.—The steamer Troy, a package freighter owned by the Western Transit Company, collided with the span of the interstate state bridge and precipitated it into the channels on either side of the center pier, on which the span revolved. Navigation to and from the upper harbor, the most active portion of the head of the lakes, is blocked. It is impossible even for a tug to pass. Forty steamers are cut off from returning to the lakes. Street railway and team traffic between Duluth and Superior is cut off and will be for some time to come.

The bridge is owned by the Great Northern railroad. The span was 500 feet in length, one of the longest in the world.

Russia to Build Ironclads.

St. Petersburg.—According to the Bourse Gazette the naval construction program of the ministry of marine includes ironclads of 20,000 tons, capable of steaming twenty-one knots an hour, to be constructed in Russian yards.

To Restore Spreckles Mansion.

San Francisco, Cal.—The Claus Spreckles mansion on Vanness avenue is to be restored at an expenditure of $800,000. According to the terms of the contract it will be ready for occupancy within a year.

Before the fire the Spreckles mansion was one of the most pretentious homes in America. The marble in the hall alone cost over $100,000. The rest of the house was furnished in corresponding style. In less than an hour the famous art treasury, paintings, tapestry and carvings were reduced to heaps of ashes and charred stones. The house was completely gutted by the fire.

Horse Racing is Planned.

Gadsden, Ala.—The horsemen of this city and Anniston are discussing a plan to have a series of races in that city some time in October, where there is a good half-mile track in excellent condition. Gadsden had some good horseflesh and a local race track was talked of here last spring. However, the proposition from Anniston, it is believed, would please them better, and it is probable the races will be arranged for.

Unusual Verdict.

London.—What in legal history will be considered a celebrated case was concluded when a jury in the historic old hall of Lincoln's Inn inquired at the instance of the official solicitor into the mental condition of the Marquis Townshend, returned the curious verdict that his lordship is capable of taking care of himself, being dangerous neither to himself or others, but that he is of unsound mind so far as managing his affairs are concerned.

The case, which has attracted great public interest, developed some sensational as well as unpleasant testimony. It was marked by an extraordinary incident, when the jury, against the wish of the judge, insisted on hearing Townshend's testimony in secret, even refusing the request of the marchioness for permission to be present. Then before the lawyers' closing addresses had been concluded the members of the jury announced that they had made up their minds, and after the judge's charge were only out ten minutes. It was alleged that the marquis was unduly influenced by one Robbins, whom he had known for fourteen years, and the marchioness testified that Robbins' influence over the marquis had brought about a separation between herself and her husband soon after their marriage.

Agree on Scale.

Knoxville, Tenn.—The joint convention of coal miners and operators of District No. 19, United Mine Workers of America, agreed upon a wage scale to become effective on September 1 and continue for one year. Both sides made concessions. The new scale is, in effect, a restoration of the schedule of wages of 1903, which is practically an increase of 7 1-2 per cent for miners and day laborers. The scale for yardage will remain the same as heretofore, which is a concession made by the miners.

The operators yielded their demands for the scale to terminate on June 1, 1907, instead of September 1, 1907, as desired by the miners. A board of arbitration, composed of W. R. Ballou and Hywell Davies, for the operators, and P. J. Dunaway and William Hollers, for the miners, will hear and adjust all complaints, both from miners and operators, not disposed of by the joint convention. The presence of John Mitchell, national president of the United Mine Workers, who was here in consultation with the joint convention's scale committee on Thursday and Friday, is believed to have aided in the consummation of an agreement.

Master Butchers to Meet.

St. Louis, Mo.—Announcement has been made that the United Master Butchers' Association of America will convene in twentieth annual session at Milwaukee for four days, beginning Tuesday, August 21. At the convention representatives will be present from Germany and Great Britain. Among those present from London will be William Hayden and Alderman Thomas Guerney Randall, who will represent the Worshipful Camp of Butchers, an organization chartered over 700 years ago.

Shoots the Conductor.

Natchitoches, La.—Charged with shooting and killing the conductor of his own train in a dispute over the responsibility for a railroad accident, J. M. Burford, a locomotive engineer, was placed in jail here.

While he was running a train belonging to a lumber company from here to Montrose the engineer failed to stop when a car became derailed until the car was almost entirely torn to pieces. Conductor H. G. Reid went to the engine, where he accused the engineer of intentionally wrecking the car by failure to stop sooner. Both men drew revolvers and Burford fired.

To Meet at Moscow.

Moscow.—The zemstvo congress has been summoned to meet at Moscow on September 7. The constitutional democrats controlled the last congress, but a strong effort will be made by the Octoberists and regenerationists to wrest the leadership from them and adopt a resolution supporting the program of the party of regeneration, issued in St. Petersburg.

Young Irving Given Ovation.

Manchester.—Henry B. Irving made his first appearance at the Princess Theatre here in the "Lyon's Mail," playing the double roles of Leseurques and Duboscq, parts in which his father's name was associated. Mr. Irving was particularly powerful in portraying the murder. The house was crowded and he was given an ovation.

Portsmouth, Eng.—Sir Francis Scott, baronet, a lieutenant of the royal army, retired, was found dead at his residence, Dunninald, South Sea, with a bullet wound in his head. It is thought he committed suicide. He was born in 1851.

Must Submit Their Names.

Gadsden, Ala.—Chairman McConnell, of the democratic executive committee, has notified all parties who wish to be voted for as delegates to the state convention that they must hand in their names to the county committee not later than August 18, so that their names may be placed upon the ballots for the state and county primary on August 27.

ALABAMA GLEANINGS.

Items of Interest Gathered as They Transpire Over the Entire State.

Florence, Ala.—The glad news has just been received in Florence that the Louisville and Nashville railroad will accede to the wishes of the people of this city, expressed in a petition on July 23, by extending the Lawrenceburg accommodation on Nos. 24 and 27 to run through to Tuscumbia. This arrangement will provide double daily trains between Florence and Nashville, enabling people from this city to go to Nashville and return the same day.

The date for inaugurating the new schedule has not yet been decided upon. With the new schedule on the Louisville and Nashville and the establishment of a daily train which the Southern has promised between Florence and Birmingham, the "isolation" which has so long handicapped Florence will be a thing of the past, and nothing else is needed to make her a thriving city.

Oil Can Explodes.

Birmingham, Ala.—Thomas Baird, an employe of the Louisville and Nashville railroad, was terribly burned by an explosion of an oil can which he was holding in his hand.

It seems that Mr. Baird had attempted to light a fire with the assistance of the oil, but at first it failed to burn. He finally picked up the can, and was on the point of pouring more oil on when a flame ran up the spout and caused the can to explode. The flaming oil flew in all directions and caused the unfortunate young man terrible wound. He was carried to St. Vincent's Hospital in the ambulance of Gaudin & Co. and was given every medical attention possible. A message from the hospital, however, stated that his chances for recovery were very slight.

Miss Mary L. Posep Dead.

Florence, Ala.—Miss Mary L. Posey, daughter of Judge Sydney C. Posey and a great-niece of General John Coffee, died Thursday morning, following an operation for appendicitis, and was buried in the Coffee burial ground, north of Florence. Her death followed in only three days the death of her sister, Mrs. Rachel Morgan, with whom she had made her home always, and she breathed her last not knowing of the death of her sisted. The deceased was born in this city and spent her life here. She was the last of a family of five, three brothers having preceded her to the grave.

9,035 Teachers Licensed.

Montgomery, Ala.—With the certificates issued as a result of the July examinations, Alabama will have 9,035 teachers authorized to teach by reason of holding license from the state department of education. The last report of the county superintendents shows that there are employed in the schools of the state 6,500 teachers, which would leave, with the present status, 2,535 teachers who are not at work, though they have a right to be so.

New Electric Line Opened.

Gadsden, Ala.—The first regular car over the Walnut street extension of the Alabama City, Gadsden and Attalla street railway left the Broad street station Saturday morning, and has been making regular trips since. The line is being liberally patronized, and is a great convenience to many residents in that part of the city. Last Tuesday was the day first set to begin operating cars, but the sewer work interfered.

Storm in Hartselle.

Hartselle, Ala.—A severe wind and rain visited this county. It was not felt so much here, but reports from the different portions of the county are to the effect of damage to crops, especially in the eastern part of the county, where the damage was considerable.

Labor Day at Sheffield.

Sheffield, Ala.—Labor Day will be celebrated in Sheffield on a large scale this year. A parade and barbecue will be the principal features of the day. Prominent men will be invited to make addresses on that occasion. Committees have been appointed to arrange matters.

Elks' Annual Boat Ride.

Decatur, Ala.—August 30 the Elks' lodge of Decatur will give their regular annual sunset excursion on the Tennessee river. The handsome new steamer White Oak and barge will be used for the occasion.

Water Consumption Increases.

Augusta, Ga.—During the past year there has been an increase of practically 600 per cent in the amount of water consumed by the citizens of Augusta, as the records for July, 1905, show that there was a daily average of 6,640,649 gallons consumed, and the month of July, 1906, or the month just passed, shows that there has been a daily average of 9,195,667 gallons used per day.

Runaway Horse in East Florence.

Florence, Ala.—A runaway horse in East Florence came near causing the death of one of the occupants of the surrey, which he overturned near the Louisville and Nashville depot. The vehicle, occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Anderson and their two daughters, was overturned and one of the latter caught beneath it and dragged several yards. She was unconscious when extricated and had sustained a severe cut on the head. Mr. Anderson had a leg dislocated, and the other occupants of the surrey were slightly bruised.

Pleads for Her Husband.

Huntsville, Ala.—Mrs. George Palmer, the woman who was shot by her husband on Tuesday last, has had a quick recovery, and appeared in court in behalf of her husband. She begged that Palmer be admitted to bail, and the court allowed the defendant bond in the sum of $500. Mrs. Palmer was at first thought to be fatally wounded.

Burnett Appoints Hodges.

Gadsden, Ala.—Congressman Burnett has appointed Perceer Hodges, a son of W. T. Hodges, of Odenville, St. Clair county, a cadet to the naval academy at Annapolis. Mr. Burnett has had some trouble in filling the appointment on account of the rigid examination and physical tests.

Colonel Meeks and Wife Return.

Gadsden, Ala.—Col. W. W. Meeks, the veteran newspaper man of this city, and his wife have returned from Hot Springs, where they have been for some weeks for the benefit of Colonel Meeks' health, which was considerably improved by his stay at the well-known resort.

New Railroad Project.

Florence, Ala.—Agreements have been signed for the consolidation of the Wayne and Mineral Belt Belt railway, the latter absorbing the former. The line has been surveyed to the state line and the profiles have been completed. The estimates and specifications are now being prepared by the engineers, and as soon as they are completed they will be extended into Tennessee for a distance of ten or fifteen miles. When that is completed the contracts may be let and the road constructed for that distance.

Barbecue at Mt. Pinson.

Birmingham, Ala.—A monster picnic and barbecue, Confederate veterans' reunion and general gathering of citizens of the county was held at Mt. Pinson. Many veterans attended. Several hundred descendants of Confederate veterans were present, while a dozen and more candidates for state and county offices were on hand and several made speeches. It was one of the largest gatherings of the kind held in Jefferson county in many a day. Politics are warming up in Jefferson county.

Horse and Buggy Recovered.

Gadsden, Ala.—The valuable horse and buggy stolen from a local liveryman a few days ago were recovered at Eason Hill, Ga., just across the state line. Smith, who drove the rig away, was not caught. He had traded the horse for another and disposed of the buggy at Bowden Springs, Ga. The owner of the outfit here recovered his property without any trouble. Smith's new victims are hot on his trail and think they will catch him.

Italian Immigrants for Gadsden.

Gadsden, Ala.—The Southern Steel Company, of this city, has imported two carloads of Italian laborers to be used in the steel plant here. They arrived over the Southern railway and were taken to quarters at the plant. The colony included both men and women, and were secured through the state immigration bureau at New York.

Will Float Loan on Road.

Che Foo.—A Japanese official engineer passed through Che Fooon his way to Pekin with the intention, aided by Chinese officials, of enlisting Chinese support to a loan on the 500 miles of railway now operated by Japan in South Manchuria, and upon which it is proposed that Jacob H. Schiff, of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., will also float a loan of $150,000,000.

Cunard Line Rumored Sold.

Liverpool.—It is rumored that the Cunard line has sold, or is negotiating with the Hungarian government for the sale, of its vessels engaged in the Hungarian emigrant trade. No confirmation of the report is obtainable.

Killed From Ambush.

Fort Worth, Tex.—A special from Muskogee, I. T., says: Ben Griffin was shot from ambush and killed and Frank Brown wounded near Tamans, a small town a few miles from this place, by Will Robinson. Jealousy, it is stated, prompted the deed. Robinson escaped.

German Peril is Imaginary.

Rio de Janeiro.—President-elect Penna, who is touring Southern Brazil, in a speech at Santa Catherin declared that the alleged German peril was imaginary, and that nowhere were there better citizens than German Brazilians. He cited the case of Dr. Lauero Mueller, minister of industries and public works, as an illustration of a patriotic Brazilian, though one of the German parents.

The Authorities Believe His Penned Forgeries to Tune of Half a Million.

Chicago, Ill.—All theories that O. Stensland was the sole forger of $1,000,000 of crooked notes in looted Milwaukee Avenue Bank has been smashed.

The authorities now believe that Cashier Hering's hand penned the signatures to over $500,000 worth of crooked paper. A bogus note for 000, with the name of M. A. Labuy attached to it, was discovered. When confronted with the signature and charged with its execution Hering became embarrassed. This was late in the afternoon, and when the eighty inquisition came to an end moral certainty had taken the place of suspicion in the minds of officers of the law.

Five years ago Hering fell in Stensland's grip. He had alleged guilty knowledge of the theft of $50,000 by the latter in the saving department and in fact is said to have participated in the loot.

The discovery of new trails of crookedness running through the ruined bank led the state attorney to summon peremptorily three of the principal directors in the affairs of the institution. They were called upon to explain conditions which indicate that another line of robberies was being carried on independently of Stensland's own gigantic swindle. The directors who responded to the summons were Frank R. Crane and Martin Kirkeby. An officer was sent for M. A. Labuy, another director, but he could not be located.

Bag Seventeen Rebels.

Panama.—The police captured seventeen Colombians, former revolutionary generals, on the charge of conspiracy against high national authorities. The prisoners during the revolution of distinguished themselves by their depredations in the interior of the isthmus. A Mexican named Ruiz Sandoval also was taken into custody. All the men arrested had recently arrived in Panama.

Secretary Arias refuses to furnish any details of the plot, but it is rumored that some of the members of the Panaman liberal party are implicated. The prisoners will be deported as pernicious foreigners.

All danger seems to be passed. The conditions here are normal, the general public not being aware that the authorities have captured the plotters. It is asserted that if the conspirators had been successful it might have resulted in serious consequences to the republic of Panama.

Clerk Stole Fortune.

New York.—Wheelock N. Harvey, the 19-year-old clerk and messenger of the First National Bank in this city, who about two months ago fled with $200,000 worth of non-negotiable securities and about $1,000 in cash and checks, was sentenced to an indeterminate period at the Elmira reformatory. The prisoner pleaded guilty to a charge of grand larceny. A few days after Harvey left the city the securities he had taken were returned to the bank from Washington. About a month ago Harvey was arrested in Texas.

Saves Lost Cotton.

Washington, D. C.—It is estimated that at least two million bales of cotton are lost throughout the south every year because of scattered cotton left in the field by the pickers. A machine has been invented, called a cotton separator, which will save nearly all this loss. It remains to be tested, however.

It is claimed for it that the entire boll can be saved by this machine, grinding and feeding it to cattle, which will be of great value to the cotton growers. The separator uses a set of saws operated by a pneumatic system.

Consider Armed Revolt Useless.

Kharkov.—The employes of the railways, tramways and a number of important factories struck for three hours and held a meeting, at which it was decided to be useless to attempt an armed revolt at the present time owing to the loyalty of the troops. Immediately after this the men returned to work. There were several collisions with the troops during the day, but no casualties resulted.

Morgan, is remembered as one of the bravest, most able, most statesmanlike speeches ever delivered before that distinguished body. The emotions aroused by this resolution stirred the convention to the core, and produced a scene the like of which has rarely been witnessed in an Alabama convention. His speech before the state convention, as chairman of the state executive committee, in calling the convention to order in 1898, for the purity of the ballot and for a constitutional convention, produced at the time a profound and lasting impression throughout the state. Among other things, he said: "If the party is to continue to merit the confidence of the people of the state, or of the country, it must stand for something constructive, and not merely for something that is recognized as destructive to the welfare, the honor and the glory of the commonwealth."

His speech before the state convention of 1900, in advocacy of a resolution declaring for a constitutional convention, swept the convention, and caused the unanimous passage of the resolution endorsing it.

In 1901 Mr. Knox was unanimously elected president of the constitutional convention, and to his untiring efforts and great ability is due, in large measure, the success which attended its proceedings. Perhaps nothing in the history of the state has tended more strongly to promote its moral and material welfare than the work of that convention. The suffrage plan adopted therein has rescued the state from the menace of the negro vote, and has established white supremacy by law. In one of the ablest speeches delivered in the convention, Mr. Knox supported the majority report of the committee on suffrage, which was finally adopted by an almost unanimous vote. So greatly impressed was the constitutional convention of the state of Virginia, then in session, with this speech, that it was paid the unusual compliment of being read in full from the clerk's desk, and, by a vote of that convention, ordered spread upon its records. So strongly did this argument appeal to the Virginia convention, that it afterwards adopted substantially the Alabama plan of suffrage reform.

Since the constitutional convention went into history, Mr. Knox has repeatedly taken the stump in behalf of Democratic principles and Democratic supremacy in this state. He has been an active and earnest worker in the party ranks since his majority, and has never allowed any personal considerations to interfere with his work for, and his interest in, the affairs of the party and the state.

In 1884 he married Miss Carrie McClure, of Lewisburg, Tenn., a woman of culture and great personal magnetism. Mr. Knox is a member of the Presbyterian church, takes an active but modest part in all things connected therewith, and gives liberally to every good cause. He is a useful man to his community, to his party and, to his state. His labors in their behalf have been untiring and effective.

Mr. Knox is now a candidate for Alternate United States Senator, under the plan adopted by the Democratic state executive committee, and his friends feel absolutely confident of his success.—Anniston Evening Star, July 31, 1906.

It is claimed by a medical authority that the wavering of an incandescent globe, the spluttering brightness of the arc light, and the glaring white of the vacuum tube are the agencies which already have made the Americans a "spectacled and blinking nation."

Some interesting experiments have been made to ascertain which woods last the longest. It was found that birch and aspen decayed in three years, willow and chestnut in four years, and elm and ash in seven years. Oak, Scottish fir and Weymouth pine decayed to the depth of half an inch in seven years; larch and juniper were uninjured at the end of seven years.

The medicinal qualities of pure olive oil are numerous and are becoming better known day by day. A teaspoonful taken after each meal will relieve constipation and dyspepsia. Mixed with an equal part of lime water it is invaluable for burns. Poured into the eye it will remove any foreign substance lodged there. It is a sure cure for hang-nails; is good for chapped hands; is excellent rubbed over the whole body after taking a bath, and is beneficial for use in massaging a dry scalp.

Practical Side of Orphan Asylums.

This asylum, as in the case of others, goes to work in a practical way to save its youngsters from the results of their early training at as small an expense as is decently possible. Their fundamental ideas are built upon the manual training school systems, which cover the practical industries.

For instance, in this one orphanage over 1500 shoes were made during the past year by the shoemaker and his forty boy assistants. Incidentally, after working hours, the same teacher instructed his flock in a cornet band, which on festal occasions delights an appreciative audience.

It runs like fiction to note that the baker and his ten boys bake all of the bread and rolls used in the asylum, and that the tailor, with seventy boys, made 1830 pairs of trousers, 1555 coats, 3700 caps and 3000 suspenders and other articles.

In the dining room some of the older girls wait on the table, while below the kitchen presents another evidence of the work of young hands. The excellence of this latter department suggests the thought that in its work lies the solution of the servant girl problem, for each pupil is put through an exact training in preparing the food and serving it.—Luellen Teters, in Metropolitan Magazine.

Alley Slums in District of Columbia.

There are about 320,000 people in the District of Columbia; over 60,000 of them live outside of the old city of Washington (which now has no legal existence, being merged in the District of Columbia), in a large number of small towns and villages scattered over the hills and valleys of the territory. About one-third of the population is colored—the largest number of colored people gathered in any place in the world; about one-fourth of the population is very poor—poorer than most poor people elsewhere in the United States; there is much abject poverty. This had had much to do with the deplorable condition of a considerable portion of the population which lives in what are called alley slums, where about 19,000 people reside; unable to pay more than a few dollars a month rent, they have had to put up with very poor quarters, including a number of buildings that ought to be renovated or destroyed for sanitary reasons.—The Outlook.

THE PULPIT.

AN ELOQUENT SUNDAY SERMON BY REV. I. W. HENDERSON.

Subject: The Christ Life.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Preaching at the Irving Square Presbyterian Church on the theme, "The Christ Life," the Rev. I. W. Henderson, pastor, took as his text Philippians 1:21: "For me to live is Christ." He said in the course of his sermon:

It is my desire to convey to your minds and to press lastingly upon your hearts some homely, yet helpful, truths relative to the Christ life. Persuaded of the similarity of your cares, trials, difficulties, problems, to my own, and recognizing the common needs of all men, I would talk to you about this text.

Horace, the old Roman poet, sings the praises of him to whom it is sweet and honorable to die for his country. I bring to you from the Book of Books no note of death, but a psalm of life. "For me to live is Christ," and to pass beyond the veil is but to enter into life more abundant." Thus says Paul. For him and for us there is no death. To live the Christ life here is to dwell within the glory of His presence there. "For me to live is Christ"—a plan of self-dedication to His service here, an earnest of our entrance into joy eternal there. "For apart from Me ye can do nothing," saith the Lord.

St. Paul, the most strenuous of Christians, epitomizes the Christian life in these words to the church at Philippi. His utterance states the sum and substances of the complete spiritual life. Our aim and our pleasure it should be, as it is our duty, as men and women who love our Lord, to so live, that men, looking upon us, may view in us the risen Christ.

The text presents to our minds a fourfold thought. Broadly speaking we may say that men have four relations in this life—to God, to society, to the home and to themselves. To set forth the same thought differently: Men have spiritual, civil, domestic and personal duties. Relation might be multiplied upon relation; duty upon duty could be indefinitely remarked. But that would be to suggest subdivisions rather than fundamentals. Indeed, I am cognizant that the moral duty to the home may easily be included under the head of social relations. But for the purpose of the moment we will resolve the ethics of the Christ life into the aforementioned divisions.

The first, the greatest, the noblest imperative in the life of the man who desires to conform to the pattern of the true Christ life, who wishes to make the words of Paul his motto for right living, is to love and to serve and obey our Heavenly Father. I may say that the whole duty of man is bound up in this declaration. For, Christianly speaking, there is no department of life into which the service of our God does not enter. Loyalty to God is the basis of all purest living and highest thinking. To be true to the Father is to be loyal to society and strong for self. We may not be true to God and untrue to the social, civil and domestic conditions with which the mere fact of life confronts us.

"The earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof," sings the psalmist. To be a traitor to the world is to be craven toward the Maker. We may not praise God with our lips and disobey Him in our every act. Our words, honeyed though they be, will count naught for us unto righteousness. The test of fealty is in action. We must measure true to the ideals that we preach. Prayer and praise are worthy, but they are not service. Prayer pleases God and it strengthens us. Praise, no doubt, makes joy among the angels who surround the throne. But it is the service which does things; the prayer which resolves itself into action; the praise that is founded upon the knowledge of a task, through His grace, well done, which makes most for pleasure and for joy in the heart of our King.

The Christ was true to God and to man and to self. The happiness of His Father's universe was His hope and care. To His home, to His neighbors, to His country, to all trusts, the Saviour was faithful. He had an eye singly toward holy and hallowing service. Preaching a gospel of life, He lived a life of love.

And so, to be like Christ we must live like Christ. His hopes must be our hopes; His pleasures must be our pleasures. The motive in His life must be the force which, in our lives, will make for goodness and godliness. And godliness is but goodness raised to infinity.

As the Christ was, so must the Christian be, truly spiritual. His guide and his guard must be the Comforter who cometh from above. Divinity, deep down in his heart, will be the power and the mainspring in his life.

Christianity is pure politics, clean business methods, sturdy honesty and noble purpose, all rolled into one. A clear conscience means a brave ballot; and, conversely, a dirty ballot means a smeared soul. Upright business methods earn their own reward; perhaps not in undeserved dividends and wrongly divided or diverted profits, but in happiness of heart. Honesty is but a step toward holiness. Nobility and sincerity are mighty forces. And these facts the civic and the business worlds are recognizing more and more. Dishonesty is a bad asset; and the Christian man, who stands four square to the world upon the rock Christ Jesus, is to have the call. Time-serving politicians may scoff; those who define character in the terms of preferred stock, and who prefer gold to goodness, may continue to misjudge what is highest in life; sin may seem still to have the stranglehold upon the world; Christians may stumble, yea fall, upon the King's highway, be derelict to duty and to faith, may imitate poor, forewarned Peter and deny the Christ, but the eternal principles of individual and of social righteousness are bound to win.

But while many of us are, through the grace of God, enabled to approximate righteousness in our wider social relations, there are but few of us who are Christlike in the home life. I have sinned must be our plea; for pardon must be our prayer. A renewed life must be our resolution, that Christ may be our portion.

The gross sins of the believing Christian are, largely, not those of immense or awful delinquency. Most of us managed to keep out of prison. Few of us have to stand for trial upon charges of overt crime. Most of us, by the mercy of God, are guiltless of the sins which shock the senses. The defiling sins of the Christian in his home life are what we are likely to term the weaknesses of life. For you and for me, petty faults are oftentimes the greatest sins. With us the proneness to say the unkind word; think the unworthy thought; to do the hard act or to speak the stern sentiment; to give the rein to anger or to let passion rule; these are the most detrimental and defiling sins. Many a mother who would give up life itself for the child who nestled at her breast; many a father who not only would, but does, work long and weary hours for the loved ones of his home and hearth; many such a man and many such a woman finds the love of those most dear to them is lost and lost to them perhaps forever, because of un-Christian uncharitableness in the home.

"For me to live is Christ," you say. But do you live the life? Are you thoughtless of the rights of others? Are you self-centred rather than world loving? Are you heedless of the needs of men? These are minor things in life; these are the trifles. But to the soul that is growing up toward God, and out toward men, and that is spreading roots through the eternities, they spell either failure or success. As has been said, "success is made up of trifles and success is no trifle."

Selfishness, hastiness, inconsiderateness, all these are the sins which weight the soul. For those of us who have laid our hearts at the feet of Christ, they are the sins which keep us from attainment unto spiritual perfection and the strength of the Saviour. They are the cancers which gnaw at the vitals of the man spiritual, and which consume the very life's blood. Leaving behind these lesser sins we may grow into the stature of the Son of God. Putting meanness and pettiness behind us we may become like Him who was in all things pure. But only as we exclude the smallnesses of life from our natures do we grow.

But we must always remember that we have a duty to self as well as to society and to the Saviour. Here, again, duty to God presupposes and implies a right relation with self. We cannot be true to God and untrue to self. Right relations with God preclude an evil inner life. "To thine own self be true," the poet sings, "and it must follow, as the night the day, thou canst not then be false to any man." He might have said, with equal surety, that loyalty to God precludes disloyalty to man and to self. Trueness to self implies Christianly speaking, that the man is in harmony with mankind and with God.

Trueness to the highest and holiest motives and ideals that are within us brings greatest happiness and peace. Right thoughts produce and conserve a right life. High thinking is a tonic. Low thinking breeds disease. Cleanness of heart means clearness of head. To grovel spiritually is to declare one's self to be a sloven mentally. We must keep ourselves purified of unwholesomeness if we would attain the heights where holy men dwell.

Education is not salvation. Knowledge is power and should induce purity. But the pure in heart—mind you, not the strong in mental force—the pure in heart alone see God. The vile of soul are always in the depths of hell, and all the wisdom of all the ages could not pull them out.

A clean heart fits a man for life's labors. We cannot submit ourselves to the rule of our evil passions if we would escape ruin. "Our bodies are good servants, but poor masters," is an apt and a wise saying. The Christ was a power, because He had a healthy mind and a pure heart. To Him evil was hateful. For Him love was the law and the light of the world. For God is love.

To be pure, to be gentle, to be noble, to think kindly and to act worthily, to be right toward man and in the sight of God, to be growing constantly into God-likeness, that is to be truly Christlike. And to those of us alone who are trying, as Channing has said, "to let the spiritual, unbidden and unconscious grow up through the common," who are living nearest to the source of all love and of all life, is it given to say, with very truth, "For me to live is Christ."

Seeds That Grew, Seeds That Didn't.

"I have noticed that when the green leaves have appeared, and have lifted themselves a little above the soil, it often happens that a bit of soil adheres to them and seem to weight them. But, as the plants go on growing, they cast off these specks of earth and push on valiantly. Some of my seed must have been dead, for though they had abundant time for sprouting, they did not all appear; they lay there inertly amid the earth.

"Which things have been a kind of a parable to me. Though the living seeds in their growing have carried on their leaves some of the soil as they grow they are flinging it off, while the dead seeds are helpless under the earth. A Christian may be carrying some mean and unseemly earthliness. But if he be really athrill with the new life and growing, he will be quite sure to slough it off in time. Let me be patient with him and give him a chance. God does. The hopeful fact is that he is alive and growing. Dead seeds are powerless. So are dead souls."—Dr. Wayland Hoyt.

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR AUGUST 19.

Subject: The Judge, the Pharisee and the Publican, Luke xviii., 1-14—Golden Text, Luke xviii., 13—Topic: Effective Prayer.

I. The judge and the widow (vs. 1-8). 1. "Spake a parable." In response to a question of the Pharisees as to when the kingdom of God should come Jesus gave them warnings and instruction as to the coming, and especially as to the need of being always prepared (17:20-37), and naturally turns to the subject of prayer as a means of preparation. "Men ought." It is their "duty" to do this. "Always to pray." The habit of prayer in private, in the family and in public should be cultivated. "Not to faint." Not to grow weary and discouraged because of the delay of the answer. Why must prayer be importunate? 1. Not because of God's unwillingness to answer. 2. To cherish and cultivate our faith. 3. To intensify our desire to receive. Prayer that is not persevering indicates a lack of faith.

2. "A judge." According to Deut. 16:18, Israel must have in all the gates of the city judges, who were under obligation to administer justice, without respect of persons. See Exod. 23:6-9; Lev. 19:15. "Feared not God—man." He was unprincipled and cared for no one but himself. 3. "A widow." A widow, without influence and unable to bribe, had little to hope from a wicked judge. "Avenge." The original means "to vindicate one's right." The rights of this widow were interfered with and she was asking the judge for protection. The widow is often taken as a representation of the church after Christ's death.

4, 5. "For a while." These verses show the abandoned character of the judge referred to. 6. "The Lord." That is, Jesus. 7. "Shall not God." We are not to suppose that the character of God is at all represented by this judge. The great truth which our Saviour designed to teach is that "men ought always to pray, and not to faint." The application of the parable may be made by contrast. 1. God is not compared to the unjust judge, but contrasted with him. If a hard-hearted, wicked judge, who cared for neither God nor man, but only for himself and his own interests, would yet grant justice on account of the perseverance of the widow, how infinitely more readily will God give us the help we need. 2. And if the unjust judge does this for a poor widow, in whom he has no interest, how much more will our Father grant the prayers of His own children. 3. And if the unjust judge will do it for the sake of deliverance from some vexation in common life, how much more will God save His children from their adversaries.

8. "Speedily." Suddenly, unexpectedly. "Son of man cometh." Whedon thinks this entire parable has reference to the second coming of Christ. He says: The church is a widow in Christ's absence; she has an oppressive adversary, being the persecuting world, or the devil. "Faith." This word is sometimes taken to denote the whole of true religion.

II. The Pharisee's prayer (vs. 9-12). 9. "Trusted in themselves." Jesus now proceeds to show another reason why many prayers are not answered. The Pharisees did not trust to God, or the Messiah for righteousness, but in their own works. They vainly supposed they had themselves complied with the demands of the law of God. "Despised others." Disdained, treated them with contempt.

10. "Two men." Both Jews. Two extreme cases are here chosen—a rigid, exclusive, self-satisfied member of the religious society of Israel; and a Jewish officer of the hated Roman government.

11. "Pharisee stood." The Jews were accustomed to pray standing. The Pharisee went to the temple to pray, because it was a public place, and therefore he would have many eyes on him. "I thank Thee." His prayer is a thanking, his thanking is a boasting, not of God but alone of himself. At first he boldly contrasts himself with all men considering himself better than they. "Extortioners." Selfish, greedy men who take away the goods of others by force and violence. "Unjust." Those who are unfair and dishonest in their dealings. 12. "I fast," etc. The law required but one fast day in the year, the day of Atonement (Lev. 16:29). "Tithes." A tenth. "Of all that I possess." Rather of all that I require. See Revised Version. He was clothed with phylacteries and fringes, not with humility. He felt no need of confessing sins.

III. The publican's prayer (vs. 13, 14). 13. "Publican." One employed as collector of the Roman revenue. It was the basest of all livelihoods. He felt that he was a sinner, and shame and sorrow caused him to look down. It was usually the custom to pray with uplifted hands, and with look turned toward heaven (1 Tim. 2:8; Psa. 123:1, 2). "Smote—breast." A token of anguish and self-reproach. I am a sinner and cannot be saved but in Thy way.

14. "Justified." His sins were blotted out, and he was accepted. "That exalteth himself." Boasts of his own goodness. "Abased." Shall be brought to shame. "That humbleth himself." By confessing his sin and unworthiness, and pleading for mercy from God. "Exalted." Lifted up from the depths of sin, and made an heir of God. From sorrow he is admitted into the realm of praise.

Women Suffragists End Sessions.

Copenhagen.—The sessions of the conference of the International League of Women Suffragists have terminated, but there will be an executive meeting to settle the unfinished business. It has been decided to publish a paper in London, to be called the International Record of Woman Suffrage. By royal invitation the delegates to the conference visited Rosenborg castle.

Democratic Primary Election

Acting under instructions of a mass meeting of the people of Chilton county, held at the court House, Clanton, Saturday, July 21, 1906, we, the Democratic Executive Committee of Chilton county, hereby order a Primary Election of the white voters of Chilton county to be held at the several voting places in the county, on for the purpose of nominating a Representative in the Legislature, a Sheriff, one Commissioner for the First District of Chilton county, and one Commissioner for the Second District of said county, one Executive Committeeman from each Beat, and six Delegates to the State Democratic Convention, Sept. 10, 1906.

All qualified white voters, irrespective of any and all previous political affiliations, are cordially invited to participate in said primary election.

J. C. DENNIS, Chairman.

Fifteenth Senatorial Primary

A primary election is hereby called for the purpose of nominating a Democratic candidate for Senator from the Fifteenth Senatorial District of Alabama, to be held on the 27th day of August, 1906, under the rules and regulations already adopted for the holding of State and County primaries.

Candidates for said office will be voted for on the county tickets and the candidate receiving a plurality of the votes cast will be declared the nominee.

J. C. DENNIS, Chairman.
L. N. BOWDEN, Secretary.

At a meeting of the Senatorial Democratic Executive Committee of the Fifteenth Senatorial District, held at Clanton on the 21st day of July, 1906, J. C. Dennis of Clanton, Chilton county, was elected chairman and R. E. Bowden of Shelby, was elected secretary.

The following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, That a primary election be held on August 27, 1906, for the nomination of a candidate for State Senator from the Fifteenth Senatorial District under the rules and regulations adopted for the holding of State and County primaries on said day; and that names to be voted for be placed on the County ballot in the respective counties.

Resolved, That a plurality of the votes cast shall nominate.

Resolved, That each candidate for said office be assessed fifteen dollars for the expense of said call and election.

Resolved, That the Chairman shall certify to the County Chairman the names of candidates entitled to be voted for at said primary.

The meeting adjourned subject to the call of the Chairman.

J. C. DENNIS, Chairman.
R. E. BOWDEN, Secretary.

B. B. COMER AT CLANTON.

On Tuesday, at the court house, Mr. B B. Comer made an excellent speech which was well received by the audience of about 150.

Mr. Comer is a favorite in Chilton county and will poll a large vote.

He was preceded by Mr. H. C. Compton, candidate for Associate Railroad Commissioner, who made a capital speech of about an hour's duration.

Hon. S. M. Adams concluded an excellent morning's work with a short address, which was well received.

Messrs. Comer and Compton then left for Verbena, where they were well received.

On Monday night they addressed an excellent meeting at Thorsby.

W. Y. ATCHISON.

With much pleasure we present the name of Mr. W. Y. Atchison, of Maplesville, as a candidate for nomination of Commissioner from the second district. He is a gentle man of whom any district may be proud, and will, if nominated and elected, reflect much credit upon the county. Thoroughly conversant with the affairs of the county. Mr. Atchison will put new life into the Commissioners' court, and we earnestly reccommeud him to the voters of the county.

THOMAS HARRISON.

For many years Mr. Thomas Harrison has been a leading man in Beat 2, keeping posted not only on the requirements, of his beat, but also upon the affairs of the whole county. Such a man is preeminently qualified for commissioner, thorougly alive to the needs of his constituents, and well acquainted with public affairs, he will bring to bear a learned intelligence upon the court of county commissioners. Mr. Harrison will, if nominated and elected, reflect much credit upon the county.

HON EMMET O'NEAL.

It is a significant fact that Hon. Emmet O'Neal is the only candidate for Lieut. Gov. who has taken the stump and made an active and agressive campaign for rate reform. No speeches on this subject have been more logical, convincing or eloquent than those delivered by Mr. O'Neal. The friends of this great movement for reform owe him a debt of gratitude for his fearless advocacy of their cause and are rallying to his support in all parts of Alabama.

A native of Alabama, a Democrat true and tried, with an established reputation for ability and professional attainment of the highest order, and with a character above reproach, his friends are gratified to know that the news from all parts of the state show beyond question that he will be nominated by an overwhelming majority for the office of Lieutenant Governor in the approaching primary.—Florence Times.

JUST ONE FARMER.

It is not often that the people of Alabama choose farmers to congress or to the senate. At present every member of congress is a lawyer, except Mr. Bankhead, the senior member. Both the senators are lawyers.

Of the candidates for the next congress all are lawyers except Captain Hobson, the nominee in the Sixth District, and Percy Clark, a candidate for the Fourth District.

Of the candidates for the Senate, regular and alternate all are lawyers except Captain Baukhead. who is a farmer. He is the only farmer candidate for any of the places at Washington.

While Captain Bankhead has been in public life for many years, he has always been a farmer. He has his home on his farm and spent the months there between the sessions of congress. Not only is he a farmer, but he raises good crops every year and has always done so.

It is remarkable that only one man has been able to maintain himself as a statesman in congress from Alabama for twenty years, who is a farmer, and has always been a farmer. If Mr. Bankhead goes to the senate he will be the first farmer senator. His distinguished services have made him conspicious, and no man, lawyer or business man surpasses him in services.—The Birmingham Ledger.

Poverty is not a crime morally, but it is matrimonially.

The Power of the Traffic Manager.

Somebody said that the men who make railroad rates hold the well-being of the United States in the hollows of their hands. They can build up and tear down industries, populate and devastate communities make business enterprise flourish or reduce it to ignominious failure as best suits their purposes—these are the powers that have been attributed to them in the discussion which during the past few months has undertaken to set before the country the intricate relations between our people and the agencies that furnish them transportation. But what manner of men these are, and how they really apply their power day by day, no one has told.

The railroad traffic manager must be to the manner born in his profession; but all the natural equipment is of no use to him without the schooling of hard experience, the higher training of well-sustained responsibility. The skill his task requires might be compared with that of the great physician, whose diagnosis is the result of so many subtle, instinctive turns of judgment that he could not explain its precision. The two men select their method of treatment and apply their remedies with the same sureness and precision.—From "The Traffic and the Shipper" by Phillip S. Fiske, in the American Monthly Review of Reviews for August.

Misses Ada Rasco and Maud Rasberrya attended church at Isabella, on the second Sunday.

Bro. Honeycut preached for us again last first Sunday. We enjoyed his discourse very much.

The following were visitors at our Sunday School: Messrs Atchinson, Lovelady and Kincaid.

Mr. Percy Freeman is spending awhile in Birmingham.

We are gettjng along nicely with our Sunday school. We do not always have a large crowd, but we always enjoy the service. I love the Sunday school, and am glad that I have had the privilege since a small child attend it. The Sunday school is a great work. It is where the spirituul lives of our boys and girls are moulded. We get from the Sunday school blessings which can come from no other source. Then why is it that some are negligent of this great work?

A REMARKABLE SKIN BEAUTIFIER.

Health, Beauty and a Clear, Complexion Through Laxakola Tonic Tablets.

"In all the years we have been in business," say Florence Drug co., "we do not recall ever selling anything that has aroused so much interest among our lady customers, and not a day passes but we hear of some one greatly benifitted through using Laxakola Tonic Tablets," Clanton ladies who have been troubled with pimples, blotches, moth spots and other skin affections, now pride themselves on the fresh, healthy complexion obtained through using this mild tonic laxative.

"And it is not surprising. They are different from anything you ever heard of." Laxative Tonic Tablets are a perfect combination of dandelion, cascarin and other laxative remedies known, to have a peculiar and beneficial influence on the skin. They open the pores, enrich the blood, stimulate the liver, freshen the skin, and cure chronic constipation by toning up the intestines and encouraging the natural action of the bowels. Once tried they inspire perfect confidence and Florence Drug Co. return your quarter if you are disapointed.

Letter to B. H. Duke.

Clanton, Ala.

Dear Sir: Mr, ——— President of a cotton mill at Union, S. C.—he don't want to see his name in print—had two offers of 500 gallons of paint: $1.30 and $1.25. Took the $1.25 and got skinned. He'd have got three quarters skinned if he'd taken the other.

The $1.30 was full gallon; the $1.25 was 18% short. The full measure paint was adulterated 40%. the short measure paint was adulterated 4 %, besides benzine in the oil, don't know how much.

Devoe lead and zinc wasn't sold in the town then.

It don't pay to monkey with paint.

Devoe cost less than any of 'em; not by the gallon, of course, but by the house and year. That's how to reckon it. Go by the name.

Yours truly,
F. W DEVOE & Co.

THE LAST TENANT.

Gone are the tenants of that lonely hall,
Blithe Youth and lovely Hope of yesterday,
And careless Joy went caroling away;
And Silence hung its banner on the wall.
From lagging morn till eve the slow hours crawl,
And sink, reluctant, to the tomb of night;
The stars diffuse a faint, uncertain light,
And the moon flames out—night's mournful seneschal!
Deserted, dim, are all the casements lone;
Unheeded swings the rank and spreading grass;
There comes no sound without of sigh or groan;
There goes no sound without of feet that pass . . .
Yet, in a chamber lone, where ivies cling,
Sits one within, named Love, remembering.
—Evelyn Phinney, in the Atlantic.

By Mary E. Wilkins.

"Who left the pantry door open?" said Mistress Hapgood, sternly.

She stood before them straight and tall in her indigo blue petticoat and short gown, with her black hair rolled back under a tidy cap, and her black eyes flashing. Her cheeks were as red as roses. Mistress Hapgood was a handsome woman. The children, five of them—Priscilla being the oldest—looked up at her with apprehension. Somebody had left the pantry door open, and the cat got in and helped herself to a large piece of sparerib; it had happened several times before this, and now a severe penalty was to be the consequence.

"Who left the pantry door open?" repeated Mistress Hapgood. "The one that did must go without supper to-night."

The children looked at each other. Uncle Silas and Aunt Prudence Beals and two cousins were to sup with them that night, and there would be Johnny-cake toast made with cream, plum sauce, and pound cake for supper. It was a good deal to forego. Mistress Hapgood stood waiting, and the great white cat that had made all this trouble sat on the hearth washing her face. She had been shoved out with a broom, but had walked in again.

At last Nancy, the youngest girl, broke the silence.

"I saw Thomas coming out of the pantry," said she.

Thomas, who was the very youngest of all, broke into a loud wail, and the tears rolled down his fat baby cheeks.

"I didn't leave 'ee door open," he sobbed. "I didn't!"

"What did you go into the pantry at all for?" queried his mother with severity.

But Thomas only dipped his double chin into his pinafore and sobbed harder than ever.

"Answer me!" repeated his mother, in a commanding tone.

Thomas choked out a word which Nancy interpreted.

"He says he went into the pantry after a pancake," said she.

"Thomas, go and stand in the corner," said Mistress Hapgood.

And little Thomas, still lifting up his voice, trudged across to the conner, and settled himself therein, with a teary face, to the wall.

"Now," said Mistress Hapgood, "when did you see Thomas go into the pantry?"

"This forenoon," answered Nancy, with a dubious look.

"This forenoon," repeated her mother. "Haven't you more sense than that, child? The whole family has been in since then. Now, stand in a row."

The Hapgood children obediently formed themselves into a line in front of the hearth.

"Now, Priscilla," said Mistress Hapgood, "did you leave the pantry door open?"

"No, ma'am," answered Priscilla, after a little hesitation. Her fair, sober face had a troubled look.

"Polly, did you leave the pantry door open?"

"No, ma'am."

"Isaac, did you?"

"No, ma'am."

"Nancy?"

"No, ma'am."

"Thomas, did you leave the pantry door open?"

"N—o, m—a'm!" wailed Thomas from his corner.

And all the Hapgood children had denied leaving the pantry door open.

The frown on Mistress Hapgood's face deepened.

"One of you left the pantry door open," said she. "There is no one else who could have done it. I have been away and you children were alone in the house. One of you is telling a wicked fib."

There was a dead silence. The children stole inquiring glances at each other, and rolled fearful eyes in their mother's direction.

"Very well," continued Mistress Hapgood, "if one cannot confess, all must suffer. You must all go without your supper."

Then Thomas' wail deepened, and some of the others joined in. Priscilla stood still looking at them. Mistress Hapgood, with her lips compressed and stepping very firmly, brought out the pound-cake, and cut it into squares, and portioned out the plum sauce. The thin Johnny-cakes were baking before the fire.

Presently Priscilla went up to her mother, and pulled her indigo gown softly.

"Mother!" she said.

"What is it?" asked her mother, shortly.

"I went into the pantry this afternoon. I might have left the door open."

"Don't you know whether you did or not?"

"I shouldn't wonder if I did," answered Priscilla, trembling.

Just then there was a noise out in the yard; the company had come.

"Well, you can go without your supper then," said her mother, hurriedly. "And you deserve a greater punishment for not telling me before."

While the other children sat at the table with their elders, and ate the delicious Johnny-cake toast, the poundcake and the plum sauce, Priscilla sat in the corner and knitted on a blue yarn stocking. Her uncle and aunt, and cousins, and her father, Captain, had all been informed of the reason; and Priscilla hung her head over the stocking, and could scarcely see the stitches through her tears.

They were almost through supper when Grandmother Elliot, Mistress Hapgood's mother, came in. She lived just across the yard. She spoke to them all; then she looked sharply at Priscilla.

"What has the child done?" asked she.

Mistress Hapgood related the story briefly. Grandmother Elliot looked surprised.

"Priscilla did not leave the door open," she said. "I came over this afternoon after your balm of Gilead bottle. Adoniram cut his thumb, and I left the door open on purpose; it was smoky in there, and I was afraid it would make your new butter taste. I did not think of the cat. All the children were playing over in the field."

Everybody looked at Priscilla. Then her father spoke up, and he could not have spoken more sternly to the soldiers whom he commanded.

"What does this mean, Priscilla?" said he.

Priscilla bent her face quite down to the blue yarn stockings and wept.

"Did you know that you did not leave the pantry door open?" he continued.

"Yes—sir," gasped Priscilla.

After the company had gone her father proceeded to deal with her after the code of his day, and in accordance with his own convictions. He took down the birch rod, with which all the children were acquainted, and he bade Priscilla stand before him.

"I want you to remember, daughter," said Captain Hapgood, "that a falsehood is a falsehood, for whatever cause it may be told."

Then he brought down the birch rod several times over Priscilla's slender shoulders.

Priscilla covered her face with her apron and cried softly. Captain Hapgood, after he had put away the birch rod, went up to her and drew the apron gently away. He was not a man given to endearments, but he kissed her solemnly on her fair girlish forehead.

"The rod was for the falsehood, daughter," said Captain Hapgood; "and this is for thy kindness and self-sacrifice toward thy brothers and sisters."

Mistress Hapgood was bustling around the hearth. Presently she called Priscilla.

"Draw up to the table and have your supper, child," said she.

Mistress Hapgood had baked a fresh sheet of Johnny-cake that was thinner and browner than the others had been; she had skimmed more cream and dealt out a liberal dish of sauce. Priscilla sat up and partook. The taste of the food was very pleasant; her shoulder still tingled from the birch rod, and the distinction between the right and wrong of a doubtful action was quite plain to her mind.—Congregationalist and Christian World.

A Pet Wild Turkey.

In most communities there are certain persons who possess peculiar characteristics, habits and beliefs, and this is true of the long shore sportsman of the old mother State as of persons dwelling elsewhere.

Many of the old-time sportsmen still carry and use their muzzle-loading guns, which cannot be displaced by more modern arms. They usually manage to bag a good many birds and other game, and this is chiefly due, it is believed, to their knowledge of the habits of the game. They seldom go out without finding something.

A story is told of one gunner who—if any of the shot should fall from his hands while loading his gun—will at once return home and make no further effort to hunt that day, believing, as he says, that those lost were his luck shot, and it would be useless for him to continue the hunt.

Another, whom I call here "Captain Pete," is a sailor and all-'round sportsman. He loves to tell of his adventures with his dogs and gun, and is seldom seen without them. He tells many stories about the accuracy of Sweet Lips, his gun, and declares he can beat any man "a shooten for a turkey in the United States of Virginny."

On the occasion of a turkey hunt near the Rappahannock River, Captain Peter claims to have shot a forty-pound wild turkey for which he was offered $4 cash. The gray whiskers on the turkey's breast were eighteen inches long, and he had one wooden leg. Here Captain Pete gives a laugh that could be heard a half mile away. "Sar, he was the biggest turkey in the bunch of us, and four others besides, and all ate a sumptuous meal from one-half of his breast."

Uncle Pete says he cannot account for that one wooden leg unless that turkey has been previously owned by some one as a pet wild turkey.—Forest and Stream.

WHY DO BOYS LEAVE THE FARM?

What is known as the urban movement, the movement of people from the farms to the cities and towns, has long been one of the recognized perils of the country. It is an ancient danger. Men from the earliest period have drifted toward the cities. Aristotle's wisest remark was, perhaps, the observation that man was born to be a citizen, that is the denizen of and the active worker in a city. That also is what civilization means—the transforming of men into citizens. It was Paul's proud boast that he was the citizen of no mean city. There is no doubt that in our civilization and in our culture the city is the centre, the heart.

It was the genial Cowper's opinion that the country was the better place, for the quaint reason that "God made the country, and man made the town." A little common sense would have told him that it was precisely for this reason that man preferred the city. The usually wise Lowell also had a ridiculous notion on the subject. He wrote, "Before man made us citizens, great nature made us men." He forgot that until man had made himself a citizen he was only half a man, primitive, savage, barbaric. The city was and is absolutely necessary. It illustrates a great economic law, that of combination. Just as commerce must combine to achieve its highest and best results, so man must combine in order to realize himself, to attain the best of which he is possible.

work of developing man in its human hothouses; there is now some danger that the tendency of men to flock to the big towns will result in the impoverishment of many countries and in dertiment to the race. The cities, like all other receptacles, are limited. They cannot be made to contain more than their just measure, and in the overcrowded cities we see nature retracing her evolutionary processes, and denaturing men, making them anemic, degenerate, weaklings, without the red blood of a vigorous life, and sinking into decay. The cities can hold only their allotted share, and, after all, these must be supported by the country. The culture and the civilization of this day and of every other time rests and has rested upon the farm. The loss of a stout and prosperous farming class, as Goldsmith pointed out—though it had been observed before—"when once destroyed, can never be supplied." No country can be self-sustaining or therefore really prosperous, without independent, thrifty, prosperous farmers. The ideal condition would be one in which there were cities "crowded with culture"—Bostons, Athens, Parises—surrounded by gardens and farms; the cultured life of the metropolis of wealth and fashion and art, much of its best results reflected in the homes of independent planters, constituting but the flower of our civilization.

But, in the meanwhile, the boys are leaving the farms. Why? that is the question that L. H. Bailey, Director of the College of Agriculture of Cornell University, asks in the July Century magazine, and does not definitely answer. He tries to get the deserters from the ranks of the farm to answer it, but their reasons are not at all satisfactory. For instance, forty per cent. of them say that they left the farm because it was not remunerative. Seventeen per cent. replied that they left because the farmer is under "distinct social disabilities." One-fifth, or twenty per cent. offered as one reason for getting away from the farm the excessive hard work.

The investigator seems a little surprised by the result of his efforts. He concludes his article by saying: "I have no purpose at present to comment on the replies. . . . I shall be content if they challenge my reader."

The reasons assigned seem to us totally worthless. They may be sincere, and they may explain the abandonment of the farms by the boys who offer them, but they are not satisfactory in themselves, because they do not present the true condition.

Four boys out of every ten of the deserters for instance, give as the reason for their flight that the farm is not remunerative. Yet there never was a time when farming was so remunerative as it is to-day. It may not be remunerative on the rocky hillslopes of New England, where lie so many abandoned farms; but it is remunerative throughout the entire South, the West, and the Southwest. It pays well even in the somewhat crowded States of the North and Middle West. The prosperity of the South to-day rests firmly upon the cotton fields and the orchards and the truck gardens. There are planters in this State that makes incomes of $12,000 a year, clear profit, upon their farms. That means that the man who can do this is rich; he is more than prosperous. The farm-lands of the South bring in thousands of fortunes in each year's harvest. The seaboard is being transformed into a garden and is yielding independence and wealth to many thousands of planters. There is money in farming; the farm is remunerative—more remunerative than it ever was.

As to hard work, the farmer has a far easier time of it than the clerk in the store or the telegraph operator at his desk or than millions of boys and men and girls and women in the crowded cities. The nature of the work on the farm—the griminess of it, the hours of labor in the hot sun, the lowly kind of work that the boy on the farm has to do—this has more to do with driving him into the fancied paradise of the city than the hardness of the tasks on the farm. But the farm loses little by the desertion of those who are afraid of "hard work."

There is something to be said for the social disability of the boy on the farm. He is shut off from most society, and shut out of some. It is true that he has a social circle of his own; but if he be a bit ambitious and not content to wait until he wins opportunity, this condition will chafe him. Here, also, the farm-boy of the South has a distinct advantage over the farm-boy of the North. The farmer of the South is a tower of strength, and stands "four-square to all the winds that blow." He is second to nobody. He is the peer of the best. This is largely due to the old "aristocratic" system of the South, which had its foundations on the plantation. We have inherited good, clean, honorable traditions that dignify and exalt the calling of the farmer.

The boy should not leave the farm. He should own land as soon as possible and attain independence through his own labor. There is no other condition so pleasant, so promising, so gratifying to the temper and disposition and tastes of a healthy manhood as that of farming. It is the true life and calling of the "gentleman" in the broadest and best sense of that word. It is almost the only post in our complex civilization in which a man may be truly independent and enjoy in middle life and age leisure and comfort and happiness.

Don't leave the farm. Stick to it, and it will be the making of you, if you will do there your true part in the battle of life.—Columbia (S. C.) State.

A Wonderful Railroad in the Andes.

A brief digression may be permitted regarding past railway building in Peru because the subject bears on future construction. No engineering obstacles which are yet to be overcome in the Andes, anywhere from the tapering spurs in Central America to the rounded tops in Patagonia, equal those which were surmounted by Henry Meigs when he built the famous railway from Callao to Oroya, or rather when he constructed the most difficult sections, for he did not live to see the completion of the whole. The wonders of that line, incomparable in their scenic grandeur, with its infinity of switchbacks, tunnels, bridges, viaducts, sharp curves and grades, culminating in the Galera Tunnel, 15,665 feet above sea-level, show the marvels of which engineering genius is capable when backed with unlimited funds.—From "The Railways of the Future"—The Pan-American Railway, by Charles M. Pepper in Scribner's.

The Three Colonies.

The New Haven Colony was founded (1682) by a number of wealthy London families. They took the Bible for law, and only church members could vote. (2) The Connecticut Colony, proper, comprising Hartford, Wethersfield and Windsor, adopted a written constitution in which it agreed to give the right to vote to all free men. This was the first instance in all history of a written constitution framed by the people. (3) The Saybrook Colony was as first governed by the proprietors, but was afterwards sold to the Connecticut colony. This reduced the three colonies to two.

Frog to a Frog's Rescue.

One day a couple of my friends were sitting on the river bank when they heard the cry of a frog in distress. Following the direction from which the sound came, they discovered a snake in the act of swallowing a frog. Just then another frog, evidently attracted by the distressing cries of its mate in jeopardy, hopped up to the scene of action. For a moment it sat blinking at the enemy; then leaped forward, seized the snake by the neck and tugged it into the river. The water quickly poured between the snake's distended jaws and it was of course compelled to release its victim in order to escape drowning. This it promptly did, and the liberated frog swam away with its plucky mate, while the baffled snake wriggled as best it could to the shore.—Woman's Home Companion.

Discovery of Coffee.

Coffee was discovered in 1285 by a dervish named Hadji Omar, a native of the town of Mocha—hence the familiar name.

Hadji Omar, lost in an Arabian desert, was dying of hunger, when he discovered some small round berries. On trying to eat them he found, to his disgust, that they were extremely bitter.

Then he tried roasting them, and finally steeped a few thus roasted in water. Naturally, this was coffee, and, though of the worst description, so agreeable did Hadji Omar find it that as soon as he could make his way back to his native town he introduced his new drink to the wise men of the city, says Home Chat. So well pleased were they with it that the dervish was made a saint.

Mind and Muscle.

Influence of Former Upon the Latter Plainly

By Dr. W. R. C. Latson.

In all feats of skill the influence of the mind is To perform in thoroughly good style any difficult is absolutely necessary that the mind must be fre anxiety, or nervousness. I knew once, years ago, a been a bull fighter in Spain. During one of his of the sport I expressed my surprise that he should life. His reply was: "One day I was about to and I had a little creepy feeling of fear. Then I stopped for who feels fear is sure to be killed."

And it is equally true that the man who fears is heavily matter what the contest may be. Anxiety and nervousness are fear; and both are so powerful in their effect as to render it sible for one to perform perfectly any difficult or delicate feat man who is afraid or anxious or nervous is almost sure to fail.

All emotions when intense have a powerful effect upon the is plainly seen in the tension of the muscles, clinching of hands well as of the face in anger, in the spasmodic breathing of exci muscular weakness and trembling of fear, and in many other might be mentioned. Now, in feats of skill of whatever kind, ancing, juggling, marksmanship, tumbling or shot putting, just the right muscles must be used at just the right instant and right degree. When, however, the muscles are disturbed by citement, such delicate adjustment is impossible, and the probable failure.

The mental state most conducive to success in games of fident calmness. And by practice this state of mind may be made habit most valuable in all games of skill, even in that game of life.

Glasgow---A City Run Without "Gr

By Frederick C. Howe.

HERE was a town council without corruption—at least smile at such irregularities as disturb the Glasweg cil which knows no party politics and elected a Con succeed a Liberal as Lord Provost without a change cal complexion. Here, too, was a city which knows itself; which takes the merit system as a matter of without any law enforcing it; a city which keeps its office as long as they will stay or as long as they serve the their constituents; a city which makes its enterprises pay, and watches its finances as prudently as the most conservative bank city in which it is the ambition of every citizen to serve witho without return save in the approval of his fellows.

Here, too, is a city which knows no favor, no friendship, no the choice of its servants. "Wanted a Town Clerk. The Corporation gow," so the newspaper advertisement runs, "invites applications fice of Town Clerk, which is about to become vacant. The salary 000 a year." Here was the most important salaried office within the council, an office which combines the duties of the city solicitor all the clerical duties of the city, hunting for the man, much as a G looks for a lord mayor, or an American college or church searches dent or a minister. The corporation was offering its most influen the candidate from all Great Britain best qualified to fill it.

Here, too, is a city in which all citizens are united demanding service and securing it; a city in which the privileged few who own chise corporations in America and the unprivileged many who are job are united with the city rather than against it. For Glasgow franchises whose values run into the millions as a tempting treasure for.—Scribner's Magazine.

The Sahara Once Densely Popula

By Cyrus C. Adams.

IN studying the geological history of this region, Gau evidence that it was once rainless and was truly a gradual desiccation advancing from the Sudan. The of permanent drought and complete desert conditions came to an end. Today a rain belt is creeping up from and is extending farther and farther north into the This new epoch may continue for hundreds of years.

But the most startling testimony which Gautier found was abu that long before the present age of rainfall, in what is known as the or later Stone Age, a very large population inhabited this part of the He found there graves scattered over the grassy plain; he found dreds of their drawings on the rocks, where they had pictured an and other objects. He discovered the flattened stones which they had grinding grain. These millstones show that agriculture was then in that region, and that the grinding of grain into flour indicates advance of civilization. Here and there were many arrow points, an ished stone, and other implements. It was many hundreds of years human beings inhabited this region, but, as time is reckoned in epochs, thousands of farmers were tilling this part of the Sahara paratively recent period. They were finally driven back into the Su increasing drought, and the world forgot that this region had ever habited by man."—From "Three Unarmed Men Cross the Sahara," American Monthly Review of Reviews.

The Japanization of Chin

By Charles Chaille-Long.

JAPAN'S victory in her war with China in 1894-5 procured indemnity in money, the cession of Formosa, and the of success, which was immense. From that time on been strengthening her army and navy against Russia object which has been achieved. Whilst at the same has been cultivated with a keen appreciation of the without the moral, if not the material control of tha Japan could not alone accomplish the task she had assumed of di destinies of the Orient.

Japan has undertaken the Japanization of China methodically by tablishment in China and Japan of schools—military, industrial and tural. Recently twenty-two primary schools were opened in the Ch vinces, with 3,364 scholars. Four of these schools are military, at Outchan, Nanking and Canton, and are modeled after St. Cyr in Fr instructors are Japanese or Chinese educated in Japan. The school ton is administered by Japanese entirely. Every year 700 young graduates of the schools in Japan, are assigned with rank to the army. The student graduates are all exalted and imbued with new ideas. Actually there are 2,500 Chinese students in the schools an sities of Japan. The military mandarin, once a low grade and de is now elevated and honored. The literary class, heretofore the sp tans of the honor and dignity of China, now recognize the impor necessity of organizing a national army, solid and united, capable of ing respect for the interests and dignity of the empire.

Nursing Bottle Barred.

Regensburg, following the example of several French communities, will offer premiums to mothers who agree to suckle their own children. This will be done to reduce the awful mortality among infants, which may be traced, in part, to artificial nourishment. The chief of the municipality passing upon the bill, said, "Non-nursing mothers may be divided in three categories: Those that do not want to nurse their babies, those that are physically unable to, and those whom their duties prevent from suckling their children. The premiums are for the latter class of women; mothers shall be enabled to give up their employment for a time in order to devote themselves entirely to their babies."

REQUISITES FOR CLEANING.

When the inevitable washing day comes round see that the necessary materials and utensils are at hand. If the soap, soda, blue or washing powders are out of reach much valuable time will be lost. Arrange the clothes for soaking the day before, says the Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Every housekeeper should see that proper requisites for cleaning are provided. It should not be forgotten that there is economy in having proper tools to work with, as well as much less expenditure of time and strength and possibly temper in performing the daily task.

Worn out brushes and soiled dusters will prevent housework from being properly done, and "What is worth doing is worth doing well."

HOW TO MAKE TEA.

The correct way of making tea, according to a tea taster, is to extract as much of the theine from the leaf as possible and as little of the astringent matter. This presents a difficult problem, for when boiling water is poured on tea leaves it becomes tinged with astringent matter long before the whole of the theine is extracted.

By powdering the leaves the theine is made more accessible. The traveler who discovered this invented a special teapot which allowed the water, after infusing the powdered leaves, to pass into the well of the pot, leaving the leaves high and dry.

He found, to his satisfaction, that three-quarters of a pound of tea so treated would go as far as a pound infused in the ordinary way.

A TIP FOR THE COOK.

The commonest mistakes we make in cooking potatoes are that we use too many fried and boiled potatoes. Fried potatoes are less easily digestible than food cooked in other ways. The most wasteful way to cook potatoes is to peel them, put them in cold water and bring them slowly to a boil. This method allows the water to penetrate to the centre of the potato so that a good deal of the starch may be dissolved and lost and the potato becomes soggy because it has not been "cooked dry." On the other hand, if you put peeled or cut potatoes into boiling water the gluten is hardened at once (as is that other common nutritious food—the white of an egg), thus preventing the water from getting to the starch and thereby insuring a mealy potato.

The best way to cook potatoes is to bake them, because a dry heat being used none of the food value is lost. Next in nutritive order is the boiling of potatoes with their skins on. Next comes steaming, which every one should practice instead of the common way of boiling, because it wastes less starch, while giving the same kind of flavor and texture. Frying is the least rational process. Of the "fancy" methods "ricing" is one of the easiest and most attractive, and it has the great advantage of being useful for potatoes unfit for other uses.—Garden Magazine.

RECIPES.

Strawberry Jelly—Have ready one pint of strawberry juice and pulp which has been passed through a fine sieve in order to remove the seeds. Dissolve one-third of a two-ounce package of gelatine in one-third of a cup of water, add two-thirds of a cup of sugar and when cool stir in the strawberry juice and the juice of one lemon. Mold in a ring mold and serve with the centre filled with whipped cream.

Molasses Cake—Take two cupfuls of molasses, two of brown sugar, one of sour milk, one teaspoonful of soda, one-half cup of butter, two beaten eggs, five and one-fourth cups of flour. Beat all together, line a dripping pan with buttered paper and put in the dough. Sift white sugar over the top before baking, and bake in a slow oven. This is excellent and will keep for weeks.

Codfish and Hominy—For one-half pound of salt fish flaked allow one pound white hominy cooked, one teaspoonful salt, half a teaspoonful pepper, one quart milk, with a slice of onion boiled in the milk, two tablespoonfuls dripping or butter and two tablespoonfuls flour. Make the cream sauce first with the flour and butter cooked together, then adding the milk, seasoning and lastly fish and hominy. This makes enough for a large family.

Macaroni—To prepare macaroni properly, boil it rapidly for thirty minutes in boiling salted water. Drain and let it lie in cold water for another thirty minutes. A second draining and it is ready for use.

Pineapple Sherbet—Take one quart of grated pineapple, two heaping tablespoonfuls of gelatin, soak in sufficient water to cover it and then add the remainder of a quart of boiling water. Stir in the pineapple and two pounds of granulated sugar. Stir over the fire until well blended, adding the juice of one lemon. When it has cooled somewhat, but has not set, stir in lightly the beaten whites of two eggs and set in a cool place to stiffen. One-half of this quantity is sufficient for a small family.

Lord Roseberry hopes the new Liberal ministry in England will take General Booth, of the Salvation Army, into its counsels in dealing with the awful problem of London's unemployed.

An Old Painter's Ideas.

The Autumn season is coming more and more to be recognized as a most suitable time for house-painting.

There is no frost deep in the wood to make trouble for even the best job of painting, and the general seasoning of the Summer has put the wood into good condition in every way. The weather, moreover, is more likely to be settled for the necessary length of time to allow all the coats to thoroughly dry—a very important precaution.

An old and successful painter said to the writer the other day:

"House owners would get more for their money if they would allow their painters to take more time, especially between coats. Instead of allowing barely time for the surface to get dry enough not to be 'tacky,' several days (weeks would not be too much) should be allowed so that the coat might set through and through. It is inconvenient, of course, but, if one would suffer this slight inconvenience, it would add two or three years to the life of the paint.

"All this is assuming, of course, that the paint used is the very best to be had—the purest of white lead and the purest of linseed oil, unmixed with any cheapener. If the cheap mixtures, often known as 'White Lead' and oil which has been doctored with fish oil, benzine, corn-oil, or other of the adulterants known to the trade, are used, all the precautions of the skilled painter are useless to prevent the cracking and peeling which make houses unsightly in a year or so and, therefore, make painting bills too frequent and costly.

"The house owner should have his painter bring the ingredients to the premises separately—white lead of some well-known, reliable brand and linseed oil of equal quality — and mix the paint just before applying it."

Painting need not be expensive and unsatisfactory if the old painter's suggestions are followed.

BIRD MOTIONS.

Points of Difference Which Will Help the Observer to Identify Them.

Among perching birds thrushes usually stand motionless; sparrows stand or sit, but are less at ease than the thrushes, more restless. Both these families generally assume a slanting position on the bough.

Orioles usually progress in trees by sidling along the branches, vireos by flitting from bough to bough, repeatedly hovering under the leaves; warblers by hopping from twig to twig, while exploring one main branch and scanning the twigs and upper side of leaves.

A flycatcher, says St. Nicholas, selects a dead or exposed bough, where he sits motionless, upright, tail drooped, until he leaves the tree entirely, though perhaps to return after the pursuit of a flying insect.

Of inland water birds, geese, loons and grebes may be distinguished from gulls and terns by a straight forward flight, never zigzagging or slowly soaring like the long winged swimmers. Ducks have a more rapid wing beat than geese; which in turn fly with a rather heavy motion, somewhat like the loon's.

The several families may usually be further distinguished by the size and the shapes of the flocks. Loons usually go singly and are more often to be seen in flight than grebes, who also travel without flocking. Compare the upright position of the owls with the prone nighthawk and the whippoorwill; one sleeps standing up and one lying down.

Among the tree climbers there are still nicer distinctions, both in the manner of climbing and the courses of the birds upon the trunks. The woodpeckers, with feet and tail adapted to clinging to an upright surface and with bill adapted to drilling even in hard wood, goes straight up the trunk, then comes the slender billed and weak footed creeper, who must keep to the cracked bark, since he cannot bore for his food.

His course over the tree stem is, therefore, zigzag, from crevice to crevice. The nuthatches go winding up a tree as if they were living vines, or else they climb by turning from side to side with every step or two, but the tail is no use as a prop, so it is held off the bark.

Still another climber and creeper is the black and white warbler, who having nearly the feet, bill and tail of a nuthatch, progresses in about the same way, but has rather more of a liking for crutches and the less upright branches.

In the woodpecker family the yellow bellied sapsucker has a way of edging around a tree trunk. His course is marked by his borings, or rather drillings, which girdle the trees instead of being scattered or running up them, like those of other woodpeckers.

An Asquith Story.

There is a good House of Commons story which is to be found in the monographs on Mr. Asquith which has just been written by Mr. Alderson. Mr. Asquith was piloting through the House of Commons a bill on sweating. It was a hot afternoon in July, and one of Mr. Asquith's clauses to prevent sweating was being "reported" from the committee to the House when a South London member, who had a loud and raucous voice, rose and shouted: "Mr. Speaker, I want to know who sweats? I say, the question is, who sweats?" Even the immobile face of Speaker Peel broke into a grin.—M. A. P.

HERITAGE OF CIVIL WAR.

Thousands of Soldiers Contracted Chronic Kidney Trouble.

The experience of Capt. John L. Ely, of Co. E, 17th Ohio, now living at 500 East Second street, Newton, Kansas, will interest the thousands of veterans who came back from the Civil War suffering tortures with kidney complaint. Capt. Ely says: "I contracted kidney trouble during the Civil War, and the occasional attacks finally developed into a chronic case. At one time I had to use a crutch and cane to get about. My back was lame and weak, and besides the aching, there was a distressing retention of the kidney secretions. I was in a bad way when I began using Doan's Kidney Pills in 1901, but the remedy cured me, and I have been well ever since."

Agricultural Committee's Delay.

In a debate on the agricultural appropriation bill, Congressman Rixey, of Virginia, was denouncing the agricultural committee vigorously because it had been promising for years to do something for Virginia and had not done it yet. Chairman Wadsworth tried to pour oil on the troubled waters. "The gentleman from Virginia must remember," said he, "that Rome wasn't built in a day." "I know it wasn't," retorted Rixey, "and if Romulus and Remus had been on the agricultural committee it wouldn't be built yet."

Florence Drug Co. Will Pay Back Your Money if Pepsikola Fails to Cure Your Indigestion.

"Never in the history of this store," remarked one of the above druggists to an interested customer, "has there been so great a demand for a new remedy as there is just now for Pepsikola Tablets. Clanton people are coming in every day inquiring if it really is true that we sell Pepsikola with the understanding that it will cure dyspepsia or pay back the money. "Not one person in fifty has asked for their money, and it may surprise you to know that at least a dozen within the last ten days have been in to tell us how much they have been relieved and how glad they are to know at last there is a remedy that really will cure indigestion and dyspepsia." Pepsikola braces up and tones every nerve and fibre, helps digest the food, puts new life into the digestion, improves the appetite, cures coated tongue, dizzy spells and sour stomach.

Try it for ten days, and if you don't see a big improvement step in and tell Florence Drug co., and they will hand back your quarter cheerfully and without argument.

Hay Fever and Summer Colds

Men Past Sixty in Danger

More than half of mankind over sixty years of age suffer from kidney and bladder disorders, usually enlargement of prostrate glands. This is both painful and dangerous, and Foley's Kidney Cure should be taken at the first sign of danger, as it corrects irregularities and has cured many old men of this disease. Mr. Rodney Burnett, Rockport, Mo., writes: "I suffered with enlarged prostrate gland and kidney trouble for years and after taking two bottles of Foley's Kidney Cure I feel better than I have for twenty years, although I am now 91 years old." Timber Land, Act June 3, 1878

United States Land Office,
Montgomery, Ala., June, 4, 1906

Notice is hereby given that in compliance with the provisions of the act of Congress of June 3, 1878, entitled "An Act for the sale of timber lands in the States of California, Oregon, Nevada and Washington Territory," as extended to all the Public Land States by act of August 4, 1892, William P. Lay, of Gadsden, county of Etowah, State of Alabama, has this day filed in this office his sworn statement No. 20, for the purchase of the Southeast part of Fraction "A" or the Sw ¼ of Ne ¼, of Section No. 24, Township No 23 N, Range No. 15 E, and will offer proof to show that the land sought is more valuable for its timber or stone than for agricultural purposes, and to establish his claim to said land before Clerk Circuit Court, at Clanton, Ala., on the 1st day of September, 1906.

He names as witnesses: E. M. Pinckard, of Clanton, Ala.; W H Foshee, of Clanton, Ala.; Hugh Simpson, of Clanton, Ala.; Abe Kanter, of Clanton, Ala.

Any and all persons claiming adversely the above described lands are requested to file their claims in this office on or before the 1st day of September, 1906.

Sour Stomach

No appetite, loss of strength, nervousness, headache, constipation, bad breath, general debility, sour risings, and catarrh of the stomach are all due to indigestion. Kodol cures indigestion. This new discovery represents the natural juices of digestion as they exist in a healthy stomach, combined with the greatest known tonic and reconstructive properties. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure does not only cure indigestion and dyspepsia, but this famous remedy cures all stomach troubles by cleansing, purifying, sweetening and strengthening the mucous membranes lining the stomach.

Mr. S. S. Ball, of Ravenswood, W. Va., says— "I was troubled with sour stomach for twenty years. Kodol cured me and we are now using it in milk for baby."

AN OBITUARY.

On the 11th inst. Miss Lizzie Lowery passed peacefully from this life. After many months of illness God called her home and her bright spirit took its flight to the realms of eternal light. Miss Lizzie was a model young lady, a consecrated Christian, a power for her Master's cause. Her noble life and pure character were such that they could well be copied by any person. She was a faithful member of the Jemison Baptist church, where her labors will be missed in many places and ways.

She was an ardent worker for the Sunbeam Band, Sunday school and church, one that sought opportunity to serve the Master. To know her was to admire and love her. The many good deeds that she did will remain a monument to her sweet, noble and pure life. She leaves to mourn her loss: a loving father and mother, two brothers and three sisters, a number of relatives and a countless host of friends. All were her friends, she had no enemies. Her casket was fairly laden and the grave strewn with flowers by the Sunbeam Band, relatives and friends in token of their love.

A FRIEND.

A Rank Pessimist.

A Lady Bountiful living in a suburban village met an old man on the road one day and asked after his family, his health, etc. The old man gave a rather gloomy account of things. He had to work all day and every day, and he was growing old and felt the cold and was always tired. He wished he could rest a bit after his long life of labor. He was weary, very weary.

Lady Bountiful reminded him gently that every one had his share of work to do in this world, and that it was all only a preparation of the world to come, where there will be no tears or labor.

The old man shook his head and smiled cynically.

"That may be for the likes of you," he said. "But there'll be work for the likes of me. It will be the same thing there: 'John, clean the sun.' 'John, hang out the moon.' 'John, light the stars.' 'John, stop the wind.' They will find something for me to do, ma'am—you'll see."

Telegraph Operators' Signs.

Telegraph operators always have personal signs which they place on all messages they send or receive. Usually they use two of their initials or take two letters from their names. For instance, James Black will probably use "JB" as his sign. In many cases, however, they choose their signs in peculiar ways.

"We once had a man working here who signed 'KH' because he had taken the Keeley cure," said a Kansas City chief operator. "He afterward went back to drinking and then used 'BZ,' deriving it from 'booze.' Another fellow signed 'PS' because he used to say he received a poor salary. A woman operator we had here used to sign 'HK,' her initials, until one day her beau jilted her and married another girl. After that she signed 'BH,' which, we understood, meant 'broken heart.' In an eastern office where I once worked there was a hoodoo sign. It was 'KQ.' The first man who used it there was killed by a train, the next one went crazy and the third died of typhoid fever. After that nobody in the office dared use the hoodoo sign. The story about its being a Jonah traveled over the country, and today you'll find very few operators signing 'KQ.'"

TEN YEARS IN BED

"For ten years I was confined to my bed with disease of my kidneys," writes R. A Gray, J. P., of Oakville, Ind. "It was so severe that I could not move part of the time. I consulted the very best medical skill available, but could get no relief until Foley's Kidney Cure was recommended to me. It has been a Godsend to me." Upchurch Drug co.

NOW IS THE TIME!

Now! when this weather just makes one dream of the cool and delightful retreats of the Adirondacks.

Of the Thousand Islands of the St. Lawrence.

The thousand lakes and streams of Michigan, Canada, and the northwest;

Where one can roam with fishing rod along shady forest streams and swing the line out over deep pools.

Or paddle through quiet waters with only the music of the forest or the ripple of the water to break the deep quiet of the solitude.

Now is the time to consult your nearest Big Four Agent as to routes and rates and get his information as to through sleepers from St. Louis, Indianapolis, Cincinnati, Dayton, Springfield and Columbus to Boston, Cleveland, Buffalo, New York.

Or Cincinnati, Dayton, Springfield to Toledo, Detroit, Mackinac.

Or Cincinnati to St. Louis, Peoria and Chicago;

And remember also those comfortable Parlor Cars and those hunger-satisfying Dining Cars that serve the best meals on wheels.

Four cents in stamps will bring our "World's Playground."

MAKE MONEY.

Here is an interesting study: Make out a list of all the people you know, and estimate the amount of money each one earns in a year. Total it up. The amount will be surprisingly large. Now, of all those people, only the few who SAVE SOMETHING really MAKE anything at all. Simply earning money isn't making it; what slips through the earner's fingers is finally "made" by somebody else. Don't forget to count yourself in on the list, and if you are not "making" money, begin now to save with us. One dollar will open your bank account.

Mr. GULLEDGE REPLIES.

Verbena, Ala., Aug. 20, 1906.
Mr. J. O. Middleton, Clanton

Dear Sir—I note your letter without date, published in The Union of August 16, 1906

Not having a ring backing my candidacy, to say who should or who should not run as candidates in the primary, and being unhampered by the localized collar of any man or set of men, and relying upon pure conservative Democracy of that pattern framed by Thomas Jefferson, I submitted, and submit now, my lot to the people, and the challenge was issued to the nominee of the Republican combine, conditioned upon my nomination.

Individually I will have no campaign committee, except the people; my party is of the people and springs from principle, in advocacy of the people's needs, wants, and desires; its campaign committee, not mine, will in due course, take the matter up with "your" committee.

I expect to receive a good size vote at the hands of the Populists, who see fit to take advantage of the chance offered them to identify themselves with the best and most conservative interests of the State. You, as a Republican, having no plausible or reasonable claim to their votes.

You claim your nomination from two political organizations, which represent and stand for, divergent ideals and principles. Therefore, the citizens of Chilton county, to whom you submit your candidacy, are entitled to know what your platform is. Upon what theory of governmental policy do you rest your claim to the votes of the citizens of Chilton county? I call upon you now to set forth in public print the platform upon which you stand.

I shall ask The Banner to publish this reply this week, and if you will join me in this request, next week, both of us will ask The Banner and The Union to publish this letter or the entire correspondence.

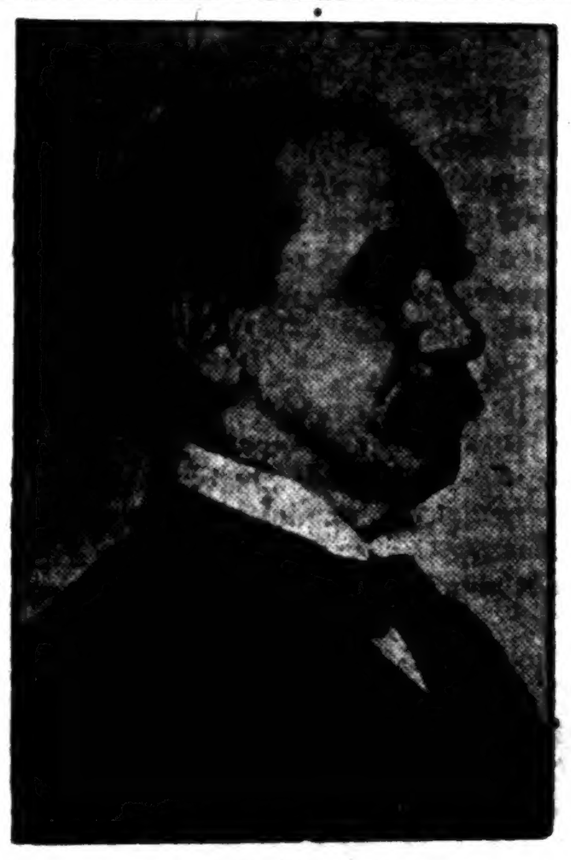
Unless physical disability prevents, I will meet you at appointments arranged by the campaign committee of the Democratic party, and in the event of my enforced absence, I shall try to have some one in my stead.

Yours truly,
F. A. GULLEDGE.

Rushton, Ala., Aug. 17, 1906
Mr. F. A. Gulledge, Verbena.

Dear Sir—It has come to my attention through the public print that you are being unjustly charged with having remained at Montgomery during the pendency of the stock law legislation for Beat 5, Chilton county, and that you engineered the bill through that body. This is entirely an error or a misrepresentation of the facts. I am the only citizen of the Beat that went to Montgomery and looked after this piece of legislation, and you never took it in at all. I write this, not because I deem the part that I took at all discreditable, but that the public may know the facts.

Yours truly,
B. F. HIGGINS, JR.



HORACE HOOD
Candidate for State Auditor.

Beat 6.

Editor Banner—Please allow me space in your valuable paper for a few words. I voted a Populist ticket as long as there was a Populist party. The principles of that party still live. Where will you find them, Bro. Populist? Not in the Republican party, by any means. The Democrats of this State have given us white supremacy and a fair count. I can't see how any true Populist can support a Republican ticket. Now, come along, my dear Jeffersonian Populists, and meet me at the polls, the 27th of August and vote the ticket nearest our hearts and not be bulldosed into the Republican party by a few Republican bosses who call the Republican ticket the peoples' ticket. I noticed a piece in the Union headed "Another Barrell." Sure enough, and one that was lost by the Russians in their attempt to whip Japan. So full of nonsense he failed to sign his name to it.

The presentation of degrees for steady, honest, devoted perseverance in a line of intellectual labor begun in college ought to be a part of the system of distribution of degrees, but it is not, maintains the New York Sun.

The strictness with which England guards the purity of elections is strikingly illustrated in a case just reported, in which a member of Parliament has been unseated because of "corrupt practices." He is a member of the Liberal party, observes the New York Tribune, which has an overwhelming majority in Parliament, and is the eldest son of a peer; yet these circumstances did not avail to save him from the penalty of the law. The most serious charge against him was that he had corrupted, or tried to corrupt, the voters by entertaining them at a garden party. Just suppose such "corruption" of voters were forbidden in this country!

Spain's little war with the United States was apparently just what that nation needed, suggests the New York Press. Before that war what was left of the empire of Charles V. was in a "parlous" state. Poverty among the people and a deficit in the treasury; wretchedly governed colonies, a burden on the mother country and calling for the annual sacrifice of the lives and labors of the Spanish youth; a gang of high-placed grafters robbing with both hands—she was indeed a dying nation and her condition well described in the words of Richelieu:

The arts lay dead; trade rotted in your marts;
Your armies mutinous, your treasury bankrupt.

We need poets and novelists who will develop in us a sense of right values—who will glorify the average man, and crown him in the sight of the world as its master and savior, says the Indianapolis News. The hero is the man who works his passage, pays his way, injures no one, does his duty and a little more, and does not wander far from the path between his home and his office. And he is all the more a hero because he is not conscious of being one. It is not for his sake, but for the sake of the rest of us that he should be honored. He asks no reward and craves no notice. But it is necessary that the world should see in him the true ideal, and that the romance, the beauty and the power of his life should be made clear to all.

The outbreak of cholera recently reported from Manila is a mighty serious thing. Outbreaks of ladrones and Pulajanes may strike the public as more dangerous, but that is a mistaken view, remarks the Hartford Courant. Where social order has never been really established, raids of marauders and insurrections by petty chiefs may almost be taken for granted. The Philippines have never been without them—and have never had so few as since the American possession. But the cholera doesn't descend only upon scattered communities nor limit itself to a few fanatics. When it starts it means business and generally accomplishes it. The disease broke out soon after our occupation began and it carried off more than 200,000 people, most of them natives, but not a few of them whites.

Reviewing the prospects for the present fiscal year, the Washington Post says: Railroad earnings for the first three weeks in June were 10.3 per cent. larger than in 1905, and bank clearings made about the same advance over last year. Dividend and interest disbursements this month are much greater than last year. Building operations are steadily increasing in magnitude throughout the country, and the expenditures of the Government in this direction will be no small item during the new fiscal year. Few labor disputes exist. As a rule, labor is more generally employed, and at higher wages, than ever before. There is slight tendency in manufacturing establishments to shut down during the summer, for the reason that orders for fall delivery continue to pour in. The increased assurance of heavy crops has caused a quickening of retail trade, and larger orders from agricultural States for all kinds of manufactured goods. A prosperous year is in sight, and nothing short of widespread calamity can prevent the country from establishing a new record of business activity.

THE OUTRAGEOUS LIBEL OF COMER SHOWN UP.

Methodist Minister and Physician in Charge at Avondale Mills and Parents and Employes Contradict Libels and Praise Comer.

RECKLESS JOURNALISM EXPOSED

In its issue of August 3 the Montgomery Advertiser printed a letter written by Rev. A. J. McKelway, and put above it, in large type, such headlines as "Tots Under Legal Age Work in Cotton Mill Owned by B. B. Comer—Rev. A. J. McKelway Gives Names and Ages of Tots Who Labor There—Little Ones Compell to Leave School," etc., and in an editorial in the same issue severely arraigns Mr. Comer for "working little children under 12 years of age and requiring them and their people to live in dreadful sanitary conditions," and charging that Comer is violating the child labor law and that he "has defied and nullified the law in his own interests," etc.

Mr. Comer has given the Montgomery Advertiser, in accordance with the statute regulating libel lawsuits, notice that these and other publications are false and defamatory. The Advertiser pleaded lack of notice in one libel suit brought by Mr. Comer.

The following affidavits have also been sent to the Montgomery Advertiser, with the request that they be published in that paper.

It would be well for those who read the outrageous libel of Mr. Comer by the Montgomery Advertiser of August 3 to read the following:

Affidavit of the Physician in Charge of Avondale Mills.

State of Alabama—Jefferson County:

Personally appeared before me the undersigned authority in and for said state and county, Dr. J. H. Finch, who being first duly sworn, on oath says: That he is a practicing physician and has been for the last twenty years. That he is a graduate of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Baltimore Maryland. That he is now and has been for the last seven years the physician of the operatives working at the Avondale Mills, Avondale, Alabama, and is the only physician who attends the operatives in said mill. That he visits the village in which the operatives live at least once every day, and has for the last seven years. That the sanitary conditions of said village and mills are excellent, better than the average conditions in the city of Birmingham or its suburbs. That the place is well drained, that it is kept clean, that the closets and streets are cleaned every day except Sunday and all refuse matter carted away, and all refuse matter carted away, and they are frequently disinfected. That the houses in which the operatives live are well constructed, being framed houses, weatherboarded on the outside, plastered and wainscoted on the inside, with good roofs and varandas, and well ventilated. That said houses are built in rows, with wide streets separating the rows, the houses being at least twelve feet apart. That the houses are entirely comfortable and are well and cleanly kept. That he, as physician, goes into all the houses and practically all the rooms in the houses. That he inspects the houses and the rooms with a view and for the purpose of determining that they are cleanly kept. That he is under instructions from Mr. B. B. Comer, the president of the mills, to investigate the houses of the operatives to see whether they are cleanly kept and in good sanitary condition. That in addition to the inspection made by affiant, G. W. Robinet is employed by the said mills to inspect the premises, including the houses and the rooms in the houses of the said operatives. That he inspects the same almost daily. That affiant's instructions from the Avondale mills are and have been all the while to notify the officers of the mills when the houses are not cleanly kept, and when they are not cleanly kept by any occupant thereof the mill itself has them cleaned. The water used by the operatives is from a bored well over two hundred feet deep through solid rock. The water is pure and wholesome, far better than the water used by the people of Birmingham or its suburbs. That he has been under constant instruction from Mr. B. B. Comer that if any case of want or suffering is found to report the same to him, and that in all such cases the mills have supplied the wants or necessities of such person or persons, and this want has been supplied, to affiant's knowledge, in many cases, not only supplying their wants with the necessaries of life, but with delicacies. That Mr Comer himself is unusually attentive to the wants of the said operatives as well as unusually kind in relieving such wants. That the health of the people in said village is excellent and will compare favorably with the healthiest cities in the state, and better than it is in the towns of East Lake, Woodlawn and Avondale, lying nearby. That the death rate in said village for the last three years has not been over five persons to the thousand living in the village, and this includes a number of persons dying in said village who were brought there sick from other places. During the years 1904 and 1905 there was not a single case of typhoid fever in the village, and only two mild cases during the year 1906, and one of those cases was brought there from another place. One of these cases has been discharged and the other one is convalescent and out of danger. That a free bath house is maintained in said village, to which all of the operatives have access. That there is a free library maintained in the village, consisting of at least a thousand volumes of books. That a free school is maintained in the village for nine months in the year, as also a kindergarten school for the smaller children, the teacher of which is Mr. B. B. Comer's daughter. That no washing is allowed to be done in the village, but all is done in a free wash-house maintained by the mills for that purpose, where fuel and water are furnished free. That two churches are maintained in the village, one a Methodist and one a Baptist, where religious services are held every Sabbath and every Sabbath night, and prayer meeting once a week. That a Sunday school is conducted in each of the said churches every Sabbath That the operatives in said mills are happy and contented, and that a large number of them have bank accounts where they hve money deposited by the hundreds of dollars, and in some cases by the thousands of dollars. That Mr. B. B. Comer, the president of the mill, is not only held in high esteem by the operatives, but is very much beloved by them. That the houses occupied by the said operatives are more comfortable than the houses occupied by the average farmers of the state. That they only pay $1 a room per month for the houses, and coal is furnished the operatives at cost to the mill. That there has been no means of connecting this village with the sanitary sewer until the county sanitary sewer is completed. The village is on exactly the same footing as Avondale, Woodlawn and East Lake with reference to a sanitary sewerage, neither of said towns having any, but the closets in none of said towns are cleaned oftener than once a week, while in this village they are cleaned daily.

State of Alabama—Jefferson County:

Personally appeared before me the undersigned authority in and for said state and country, W. McD. Howell, who being first duly sworn, on oath says that he is a minister of the gospel and has care and charge of the Methodist church at the Avondale Cotton Mills, near Avondale, Alabama. That he has been such pastor for the last eighteen months. That said church is one of the churches which is attended by the operatives of the Avondale Cotton Mills. That religious worship is held at said church on each Sabbath and each Sabbath night and prayer meeting on Thursday night of each week, and Sunday school every Sabbath. That there is also a Baptist church in said village, where religious services are held every Sabbath and every Sabbath night, and prayer meeting once a week, and Sunday school every Sabbath. That he is entirely familiar with the village where the operatives of said Avondale mills live, that he is in said village at least once a week, and that it is his rule to make a house-to-house canvass of the village monthly. That he is familiar with the sanitary conditions and surroundings of said village and was on last February, and that the sanitary condition of said village at that time was and for the last eighteen months, up to the present time, has been and is good; that the drainage is good; that the surroundings are cleanly and the village remarkably healthful; that the houses are comfortable, being frame cottages, plastered and walscoted on the inside, well ventilated, not crowded, with good roofs and verandas. That said houses, while kept by the occupants themselves, are inspected twice a week by an officer of the company and required by him to be kept clean, and will compare favorably with houses kept in the average community. That the general appearance of the people occupying said village will compare favorably with the appearance of any average community. That he has access to said cotton mills and visits them often. That he has never noticed working in said mill a child apparently under the legal age. Affiant further says that a kindergarten school is maintained in said village and taught by the daughter of Mr. B. B. Comer, who takes charge of and cares for the smaller children in the village while their parents are at work in the mill; that this is done free of cost to the patrons of said school or those working in the mills.

Affidavits of Employes and Parents of Employes of the Avondale Mills.

State of Alabama—Jefferson County

Personally appeared before me the undersigned authority in and for said state and county, A. L. Henderson, John D. Moon, John Brawley, J. S. Newman, Mrs. Elizabeth Whitlock, J. W. Pierson, J. B. Francis, Jr., A. L. Smith, John Bayne, D. B. Tidwell, R. L O'Pry, Earnest Ford, J. K. Hayes and G. W. Robinett, who, being duly sworn, on oath say: That they work at the Avondale mills and were working there in February, 1906, and for a long time prior thereto. They they are daily in the village occupied by the operatives of said mill and are perfectly familiar with the conditions surrounding the same. That the sanitary conditions of said mill are excellent. That the premises are well drained and cleanly kept. That the premises of the operatives are inspected daily and the houses twice a week, by G. W. Robinett, an employe of said mill, and if the houses are not cleaned the company itself has them cleaned, there being a rule of the company requiring the premises and houses to be kept clean, and this rule is rigidly enforced. The company furnishes the operatives sal-soda free of charge for the purpose of cleaning their houses. That the operatives are contented and happy. That B. B. Comer, president of said mill, is not only highly esteemed, but very popular with the operatives; that he is exceedingly considerate and kind to them. That he never fails to supply any of them in want, not only with the necessaries of life, but with luxuries, free of charge. That the closets and streets of said village are cleaned daily and the refuse removed daily, except Sunday, from said village. That the houses occupied by the operatives in said mill are framed houses, having from three to eight rooms; that they are weatherboarded, plastered and wainscoted on the inside, well ventilated, with brick chimneys, good roofs and verandas; that they are built in rows, that the rows are divided by wide streets, the houses themselves on an average not being nearer than twelve feet apart. That the health of the village is first-class. That the mill has in said village free baths for the operatives. That no washing is done in said village, the same being done in a wash-house out of the village, prepared for that purpose by the mill, where fuel and water is furnished free. That the drinking water of said village is excellent, coming from a bored well over two hundred feet deep, bored through solid rock. That there is a free library in the village, maintained by the mill, consisting of not less than a thousand volumes. That there are two churches in the village, one a Methodist and the other a Baptist church, in which religious services are held on every Sabbath and Sabbath night, and where prayer meeting is held once a week, and Sunday school every Sabbath. That there is a free school maintained nine months of every year in said village for the children of the operatives in said mill. That there is a free kindergarten school provided in said village where the younger children are cared for and taught by Mr. B. B. Comer's daughter. That no children are employed in said mill under the legal age and have not been since the child labor law was passed by the last legislature. That when there is any doubt about the age of a child offering to work in the mill, an affidavit by its parents is always required, giving its true age. That frequently children under the legal age go to the mill to visit their parents or to carry their meals, but are not employed in said mill.

(Signed) J. B. Francis, Jr., A. L. Henderson, John Bayne, R. L. O'Pry, John (his X mark) Brawley, J. S. Newman, Elizabeth (her X mark) Whitlock, G. W. Robinett, John K. Hayes, Earnest Ford, A. L. Smith, J. D. Moon, J. W. Pierson, D. B. Tidwell.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this the 7th day of August, 1906.

THOMAS J. WINGFIELD,
Notary Public.

Affidavit of J. B. Francis, Jr.

The said J. B. Francis, Jr., under oath, separately says: That he is the bookkeeper of the Avondale mills and has charge of the pay roll and has had for the last five years. That he knows the names of all persons appearing on said pay roll. That no such person as Flossie Lyman, the name mentioned in the Montgomery Advertiser of the 3d of August, 1906, was ever on said pay roll; in fact, the name of Lyman has never appeared on said pay roll. That the names of James Brawley and Henry Henderson, the names mentioned in the Montgomery Advertiser of said date, have never appeared on the pay roll of said mill. That neither Flossie Lyman, James Brawley or Henry Henderson are or have ever been employed in said mill. That he knows Bertha Whitlock, the name mentioned in the Montgomery Advertiser of said date, who works in the mill, and knows that when she went into said mill to work that her mother made and subscribed to an affidavit that she was over twelve years of age That she has the appearnce of being over twelve years of age.

Affidavit of Elizabeth Whitlock.

The said Elizabeth Whitlock, on oath separately, says: That she is the mother of Bertha Whitlock, mentioned in the Montgomery Advertiser on the 3d of August; that said Bertha was born on January 8, 1893, and therefore was fourteen years of age on January 8 of this year. That she is working in said mill under the instructions of her parents, and that she was more than twelve years of age when she commenced work there.

Affidavit of A. L. Henderson.

The said A. L. Henderson, on oath separately, says: That Henry Henderson, mentioned in the Montgomery Advertiser on August 3d, 1906, is his son. That the said Henry is not and has never been employed in the mill. That he sometimes goes into the mill of his own accord, affiant having suggested to him that it was better to go into said mill and assist his brother than to spend his time in idleness on streets of Avondale. That said Henry has never been required to work in the mill or to assist his brother, but only works there at his pleasure. That he was never kept from school a day in his life to work in the mill. That the said Henry is over twelve years of age, having been born on the 15th day of May, 1894.

Affidavit of John Brawley.

The said John Brawley, on oath separately, says: That he is the father of James Brawley, whose name was mentioned in the Montgomery Advertiser on the 3d of August, and that the said James Brawley is a grown man over thirty ears of age and has never worked in the Avondale mills a day in his life. That there is no other boy by the name of James Brawley living in the village where the operatives in said mill live or in the town of Avondale, or anywhere near there. That he has three sons working in said mill. That his youngest son, George, is over twelve and nearly thirteen years of age. His son John is fifteen years of age and his son Everett is seventeen years of age. That they are working in said mill under his instruction.

Affidavit of John D. Moon.

The said John D. Moon, on oath separately, says: That he went to work in the Avondale mills and has been at work there since 1898, except the year 1904. That he came there from the People's Cotton Mill at Montgomery, Alabama. That he has worked in the Montgomery Cotton Mill and the Alabama Cordage Mill, all in Montgomery. That the sanitary conditions at the Avondale mills are better than at either one of said mills and has been better ever since he commenced to work there. That when he went to the Avondale mills he and a number of his family were sick; that they soon regained their health. That when he reached the Avondale mills he had only seventy cents in money and no other property; that since that time he has made and saved at the Avondale mills between five and six thousand dollars, which he now has.

Affidavit of J. W. Pierson.

The said J. W. Pierson, separately on oath, says: That he is superintendent of the Avondale mills and has been for the last five years, and that before that time he was overseer of spinners in said mill. That he has worked in cotton mills from the lowest work in the mill up to the position he now occupies. That he has worked in the Henrietta mills of North Carolina, Clifton mills and Richland mills of South Carolina, and for a short time in the People's mill at Montgomery, Alabama. That he is familiar with the operation of mills and the conditions which usually surround them and the operatives living therein. That he has visited the best and most up-to-date mills in the South. That the health of the operatives at the Avondale mills is good, better than the health of the operatives of any mill he has ever seen. That the general surroundings including the sanitary conditions are as good, if not better, than the surroundings of any mill he has ever known. That no such persons as Flossie Lyman or James Brawley, the names mentioned in the Montgomery Advertiser of the 3d inst. have ever worked in said mill.

Affidavit of G. W. Robinett.

The said G. W. Robinett, separately on oath, says: That he is employed at the Avondale mills and has been for a number of years, his duties being to inspect the premises and houses in the village where the operatives live and see that the place is kept clean. That he knows that all of the closets in said village are cleaned daily, except on Sunday as well as the streets, and all refuse matter is carted away from the village daily. That it is his duty to inspect the houses occupied by the operatives. That he inspects each house at least twice a week; that they are cleanly kept, and if found at all unclean he requests the occupants to clean the same, and if they do not do so, he has them cleaned at the expense of the company. That he furnishes to the occupants of the houses sal-soda free of charge with which to clean them.

"Cannon Ball" Derailed

Dallas, Tex.—"Cannon ball" train No. 6 of the Texas and Pacific railroad was derailed five miles east of Mesquite. The rear trucks of the tender left the tracks, causing the baggage cars, mail car, dining car and a chair car to leave the tracks. The train left Dallas early in the morning and at the time of the accident was running at a high rate of speed. The tracks were badly torn up for a distance of several hundred feet. Several passengers were injured.

First Bale in Hattiesburg.

Hattiesburg, Miss.—Hattiesburg's first bale of cotton for the season was brought in by George Delman, a negro planter, whose place is a few miles out from the city. It weighed 516 pounds, classed strict middling and was bought by Hawkins & Co. for 10 cents, with a premium. The crop conditions in this section have deteriorated to a serious extent during the past ten days, due to excessive rains, which have had the effect of rotting the plant and causing the bolls to shed.

Smallpox Suppressed.

Colon.—The American sanitary officers Friday announced that the recent outbreak of smallpox here is considered to have ended and that the town is entitled to clean bills of health.

Porto Rican Laborers.

San Juan, P. R.—The steamer Arkadia sailed from Arecibo for New Orleans August 15 with 100 Porto Rican laborers to work on plantations in Louisiana.

First Bale Received.

Columbus, Ga.—The Davis Warehouse Company has received the first bale of new cotton from one of its customers. It was shipped by W. H. King, of Weston, Webster county, and classed strict middling.

Mountain Sheep Sacred in Colorado

State Game and Fish Commissioner Jim Woodard declares that the mountain sheep of Colorado is in the same class as the sacred bull of India. It must not be touched, says Woodard. If the animal is seen browsing on the mountainside the gun of the hunter must not be pointed in its direction.

The animal, therefore, may be called the "sacred sheep of Colorado." There are not many of them left, but under the protection of the law they are increasing every year. There is a band of them on the hills between Florence and Victor, and Mr. Woodard has a photograph of the bunch grazing on a hillside a short distance from Florence.

But for the passage of a law which heavily fines those who kill this animal the species would have been extinct long ago.

A letter received in Mr. Woodard's office recently tells of the arrest and conviction of one Fred Klantzky for killing mountain sheep. Klantzky was fined $300 and costs in the county court at Canon City last Saturday. The costs amounted to $140, and if the accused man does not settle he will have a long term to serve in the county jail.—Denver Republican.

Epitaph and Biography.

After all, what is biography but extended epitaph. Between the two the obituary may be regarded as a sort of connecting link. But take the epitaph, pure and simple, as the seed of biography. Here are the dates of birth and death. If there is no more, it is sometimes because there is little more to say. If there is a list of distinctions to which the dead attained, here, forsooth, is the framework for the biographer's narrative. Append your text, "The memory of the just is blessed," or whatever sentiment your fancy may prefer, and you have given the biographer the starting point for his eulogy, which nowadays he will possibly call an "appreciation."

These seeds of biographic narrative and eulogy are sown, I admit, more sparingly in our later day than of old. The fashion of reserve has grown. So, too, has that levelling force which moulds men into one familiar pattern. If there is less diversity and individuality in epitaphs, there is in men—and in biographies.—The Atlantic.

Too Credulous.

Senator Frye of Maine tells the following story of a man who fell asleep in a parlor car. He snored so loudly that every one in the coach was annoyed. Presently an old gentleman approached the sleeper, shook him and brought him out of his slumber with a start.

"What's the matter?" he exclaimed.

"Why, your snoring is annoying every one in the car," said the old gentleman.

"How do you know I am snoring?" queried the source of the nuisance.

"Why, we can't help but hear it."

"Well, don't believe all you hear," replied the stranger and went to sleep again.—Christian Endeavor World.

A New York publisher directed one of his clerks to hang out a sign "Boy Wanted." Five minutes later, says a writer in the New York Sun, a red-headed little "tad" appeared in the office with the sign under his arm.

"Say, mister," he demanded, "did you hang dis out?"

"I did," replied the publisher, sternly. "Why did you tear it down?"

Back of his freckles the boy looked in wonder at the man's stupidity.

"Why," he replied, "I'm de boy!"

Elasticity of the Cotton Crop.

A correspondent who has charge of a manufacturing department in a large cotton industry in New England takes the view that the southern states can just as easily raise a cotton crop of 15,000,000 bales as one of 11,000,000 bales. He bases this view on the greater intelligence of the cotton farmer today than five years ago, whereby the grower is able to raise 50 per cent more to the acre on account of, among other things, the co-operation of the United States department of agriculture.

This view has much in it to commend. But it is probably an overestimate of the immediate capacity of the cotton grower to enlarge the yield. Yet, if several years of time were allowed, the larger crop would not seem to be beyond the limit of practicability. The crop of 1904-5 of 13,697,000 bales was only 1,303,000 short of the correspondent's total. This crop was grown under favorable climatic conditions, but with practically the same labor resources as were available last year and are available now, subject to such deductions as arise from the movement of rural labor into the cities and other than agricultural occupations.

Though the cotton-growing population may be decreasing in numbers, there seems to be little doubt that it is increasing in efficiency. At no time in its history has there been so much scientific thought put upon the process from the beginning to the end. The selection of seed, t[illegible]methods of cultivation, the man[illegible] kind of fertilizing and the m[illegible] of marketing have all received attention from various quarters. Outside criticism and inside discussion have all helped to improve the quality and to increase the quantity of this crop. In due time it is perfectly reasonable to look forward to results which intelligent thought and effort on so important an industry may be expected to produce.—Wall Street Journal.

Paducah Paying Teller Gone.

Paducah, Ky.—Rumor of irregularities, coupled with the unaccountable absence of Phil J. Abbott, teller of the American-German Bank of this city, caused an investigation of the bank's affairs by the officials, with the result that a shortage of $7,300 in the reserve was found. The Fidelity Deposit Company, of Baltimore, which was on the bond of Abbott, paid the shortage and an agent of the company is searching for the teller.

Abbott has been absent since August 1, and his wife says she does not know where he is. Two weeks ago he secured a leave of absence for three days to visit his brother at Robinson, Ill., on a matter of business.

Property Loss $250,000,000.

There continues to be confusion of statements as to the magnitude of the disaster to Valparaiso caused by the earthquake shocks which began on Thursday, August 16, and continued at frequent intervals throughout that and the next two days.

Dispatches from Valparaiso state that a moderate estimate of the fatalities is 2,000 and that the property loss may be as high as $250,000,000, which latter is as great as the loss sustained by San Francisco in consequence of the earthquake and fire which devastated that city last April.

ORCHARD and GARDEN

MEAT FOR CHICKS.

In concluding a report of experiments in feeding young chicks the Rhode Island Experiment Station says: "The use of the proper proportion of animal food will pay a handsome profit through decreased mortality and increased weight of the chicks. In feeding bear in mind that chicks in a state of nature spend practically all of their working hours in search of food, and that they do not fill their crops in ten minutes every two hours. Feeding should be, as far as the time of the attendant renders profitable, a continuous process, but by no means a continuous gorge. The experiment which led up to this conclusion was with an incubator hatch of 219 chickens. These were separated into lots of about fifty each and placed in similar brooders. For thirty days all conditions were kept alike except the rations. Pen A was fed a balanced ration of grains, meat and green food. The chicks grew and thrived and not one chick showed symptoms of digestive disorder. The deaths amounted to 3.9 per cent. In pen B all animal food was withheld; the deaths were 9.5 per cent., of which 75 per cent, had bowel trouble. Pen C was fed on grain alone, all animal food and all green food being omitted from the ration; the deaths were 32.7 per cent., of which 76.5 per cent. showed digestive trouble. In pen D all grain food was omitted; the deaths of chicks were 63.7 per cent., of which 85.8 per cent. showed bowel trouble. All the living chicks were weighed at the close of the test, and pen A showed the greatest average weight for all breeds. This experiment shows conclusively that outside of the brooding and conditions during incubation chicks may be killed by improper feeding. Where one does not wish to buy the prepared beef scraps the bones and scraps from the table will go far towards feeding the baby chicks at first if put in shape so they can eat them.

TOO MUCH FAT ON SHEEP.

Professor J. Long, a well-known English live-stock authority, writing of the late Smithfield (England) show, says: "Although the number of excessively fat sheep carcasses were fewer than ever before, it is still true that in many cases the fat on the back of exhibits was nearly or quite two inches in thickness. What is wanted is a carcass with abundance of tender lean. This was found in the Suffolk carcass which won the champion prize, but even here there was too much fat covering the lean. The carcass weighed 102 pounds, the live sheep fasted weighing 164 pounds, so that a little more than sixty per cent. was carcass weight of the live weight. This sheep was a Shortwool wedder lamb, and it compared well with the first prize Longwool wedder lamb, a cross between the Suffolk and the Cheviot, which weighed seventy-nine pounds in the carcass against 125 pounds, which was the weight of the live sheep. Here the chops were good, but there was too much suet and fat in general. I do not think that excessive fat applies so much to breed in the sheep as to feed. For instance, among the carcasses which were fat enough to make a person with a delicate stomach sick, was a Scotch Blackface, which supplied fifteen pounds of suet, and which was covered with a layer of two inches of tallow over the ribs. In another case a Devon was covered with nearly two inches of solid fat."

CLEAN MILK AND THE BARNYARD.

The Illinois station claims that in the production of clean milk no one thing is of more importance than keeping the cows out of filth. Many yards into which dairy cows are turned each day for their drink and exercise are knee-deep with mud and manure during the winter and spring, if not nearly the entire year. In summer when cows are on pasture they would keep comparatively clean, were they not obliged to wade through a filthy yard going to the stable for milking. The yard should slope from the barn and be covered with gravel or cinders sufficiently deep to form a hard substance. Manure should not be allowed to accumulate against or near the barn, and no swine pen should be nearer than 200 feet, on account of the odors from it being readily absorbed by the milk.

SOMETHING BESIDES CORN.

A noted hog-breeder says: "The need of something besides corn, something to build up frame and muscle, is quite generally recognised by up-to-date breeders and feeders. What that something is to be is the question. Oats, shorts, bran, etc., are good flesh-formers, but are rather expensive if fed intensively; and most of us are feeding for profit. The only feed that is rich enough in protein, and at the same time cheap enough to be largely used in pork production is grass. So important do I deem this auxiliary ration that if I could not have pasture I would raise very few swine. The value of grass for the breed sow and the growing pig is not alone in its nutritive elements, but largely in its promotion of health and giving tone to the system, enabling the animal to give a better account of the corn it consumes. If all the hogs in the country could have the advantage of a run on grass, and plenty of pure water, the danger from swine plague would be reduced to a minimum. But on many farms no arrangement is made for hog pasture, and this is especially true on farms occupied by renters, and on such farms a very large amount of pork is produced."

CHEAP WAY TO ERADICATE STUMPS.

The following method of getting rid of stumps is recommended by the Scientific American: In the autumn bore a hole one or two inches in diameter, according to the girth of the stump, vertically in the centre of the latter, and about eighteen inches deep. Put into it one or two ounces of salt-petre; fill the hole with water and plug up close. In the ensuing spring take out plug and pour in about one-half gallon of kerosene oil and ignite it. The stump will smolder away to the very extremities of the roots, leaving nothing but ashes.

FALL SPRAYING.

Bulletin No. 254 of the State Experiment Station, at Geneva, N. Y., holds out a little prospect of relief to the orchardist who finds spring all too short to allow of thorough spraying of his scale-infested trees. The results of extensive tests seem to show that fall spraying with sulphur washes is safe upon hardier varieties of fruit trees and as effective as spring spraying, so far as scale destruction is concerned. Some of the washes tested also appear to promise a shortening of time and decrease of trouble in preparation of an effective compound.

DANDELIONS IN LAWNS.

Many a lover of a pretty lawn has tried to eradicate dandelions by cutting them out with a knife. The Maine station informs us that when we cut off the crown an inch or two below the ground we multiply the number of plants. The side roots start into business for themselves, forming new crowns. If we do not cut, the seeds give new plants, and so the extermination of dandelion is rather a hopeless task. Where it is very thick, the only thing to do is to destroy the old sod, kill out the roots and reseed heavily with grass. Where the plants are few in number, it may be just as well to imagine that they add beauty to the lawn and try to enjoy their presence. Of course they can be killed by the free use of blue vitrol, but each spot so treated will remain bare for years.

SALT FOR CHOLERA.

At a meeting of the Kansas Poultry Association Mr. E. Harrington said: "This fall Mrs. Harrington discovered that the cholera had appeared among her chickens. I had heard somewhere that there is nothing to beat salt as a disinfectant. I had the hired man clean the henhouse as clean as he could, wash it out thoroughly with just as strong brine as he could make, and fill every crack and crevice with the brine. He did so, and we haven't lost a hen since. I tried the same thing on my hogs when the cholera broke out among them, and I am satisfied that I saved a lot of them and prevented a further spread of the disease."

GREEN FOOD FOR HOGS.

The pasture is almost as important as the feed lot. If you have not the alfalfa hog pasture you should lose no time in starting one. Some sow rape for the hogs to pasture on, others sow rye, while some sow sorghum. Any green crop is better than a dry lot. Swine of all ages should be supplied with a liberal allowance of green feed and the more permanent this supply can be made the cheaper it will be and the less liability to neglect in this important feature of hog feed.

ANIMAL FOOD FOR HENS.

The use of animal food is becoming more general every day as it is better understood, but animal food alone will not give a full egg yield. Other proper foods must go with it, and the fowls must be so fed as to produce all the component parts of the body and the egg. Animal food, wheat, oats, corn and clover hay should make the hens lay, providing they are compelled to hunt and dig in straw for all the grain they get. Proper food and exercise are the needed things to have winter eggs.

MOVING LARGE TREES.

A French expert on tree-planting reports great success in moving large trees at night. He takes them up late in the evening after ten o'clock, moves them as rapidly as possible, and waters the soil and the branches bearing the buds. The results were excellent, only two of the large shade trees dying, although a number of the species were considered hard to transplant. For the first fifteen days after transplanting he advises that the boughs and leaves of the tree be abundantly sprinkled.

Panama.

It is supposed by some that Panama derived its name from the native word for butterfly. Explorers of the interior tell of swarms of butterflies which at times rise on the slopes of the mountains in dense clouds, darkening the sunshine. Others maintain that the name is from an Indian word meaning abounding in fish.

RULES FOR HOME EDUCATION.

The following rules are worthy of being printed in letters of gold, and placed in a conspicuous place in every household:

(1) From your children's earliest infancy, inculcate the necessity of instant obedience.

(2) Unite firmness with gentleness. Let your children always understand that you mean what you say.

(3) Never promise them anything unless you are quite sure you can give them what you say.

(5) Always punish your children for wilfully disobeying you, but never punish them in anger.

(6) Never let them perceive that they vex you, or make you lose your self-command.

(7) If they give way to petulance or ill temper, wait till they are calm, d then gently reason with them on the impropriety of their conduct.

(8) Remember that a little present punishment when the occasion arises is much more effectual than the threatening of a greater punishment should the fault be renewed.

(9) Never give your children anything because they cry for it.

(10) On no account allow them to do at one time what you have forbidden, under the same circumstances, at another.

(11) Teach them that the only sure and easy way to appear good is to be good.

(12) Accustom them to make their little recitals with perfect truth.

(13) Never allow tale-bearing.

(14) Teach them self-denial, not self-indulgence of an angry and resentful spirit.—Home Illustrated.

SPAIN'S WOMEN ARE ADORABLE.

What women are more adorable, so proud, so simple, so radiantly feminine? As a type, the Spanish woman of the South is unique. She is small and slender, exquisitely proportioned, with tiny, but beautifully shaped hands and feet. Her head, poised proudly on a torso of classical symmetry, is small, and her hair is black and crisp, of the bluish tint peculiar to the raven.

Her face is oval—such as Ruskin admired—finely chiselled, frank and childish; her lips full, red and pouting, her nose slightly aquiline with nervous, quivering nostrills. Her eyes, almond shaped, dark, lustrous, pensive and passionate, now flash open like globes of fire, now dreamily close as if in sadness. In her white lace shawls, and the flowers of Spain in her hair, she is quite irresistible, yet no prouder creature exists, nor less coquettish a nature.

Her love consumes her, and she would no more smoke a cigarette than she would play hockey or golf. She is simple as a bird, wayward and captious as a child; sincere, for she does not know what it is to be insincere. When she loves she will die for you; but when she hates she will slap you with a glance as keen as any dagger.

A ROYAL HONEYMOON.

The life of the royal couple at the Granja palace, writes The World correspondent in Madrid, is very regular and extremely happy. They both rise as early as 7 o'clock every morning, and after a frugal breakfast they generally pay a visit to their favorite horses in the royal stables, afterward promenading together in the splendid park.

As a rule both the King and Queen start for a gallop across the country later in the morning, followed at a respectful distance by an equerry. Exactly at noon the King and Queen return to the palace for luncheon, which is generally attended by four or five of the oldest members of the court.

After a siesta the King and Queen depart on an automobile tour, and it is not very seldom they forget to take with them Maurice, their faithful and discreet chauffeur. Dinner at La Granja is usually served at 7, after which a short conversation is held with those gentlemen and ladies of the court who have attended the dinner. As late as 10 o'clock the hour at which the sovereigns retire, they promenade alone in the park by moonlight, without consideration of court etiquette or of their temporary guests.

THE WIFE'S RIVAL.

There is one question that should come to every wife who sees her husband attracted by another woman: "Where does she charm where I do not? Does she try to please him more than I have done? Is the suggestion funeral only? What is the unconscious need back of this outcome of it; the thing that I have unconsciously failed in? Why should any one have more attraction for him, more power over him, than his own wife?"

And one thing is certain—if his regard is failing you under the conditions of life that you are now both living under, change them—never keep on under any conditions that are futile of result. By some means, in some way, get out of the rut. Give him some other interest, other company, a fad, anything to take up the mind or his attention so that this other or hurtful interest may be crowded out. Plan for it as you never planned before. A fishing trip will cut out the dawning passion for almost any woman. Even figuring over an impossible canoe or an impossible sailboat with a yachting magazine and a couple of enthusiastic nautical friends will supply a counter attraction through many winter evenings.—Mary Stewart Cutting in Harper's Bazar.

TO STAY-AT-HOMES.

A change of air and scene is very desirable, but all of us cannot have these luxuries. Luxuries they are, though there has grown up an idea that they are necessities. Let those of us who perforce stay at home console ourselves with two reflections. First, that our forefathers never dreamed of shutting up and leaving their homes for weeks at a time, and yet they lived in comfort and died at a ripe old age. Second, that whether we get through the summer comfortably or not depends much more on ourselves than on our surroundings. A nervous, fretful woman will let the heat wear her out quite as much at the mountains or seashore as if she had never left home. A serene habit of mind and determination to make the best of things will carry one triumphantly through the hot days and over the weary nights, even if they must be spent among bricks instead of by rolling waves or rustling trees. —Harper's Bazar.

AS TOLD BY GIRLS' VOICES.

Every now and then you hear of a girl's voice, low and sweet and so perfectly modulated that you wonder why there aren't more women who cultivate their speaking voices.

Nothing so definitely marks the distinction between culture and the lack of it as a voice. And nothing is a much better index to character.

Listen to voices anywhere you happen to be—at a tea, or in a shop, and notice how one voice will be nasal, another shrill, one throaty, another low, but coarse and think what a difference it would make if each woman would pay only as much attention to her voice as she does to her manicuring, for instance.

A beautiful face is often marred by the sharp voice that accompanies it, and seems so oddly mismated.

The constant use of slang has an actual physical effect upon voices which is anything but agreeable. You almost never find a hard voice with anyone who uses beautiful English. Slang coarsens the voice, giving it a sharp quality that is as unpleasant as the stream of slang itself.

DIET FOR THE COMPLEXION.

A beauty specialist the other day well versed in the laws of hygiene said: "No wine or spirit, no beer, no tea, plenty of fruit, eating an apple first thing in the morning and a tumbler of water the last thing at night." Plenty of vegetables of the more common sort were recommended as wholesome, such as carrots, cabbage, beet root, watercress and similar simple fare. White meats, and not too much of them, plenty of fish, are enjoined, and no highly spiced or cooked-up dishes. Above all, we are to pay attention to the bath; a tepid one must be taken daily. A little common vinegar is not bad in it, with sage leaves soaked therein. Some salt is another good thing, and a few drops of tincture of myrrh.

WOMEN WATCH BUYERS.

Greater than ever, jewellers say, is the demand for women's watches this year. Why this should be the purveyors have not undertaken to explain. Of course, with woman's position of increasing importance in the affairs of the business world she practises more frequently the virtue of punctuality.

The increased sale of tiny timepieces, however, cannot be accounted for through that circumstance, for the varieties that are being sold are of the small, showy sort that are pinned on the front of the dress, where the actual wearer cannot see them.—Jewellers' Circular-Weekly.

CUTTING EYELASHES.

An eyelash is pointed. A cut lash is blunt. A lash once cut never again becomes pointed. Every lash lives a variable time and then falls out, to be replaced by a fresh one. When a cut lash so falls the newcomer is pointed. So any mischief resulting from cutting the lashes will be remedied by time.

Opinions differ as to whether lash cutting promotes growth. That it renders the lashes unsightly is very certain.

THE AMEER'S LADY DOCTOR.

The late Ameer of Afghanistan, Abdurahman, for several years employed a woman physician, Dr. Lillias Hamilton. His successor, Habibullah, has recently engaged another, Dr. Alice Van Ingen Winter, who with her daughter, a trained nurse, and a woman compainon, has just taken up her residence at Cabul.

Democratic Primary Election

Acting under instructions of a mass meeting of the people of Chilton county, held at the Court House, Clanton, Saturday, July 21, 1906, we, the Democratic Executive Committee of Chilton county, hereby order a Primary Election of the white voters of Chilton county to be held at the several voting places in the county, on for the purpose of nominating a Representative in the Legislature, a Sheriff, one Commissioner for the First District of Chilton county, and one Commissioner for the Second District of said county, one Executive Committeeman from each Beat, and six Delegates to the State Democratic Convention, Sept. 10, 1906.

All qualified white voters, irrespective of any and all previous political affiliations, are cordially invited to participate in said primary election.

J. C. DENNIS, Chairman.

Fifteenth Senatorial Primary

A primary election is hereby called for the purpose of nominating a Democratic candidate for Senator from the Fifteenth Senatorial District of Alabama, to be held on the 27th day of August, 1906, under the rules and regulations already adopted for the holding of State and County primaries.

Candidates for said office will be voted for on the county tickets and the candidate receiving a plurality of the votes cast will be declared the nominee.

J. C. DENNIS, Chairman.
L. N. BOWDEN, Secretary.

At a meeting of the Senatorial Democratic Executive Committee of the Fifteenth Senatorial District, held at Clanton on the 21st day of July, 1906, J. C. Dennis of Clanton, Chilton county, was elected chairman and R. E. Bowden of Shelby, was elected secretary.

The following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, That a primary election be held on August 27, 1906, for the nomination of a candidate for State Senator from the Fifteenth Senatorial District under the rules and regulations adopted for the holding of State and County primaries on said day; and that names to be voted for be placed on the County ballot in the respective counties.

Resolved, That a plurality of the votes cast shall nominate.

Resolved, That each candidate for said office be assessed fifteen dollars for the expense of said call and election.

Resolved, That the Chairman shall certify to the County Chairman the names of candidates entitled to be voted for at said primary.

The meeting adjourned subject to the call of the Chairman.

J. C. DENNIS, Chairman.
R. E. BOWDEN, Secretary.

But a short time ago and San Francisco was destroyed by an earthquake, and now the Pacific coast is again the scene of another fearful catastrophe. Valparaiso, the principal seaport of the South American republic, Chili, was visited by an earthquake in which, it is said, some 3000 people lost their lives and over one hundred million dollars worth of property was destroyed.

Monday next winds up the first part of the campaign of 1906, and the nominations will be made for the Democratic party. On page 8 of this paper will be found a complete ticket—st t: and county—so that every voter may inform himself as to the candidates and mark his ballot accordingly.

It has been an interesting campaign, and we are glad to say has been conducted on fair and decen lines, especially so far as Chilton is concerned.

Howard S. Doster, for the State Senate, having no opposition, will of course poll a full vote, while we believe Wm. B. Craig has the full confidence of the voters of the county and district.

For the honor and glory of Chilton we expect a full vote for Samuel M. Adams for Commissioner of Agriculture.

For the Governorship we anticipate a large majority for B. B. Comer; Henry B. Gray for Lieut. Governor; Alex M. Garber for Attorney General; Horace Hood for State Auditor; Frank N. Julian for Secretary of State; Walter D. Seed for State Treasurer, Harry C. Gunnells, for Supt. of Education, Samuel M. Adams for Commissioner of Agriculture; H. C. Compton and Henry A. Skeggs, Jr., for Associate Railroad Commissioners; Samuel D. Weakley for Chief Justice; J. R. Dowdell and W. L. Parks for Associate Justices. John B. Knox and Joseph F. Johnston will get a majority of the votes of Chilton county.

With the county ticket you are fully familiar and your selection will meet with the approval of your fellow citizens.

Let us have a good big vote!

R. H. CLARKE TO DEMOCRATIC VOTERS.

Mobile, August 8th, 1906.

In presenting my name to the Democratic voters of Alabama for nomination as alternate for the United States Senate, it seems proper to put before them some statement of my public service rendered while representing the first district of Alabama in Congress.

I entered the 51st Congress, convening December 1st, 1899, and served also in the 52d, 53d, and 54th Congresses, ending March 4, 1897.

During that period I served on the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

I think I can safely say that I gave new appropriation for Mobile Harbor, the only port in Alabama, and to the rivers of the state.

MOBILE HARBOR.

Appropriations for four terms preceeding mine	$ 685,000
For my four terms	1,983,500
For four terms succeeding mine	1,400,000

I got the project for the harbor placed upon the footing of a depth of 23 feet, a width of 280 feet, at the top, and 100 feet at the bottom with appropriate slope. The provision for 100 feet at the bottom with appropriate slope was most important, and has furnished the basis for subsequent appropriations. The vast increase in the commerce of Mobile furnishes the best standard for estimate of the importance and value of my work. I also secured an appropriation of $60,000 to light the channel.

ALABAMA RIVER.

For four terms preceeding mine	$ 65,000
For my four terms	180,000
For subsequent four terms	170,000

COOSA RIVER.

For four terms preceeding mine	$238,700
For my four terms	850,000
For subsequent four terms	80,000

TEN'SEE RIVER BELOW CHATTANOOGA

For four terms preceeding mine	$1,112,500
For my four terms	1,425,000
For subsequeno four terms	1,000,000

MOUTH OF TOMBIGBEE RIVER TO TUSCALOOSA—LOCKS AND DAMS

I commenced this work, causing the lock and dam at McGrew's Shoals to be begun, believing it best to begin at the bottom and work to the top, so as to utilize each stretch of the river as improved. I secured $560,000 for it during my four terms

TOMBIGBEE, DEMOPOLIS TO COLUMBUS BY VIENNA.

For four terms preceeding mine	$ 71,250
For my four terms	150,000
For subsequent four terms	20,600

It is not intended in giving these figures to make invidious comparisons. It works injustice to measure efficiency by results obtained under widely different conditions. My predecessor, Hon. James T. Jones, was an active representative, and did excellent work. Mr. Taylor and Mr. Bankhead have done splendidly for Mobile harbor. Mr. Bankhead carried on magnificently the lock and dam work on the Tombigbee and Warrior rivers which I caused to be commenced. He has done a great work for Alabama as my successor on the River and Harbors Committee.

I present my work in figures only to show that I availed myself to the utmost of the opportunity given me to secure proper rivers and harbor appropriations for Alabama.

RURAL FREE MAIL DELIVERY.

I introduced the first bill ever offered in Congress to provide for the delivery of rural mails.

On the 16th of March, 1904, Mr. Flood, a member of Congress from Virginia, made a speech in the House of Representatives, refuting the claim of Republican speakers that the Republican party is entitled to to the credit of the ignauguration of this system. It is published in the Congressional Record of March 18, 1904. In it Mr. Flood says:

"The first bill that was presented to Congress on this subject was introduced in this House on the 5th of January, 1892, by Mr. Clarke, a Democrat from Alabama, and provided for the collection and delivery of mails in the rural districts. This bill, with others which followed it on the same line, was referred to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads; and in May of that year that Committee reported a bill to this House authorizing the Post Master General to make experiments in free delivery of mail matter in rural districts."

Mr. Flood in the same speech, stated that the first appropriation for the carriage of such mails was made upon the motion of Mr. Watson of Georgia. That was on the 17th of February, 1863, more than thirteen months after the introduction of my bill, which, with the report on it, paved the way for the appropriation upon Mr. Watson's motion.

I can justly claim the credit of having taken the first practical action to put in operation this great educational agency, now working so much good all over Alabama.

GRANT TO ALABAMA OF MOUNT VERNON RESERVATION.

When the United States withdrew the troops from the Mount Vernon Military Post, I conceived the idea of securing a grant of the property to Alabama; it would otherwise have been sold.

I introduced a bill to that effect, and it became a law on the 1st of March, 1895.

By it all the lands belonging to the Mount Vernon Barracks Military Reservation with all the improvements thereon were granted by the United States to Alabama without a cent of cost.

This was done without suggestion from anyone. The State is now using the property as an adjunct to to the Insane Hospital. The value and importance of this grant is best shown by the following letter from Dr. Searcy, the eminent superintendant of the Alabama Insane Hospitals:

"Tuscaloosa, Ala., Aug. 6 1906.

My Dear Sir:

I think so highly of the Mount Vernon property, as a place for the care of the insane negroes of the state, I hardly know how much to estimate its money value. It would certainly have required an expenditure of as much as $150,000 to have made equal provision at Tuscaloosa for the 325 patients we now have at the Mount Vernon Hospital.

There are about 1800 acres of land belonging to the place, much of it covered with excellent timber estimated at 5,000,000 feet. We have now brought one hundred acres into good cultivation. The "old garrison" for soldiers within a high brick wall inclosing about thirty acres, we use, with additions, for the housing and accommodation of the patients. Withal, this makes a most desirable, valuable and attractive place for the purpose for which the Legislature devoted it after it was granted to the state.

In my opinion, you did the state an inestimable public service, when you secured, without cost, this valuable property. Sincerely,

J. T Searcy, Supt. Ala. Insane Hospitals."

I submit that the services I have rendered fairly guarantee further efficient service from me if I shall be honored with the nomination I seek.

OUR CHOICE FOR CONGRESS.

The editor of the Hot Blast has carefully weighed the qualifications of the two candidates for congress in this district, and, having done so, considers it his duty to personally espouse the cause and through the columns of his paper urge the nomination of one of the number.

It is the province of newspapers to editorially endorse the candidacy of one man during a party primary, but it is seldom done. The reason of this is obvious—the newspaper proprietor feels that it is not to his financial interests to be a partisan, for in advocating the nomination of one man he loses the patronage of the other.

But a journalist must sometimes be influenced by other considerations. If he knows that one candidate is moral, upright and conscientious in the discharge of his public duties; if he knows that candidate to be a representative influential citizen, held in high repute by his own people; if he knows him to be true to his party and his own convictions of right, and that he is in every way competent to discharge the duties of the office he seeks, while the other candidate is without these qualifications, it is certainly his duty to espouse the cause of the one against that of the other.

The Hot Blast knows Mr. W. B. Craig to be a pure, able, upright, moral citizen of Dallas county. He has the official endorsements of the Democratic organizations of his city and county; from what we are able to learn he has the support of at least eight-tenths of his home people, showiug the high esteem in which he is held by those who intimately know him; he has been a success as a legislator, having represented Dallas, one of the largest, richest and most populous of our counties, in the state senate; he is a young man of prepossessing appearance and strong personal magnetism; a splendid specimen of physical manhood; is free from all those dissapations which frequently wreck young men; his mind is strong, alert, well poised and he has within his heart the principles of a statesman. Should Mr. Craig go to Congress, he will be the youngest member from Alabama and one of the youngest in the house. With each year he will grow in strength, popularity and influence and soon become a power in the halls of Congress and be able to secure much government aid for this district.

The Hot Blast thinks him a worthy successor of our own Mr Bowie.

Of Mr. Clarke, who is contesting the honors with Mr. Craig, we will have nothing to say other than that he would not properly represent this district in Congress should unfortunate circumstances send him there.

Of his qualifications the public can easily apprise themselves

VOTE FOR WALTER D. SEED.

Tuscaloosa, Ala., Aug. 15th, 1906

My Dear Sir:—

I am a candidate for the Democratic nomination for State Treasurer. In the last contest for this position, I was within a very few votes of the nomination. It was generally considered throughout the State that the recognition given my candidacy then, entitled me to the nomination at this time. I have been an announced candidate for seven months without opposition. On the next to the last day allowed for entries, my present opponent was announced. It will be impossible for me at this late day to reach many of the voters either in person or by letter.

I am a farmer and a merchant. I favor a proper revision and reduction of freight rates, and a fair and just assessment of railroad properties.

Having worked for my own education from the age of thirteen, and having served as a number of years as a member of the Board of Education for the public schools of this my native place, I appreciate the importance and necessity for liberal appropriations for public schools, that the opportunity for an education may be placed within the reach of every white boy and girl in Alabama. I favor legislation looking to the comfort and support of the Confederate Veterans.

The published report of the examiner shows that my books as county treasurer were unusually neatly kept to the cent during my term of four years. My experience as County Treasurer should be of service to me as treasurer of the State.

Knowing that you hold the confidence of your acquaintences and as such that you are necessarily a man of influence, I solict your support, and hope you will look after my interests in your neighborhood, if you think me worthy.

Very respectfully,
Walter D. Seed.

Letter to C. R. Mullins.
Clanton, Ala.

Dear Sir: Your business is, when a house burns down, to give the owner some money to build a new one. It is a good business. Queer that the world got on so long without it.

We paint the one that burnt down and the new one too. What is better, we paint the houses that don't burn down.

You insure the houses that burn; we insure the houses that don't. You have the ashes and smoke; all the houses are ours.

We paint lead-and-zinc; Devoe. We sell the paint to painters; we don't paint.

Lead-and-oil is the old fashion paint. Devoe is zinc ground in with lead and linseed oil: the best paint in the world: and the cheapest, because it takes fewer gallons than mixed paints and it wears twice as long as lead-and-oil. No body wants poor paint; there's lots of it, though, in the world.

A. M. Griffin, of Plainfield, N. J. writes:

"Mr. Aaron Higgins, of Plainfield, always used 15 gallons of mixed paint for his house. Last Spring he bought 15 gallons of Devoe and had 4 gallons left."

Yours truly,
F. W. Devoe & Co.

TO THE VOTERS OF CHILTON.

I think that we should consider well before we vote for representative, who is the most competent man. Mr. F. A. Gulledge will represent the whole people regardless of political creed, and he is looking well to his county for what will be the best for the whole people, not a few. He has carried out his own business well and he will do well for our county if we send him; he will make laws to bear on all alike, and he is a man that will keep his word, regardless of political creed. I think that he is the man, for he is looking forward to the welfare of his county. So let us turn out on the day of election and elect him. With these few lines I will close.

On Aug. 16, 1906, the death angel visited the home of our beloved brother, Green Mims, and removed from their midst their sweet little baby, Essie Charles, which budded on earth to bloom in heaven. Oh, may the comforting influence of the Holy Spirit ever be with them to help them to realize that their loss was heaven's gain. The remains were taken to Shiloh church cemetery for interment.

May they all endeavor to meet on the peaceful shore.

There is nothing so pleasant as that bright, cheerful at-peace-with-the-world feeling when you sit down to your breakfast. There is nothing so conductive to good work and good results. The healthy man with a healthy mind and body is a better fellow, a better workman, a better citizen than the man or woman who is handicapped by some disability, however slight. A slight disorder of the stomach will derange your body, your thoughts and your dispositon. Get away from the morbidness and the blues. Keep your stomach in tune and both your brain and body will respond. Little indiscretions of overeating can be easily corrected and you will be surprised to see how much better man you are. HERBINE

The Popular Liver Medicine Will Keep You Well

A GUARANTEED CURE for all diseases produced by TORPID LIVER and IMPURE BLOOD. Do not fill your system with Arsenic, Calomel and Quinine. They act as rank poisons which vitiate the blood, debilitate the system, and leave a trail of bad symptoms which require years to obliterate. HERBINE is purely vegetable and contains no mineral or narcotic poisons, is absolutely harmless and is the simple remedy of nature. It carries off all poison in the system and leaves no injurious effects.

CURED BY HERBINE AFTER OTHER REMEDIES FAILED

Mr. L. A. Hicks, Iredell, Texas, says: "I was sick in bed for eight months with liver trouble, the doctor seemed to do me no good. I was told to try Herbine, and it cured me in a short time. I cannot recommend this wonderful medicine too highly."

Entire Business Section of Valparaiso in Ruins. Property loss of Millions.

PANIC REIGNS ON THE STREETS.

Thousands Are Fleeing From Stricken Cities and Many Seek Refuge on Ships in Harbor.

Galveston, Tex.—Valapraiso has been wrecked by earthquake and fire, and the few buildings that escaped serious damage from the quakes have either burned or are in immediate danger of being burned. The people are panic stricken and all attempts at organization have proven futile. Martial law has been proclaimed and an effort is being made to calm the people, but with little hope, as the earthquake shocks still continue, five shocks being felt Saturday, although not so frequent, but enough to keep the people in a state of terror.

Great confusion and contradiction prevail with regard to the number of dead and wounded as a result of the earthquake and fire at Valparaisc. The dispatches reaching here evidently come from sources more or less in a condition of panic, and are not wholly trustworthy. According to the dispatch from Santiago fully 5,000 people lost their lives in the Valparaiso disaster.

Santiago also suffered severely. Thirty people were killed there, and the property loss is placed at $2,000,000.

Another message places the number of dead at 500, while a third dispatch from Santiago via Buenos Ayres places the number of killed and wounded at 1,000.

The people are in the grip of fear of further shocks and are fleeing.

Refugee from Valparaiso are getting into Santiago, forty-two miles away.

The disturbances have covered a large area. Shocks were felt in Tacna. A number of minor towns have been either destroyed or materially damaged. Valparaiso has been described as "nearly destroyed," while another message says half that city has become a prey to the earthquake and flames.

The loss of life and property was undoubtedly very heavy.

Telegraphic communication has been established with Chile.

The first shock occurred Thursday evening about 8 o'clock, and was followed by others at intervals throughout the night. Panic prevailed and the streets were filled with hysterical, wailing and praying people. Half the inhabitants of Santiago stayed on the streets and fled to the country Thursday night. Fires followed in Santiago, but were quickly extinguished by a providential heavy downpour. Valparaiso suffered much from fire. Many people have left the two cities, and the stream of refugees continues.

The disturbances are confined to the Pacific slope of the Andes, but Iquique, the center of the nitrate industry, has escaped injury. The disturbance was recorded by seismographs in Washington, Honolulu, Hamburg and Goettingen.

Various firms in Europe and America with business interests in Chile have receved messages announcing the safety of employes.

Among the places reported to have been damaged or destroyed are Vine del Mar, of 12,000, three miles from Valparaiso; Quilpque and Limache, of 4,000 people each, both in Valparaiso province; Quotilla, six miles from Valparaiso; Ilapel, 5,000 people, 130 miles northest of Santiago; Vallenar, 5,000 people, 300 miles north of Santiago, and other small towns.

Houses in Valapraiso and Santiago, as well as other towns in Chile, are built to withstand earthquakes. They are made of stone with thick walls, and are seldom more than two stories high. They are therefore not very combustible, as was the case in San Francsco.

Arrested for Intimidating Laborers.

Knoxville, Tenn.—A special to the Sentinel from Pineville, Ky., says:

Five of the Bell Jellico coal miners, who are on strike, have been placed under arrest charged with intimidating and deceiving Greeks into joining the miners' union and aiding the strike. The arrested men are Starling Rickett, Frank Amos, Robert Amos Alex Dosier and Buren Lester. Their trials have been set for next Tuesday. The mines are still shut down and miners are walking the streets of Pineville. Everything is peaceable, and it is believed will remain so, though arrests may continue. The men made bond easily.

Longworths at Oyster Bay.

Oyster Bay.—Representative and Mrs. Longworth left Oyster Bay for Washington, where they will make a brief stay, and then go to Cincinnati.

Shaw Visits Treasury.

New York.—Secretary Shaw was a visitor at the sub-treasury. He expressed satisfaction with the financial conditions of the world.

STATE OF TERROR.

Serious Revolution in Northern Provinces, Where One Town Was Pillaged.

Cape Haytien, Hayti.—A serious revolution, according to advices received here by courier, has begun in Santo Domingo. Revolutionary bands under the command of General Navarro are said to have landed near Reviere and to have attacked and captured Dajabon, which was pillaged and abandoned after twenty persons had been killed.

The revolutionists are now said to be near Guayabin and to be marching on to Monti Christi.

The arrival of General Deschamps is anxiously awaited by the revolutionists. It is understood that he will assume command of the forces and operate against the government in favor of former President Jiminez.

A state of anarchy prevails in the northern part of Santo Domingo. All commerce with the interior has been stopped and traffic in the northern districts has been prohibited.

Nine Yachts Entered.

Chicago, Ill.—Nine yachts expected to start in the first race in the 1906 Lipton cup series here. The list of entries includes an unusually fleet lot of racers, and close contests are anticipated. The boats carried the pennants of the Royal Hamilton Yacht Club, Hamilton, Ont.; the Toledo Yacht Club, the Milwaukee Yacht Club, the Chicago Athletic Association, the New Illinois Athletic Club and the Columbia Yacht Club. Many visitors are here.

The contest was over a triangular course, two miles to the leg, twice around. The second race was three miles to the windward or leeward and return, twice around, and the third sailed over an equiltaral course of three miles to the leg.

Forcing Police to Resign.

St. Petersburg.—Since the acute revival of terrorism the ministry of the interior has been flooded with complaints forwarded by chiefs of police in all parts of the empire to the effect that the police are resigning by the wholesale, and it is evident that if this state of affairs continues it may compel a complete displacement of police by the troops. The cabinet has given serious attention to the situation in Poland, and the question of dispatching considerable reinforcements of troops there and sending out punitive expeditions has been discussed, but no decision has been reached.

The monarchist organizations, most of which are classed by the liberals as black hands, are trying to arrange a national congress at Kieff, with the view of placing tickets in the field for the parliamentary elections, which it is now believed will be held in November.

Acquires New Roads.

San Francisco, Cal.—The Southern Pacific officials paid over $1,000,000 to close a deal made five or six weeks ago, by which the Southern Pacific comes into possession of the Coosbay, Roseburg and Estern roal in Southeastern Oregon.

The transaction is one of the biggest deals since the fire affecting San Francisco capitalists. It means a pronounced and distinct development of the Harriman plans to have two trunk lines between San Francisco and Portland, the same as there is between this city and Los Angeles.

The road the Southern Pacific has just bought starts from Marshfield and runs in a souhern direction to Mrytle Point, a short disance from the California and Oregon line. By the way of Mdyle Point, Marshfield and Drain, Harriman and his associates expect soon to develop a north coast line from San Francisco to Portland. Between Drain and Portland the present Mount Shasta line will be used.

Major Leon Bailey Dead.

Jackson, Miss.—Major Leon Bailey, a member of Governor Vardaman's military staff and one of the best known traveling men in the state, died at the Jackson Sanatorium from a complication of kidney and liver troubles. The remains were sent home to Winona for interment.

Strikers Stone Train.

New York.—A cable dispatch to a morning paper from Buenos Ayres says:

While Mr. Root and a party were reurning Thursday from the Chascomus ranch strikers stoned the train, breaking three windows in Mr. Root's car and wounding the minister of agriculture in the neck. Several others of the party were slightly injured. The police are making an investigation.

Goes Aground.

Hamburg.—The Hamburg-American line steamer Pretoria, from New York, grounded in the Elbe Saturday. Tugs are assisting the steamer.

No Bugs There.

Jackson, Miss.—Professor Bamberg arrived in Jackson and expected to have samples of suspicious bugs from Hattiesburg and Perry county to work on, but did not, and the question is still in doubt. Professor Bamberg has had hundreds of samples of bugs sent to him for classification, but so far not one has proven the real bug. It is not believed here that there is a boll weevil in Mississippi.

CASE OF YOUNG CHISOLM.

To Be Arraigned Before Commissioner Monday.

Birmingham, Ala.—Alexander B. Chisolm, the young defaulting paying teller of the First National Bank of this city, has been since his arrest spending his time in the hotels of the city under the custody of the United States marshal. The young man had a large circle of acquaintances and friends in the city, nearly all of whom have called on him since his misfortune and expressed their sympathy.

Chisolm himself is apparently in a much more cheerful frame of mind and better physical condition than at any time since his arrest, and it is stated that his general outlook on his condition is much more cheerful than it was at first. Some member of his family is with him practically all of the day.

An important announcement was made by Assistant United States District Attorney N. L. Steele. He states that efforts will be made to convict stock exchange proprietors as well as the young teller. Against the teller is the charge of embezzling funds of a national bank and against the stock exchange people "aiding and abetting the embezzlement of funds of a national bank."

When the preliminary trial is called next Monday before United States Commissioner Watts it is expected that there will be many people on hand to hear the testimony. While it is believed that the defendants will waive examination and give bond for their appearance before the grand jury, there are some who think that witnesses will be placed on the stand. The district attorneys have secured the books of the cotton exchanges and have gathered together the entries and charges off in the case in particular. It is not denied that Chosolm did his "trading" in another name than that of his own.

Will Recognize Leishman.

Washington, D. C.—John G. A. Leishman, the recently appointed American ambassador to Turkey, has been received cordially by the Turkish minister of foreign affairs, and there is no disposition on the part of the Turkish government not to recognize Mr. Leishman as ambassador, according to dispatches received at the state department. Mr. Leishman also advised the state department that the sultan is so far recovered that he is able to attend to religious services, but as yet is not receiving visitors.

Cannot Import Mexican Laborers.

Washington, D. C.—Acting Attorney-General Charles H. Robb has rendered an opinion to the effect that Mexican laborers could not be imported into Texas under contract for work on railroads in that state and other public construction work, and that the men hereafter so admitted will be returned to Mexico.

Lose Big Suit.

Washington, D. C.—An important case, involving the claim of the Hormiguero Company for $678,948 damages, has been decided by the Spanish treaty claims commission practically adverse to the claimants. All of the claims were rejected but $10,000, which was allowed from some minor matters. Commissioner M. W. Maurey dissented from the opinion of the commission.

Hat Factory Destroyed by Fire.

Orange, N. J.—A fire which followed a violent explosion destroyed the hat factory of Fred Cummings Son & Co., causing a loss of about $300,000 and throwing 500 persons out of employment. Two fires of mysterious origin did considerable damage some time ago. Members of the firm said that they had received no threats from any source and could offer no explanation why any one would wish to burn their plant.

Cruiser St. Louis in Commission.

Philadelphia, Pa.—The United States cruiser St. Louis, built by the Nefie & Levy Shipbuilding Company, was placed in commission at the League Island navy yard with the usual ceremonies. The cruser is commanded by Capt. H. R. Usher.

Aged Woman Killed on Stairway.

New Orleans, La.—Mrs. Isabel Smith Van Benthuysen, aged 62 years, member of an old and prominent family, slipped on he stairway of her home and sustained internal injuries from which she died almost immediately. She leaves two daughters, Mrs. McCrea, of Norfolk, Va., and Mrs. Ross Halford, of thi city.

Not an American.

St. Petersburg.—It has been definotely ascertained that Anna Smrnoff, the young woman who was whipped by men of the chevalier guards, has no American connections. She is a local dressmaker.

Two Killed in Texas Feud.

Houston, Tex.—A special from Columbus says two men have been killed there in a recent outbreak of the Reese-Townsend-Burford feud. John Tarleson cut the throat of E. C. Pinchback and was in turn shot by Ned Burford, a cousin of Pinchback, and son of former Sheriff Burford. Pinchback died in an hour and Tarleson's body was found in the bushes near the scene of the trouble.

ALABAMA GLEANINGS.

Items of Interest Gathered as They Transpire Over the Entire State.

Cotton Seed $18 Per Ton.

Pell City, Ala.—State Business Agent S. F. Parker, who is in charge of the statistical department of the Farmers' Union, has just completed his estimate of the number of tons of cotton seed that will be held by members of the union over the amount required for planting and feeding purposes.

The state agent has pledges from the individual members amounting to 83,524 tons that will not be put upon the market until the minimum price of $18 per ton is reached or an exchange price be agreed upon by which the membership can secure an equivalent in value in cotton seed meal or higher grade fertilizer.

This question was discussed at some length last March at Clanton, when some of the facts were brought to light. The farmers never realized the extent of the robbery until it occurred to them that they had sold their cotton seed at $12 per ton and were paying $28 per ton for meal. Upon discovery of the enormous amount they were losing they at once demanded $18 per ton.

The difference of $6 per ton on 83,524 tons of seed amounts to $501,144 or a sum sufficient to build and equip a ware house in every county in the state.

Better Mail Service.

Tuscaloosa, Ala.—Tuscaloosa will soon have two more daily mails on the Mobile and Ohio railroad between here and Columbus, Miss.

The following general order has been received by Miss Margaret Miller, postmistress: "The department has ordered service in trains 23 and 24 to be extended to begin and end at Tuscaloosa, Ala., instead of Columbus, Miss. Commencing with train 23, Monday, August 20, the service in Montgomery and Artesia R. P. O., in trains 23 and 24, will be extended from Columbus, Miss., to Tuscaloosa daily. This will make a double daily service over that portion of the line between Tuscaloosa and Aresia, Miss."

New Bank.

Gadsden, Ala.—The Ashville Savings Bank, of Ashville, St. Clair county, a new banking institution, opened its doors for business on Monday, August 20. The bank begins business in its own new building, which was erected for the purpose and is provided with all modern conveniences. The institution has a capital stock of $25,000, and its stockholders are some of that county's most substantial citizens. The officers are: James L. Herring, president; Dr. J. B. Bass, vice-president; Dr. W. A. Beason, second vice-president; A. K. Semour, cashier. The establishment of a bank at the capital of St. Clair county will fill a long felt need.

Small Fire at Ashcraft Mills.

Florence, Ala.—Nine bales of cotton were destroyed and other damage done at the Ashcraft cotton mills in East Florence by a conflagration which was discovered between 9 and 10 p. m. The fire was discovered by the night watchman in making his rounds and the alarm given before it had made much headway, and the prompt use of the sprinkling apparatus saved the plant from destruction. The origin of the fire is not known. It started in a mattress, it is believed, from a bolt or piece of iron which became heated and had probably been smoldering for several hours. The estimated loss was about $800 and was covered by insurance.

Killed by Accidental Shot.

Decatur, Ala.—Herbert, the 4-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hames, was accidentally shot late Friday afternoon by his aunt, Miss Annie King, a young woman about 17 years of age. The little fellow died a few hours after the shooting.

Rebate Checks Are Distributed.

New York.—According to the temporary agreement recently reached relative to he dispute between the public and the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company over a double fare to Coney Island, rebate checks were distributed to Coney Island passengers by the elevated and surface lines of the company.

Never Touched Him.

Libau.—Revolutionists ambushed Baron Von Schroeder, the assistant district chief. They fired at his carriage and wounded the baron's coachman and a soldier, but Von Schroeder was not touched.

Educational Rally at Dora.

Dora, Ala.—An educational rally was held at the school house here Thursday night. Among the out-of-town speakers present were Professor Lamar, county superintendent of education of this county; Professor McAdory, county superintendent of education of Jefferson county, and Major Gorman, of Birmingham. Quite an enthusiastic meeting was held.

COMMITS SUICIDE.

James Jackson Fires Bullet Through His Heart on Farm Near Athens.

Athens, Ala.—James Jackson, one of the most prominent and wealthy farmers in this county, shot and killed himself at his residence on his rich landed estate in the west part of the county. He was a man worth many thousands and was a successful planer. He wrote a note while at his dinner table and left it with his family, saying to them as he left the room, "Do what I have said in that note." He then went to his room and immediately the family were startled by a gunshot, and rushing to his room found him dead by his own hand, having fired a 44 bullet through his heart.

He was a very large man, jolly and popular with his neighbors. He was about 45 years of age, and there is no known reason for his suicide. He and a brother attempted to set up a will they claimed was left by their father, who died some months ago, and the trial was long drawn out here and resulted in some ugly facts being brought out, and the jury declined to admit the will as the will of their father, and then suits were filed by a sister, asking for an accounting of the estate of the father, and it is said this preyed on the mind of the man until it is presumed he had rather face heath than he result of the trial He leaves a large family.

President Niel Names Committees.

Selma, Ala.—President R. E. L. Niel, of the Alabama Press Association, has mailed to the members of that body a circular letter announcing the different standing committees of the association for the ensuing year. The membership of the three standing committees is as follows:

Executive Committee—R. E. L. Niel, chairman ex-officio; Jacob Pepperman, secretary, ex-officio; M. W. Camper, Florence; A. B. Kennedy, Montgomery; Frank W. Barnett, Birmingham; H. M. Wilson, Opelika; F. L. McKenzie, Tallassee; W. D. Sowell, Brewton; W. H. H. Judson, Bessemer.

Legislative Committee—A. W. Holstun, Lafayette, chairman; R. H. Walker, Athens; Max Hamburger, Jr., Mobile.

Will Suppress Bucket Shops.

Gadsden, Ala.—At the next regular meeting of the city council measures will be taken to suppress the bucket shops in Gadsden and will very likely follow along the lines taken by the Birmingham authorities. Not long ago the privilege tax on this business was raised, and now, in obedience to public sentiment, the council probably decide that no stock exchange or cotton exchange can do business in this city. One of the aldermen is now framing an ordinance that is of the drag-net variety.

Calls It Blackmail.

Monroe, La.—Capt. L. D. McLain, president of the Monroe National Bank and one of the wealthiest citizens of North Louisiana, was arrested upon a charge of an alleged attempted criminal assault on Miss Rosa Vinson, a pretty hotel clerk. He was released on $750 bond.

He denies the charge and says it is an attempt as blackmail. The young lady belongs to a good family and has borne a good reputation. She says he accosted her in the hotel hack when she was leaving the hotel for her home.

Seven Persons Burned.

Chicago, Ill.—Seven persons were burned, three so severely that they may die, when a gasoline stove blew up in the home of Mrs. Annie Kaniel, 1142 Lyndale avenue, and the flames swept over the members of the two families seated at the breakfast table.

Elder members of the two families almost gave up their lives to save the children, and as a result are in a hospital suffering from terrible burns. Three of the injured are severely burned, and at St. Ann's Hospital it was said their condition is serious.

Rockefeller Seriously Sick.

Cleveland, O.—John D. Rockefeller, the oil king, is severely ill and is confined to his bed. Dr. Biggar, his physician, who accompanied him to Europe recently, reports that his patient is suffering from throat trouble. Mr. Rockefeller had intended to be host to fifty passenger agents, but when they arrived at Forest Hill they were informed that Mr. Rockefeller was too ill to receive them.

Thousands of Greeks Leave Bulgaria.

Sofia.—Six thousand Greek families, fearing excesses, have left Bulgaria and taken refuge at Adrianople, where the authorities welcome them.

Investigate Whipping of Russian Girl.

St. Petersburg.—Both Prime Minister Stolypin and War Minister Rudyger are receiving many letters demanding the punished of officers and sailors, chevalier guards, concerned in the whipping of Anna Smyrnoff, and the newspapers continue to be filled with indignant articles on the subject. M. Stolypin has ordered an investigation. The girl is in a hospital and her condition is reported serious.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR AUGUST 26.

Subject: The Rich Young Ruler, Mark x., 17-31—Golden Text, Matt. xvi., 24—Topic: Great Facts Connected With Salvation.

I. Jesus and the ruler (vs. 17-22). 17. "Was gone forth." From the house where He had blessed the children (vs. 13-16). He now starts again on His journey to Jerusalem. "Came one running." From this and parallel accounts we learn that this man was, (1) young, (2) rich, (3) a ruler—probably of a synagogue and possibly a member of the Sanhedrin, (4) very moral, (5) humble—he fell at Jesus' feet, (6) in earnest—he came running, (7) anxious to learn—he came as an inquirer; but he was also (1) self-righteous, (2) ignorant concerning spiritual truth, (3) unwilling to give up his earthly possessions and worldly prospects, (4) unwilling to trust all to Christ. "Kneeled." In this he was showing Jesus great respect and was recognizing Him as a spiritual authority above the priest or rabbi. "Master." Or teacher. "What shall I do," etc. His question shows that he believes in a future state; he was not a Sadducee. "Eternal life." The divine life implanted in the soul by the Holy Spirit. It begins in this life but will endure forever. 18. "Why callest thou Me good?" Christ did not say that He was not good, or was not God. If the young man called Christ "good," the question Jesus asked would lead directly to His divinity.

19. "The commandments." According to Matthew Jesus said, "If thou wilt enter into life, keep the commandments." The young man asked Jesus which special or great commandment He referred to. Jesus replied by enumerating the commandments in this verse. He referred only to the second table of the law, which relates to the duties of man to man.

20. "Have I observed." He was strictly moral and had lived a good life outwardly. He then asked (Matt. 19:20) what he lacked yet. He was conscious of a lack in his spiritual life, and this question was a serious inquiry as to its cause.

21. "Jesus—loved him." The Saviour was drawn toward him. He saw in the young man great possibilities. "Sell — give." Jesus struck right at the centre of the young man's difficulty. He was ready to give all to God but his property; this was the "one thing" over which he was about to stumble and fall. 22. "Went away grieved." His countenance fell and he went away sorrowful. He went away reluctantly, but he went. He wanted eternal life, but he wanted his possessions more.

II. Jesus' statement concerning riches (vs. 23-27). 23. "How hardly," etc. That is, they shall enter with great difficulty. This is amply confirmed by experience. Rich men seldom become true Christians.

24. "Trust in riches." Here is the danger, the place where many a rich man will lose his soul. Riches cannot drive away anxiety. They cannot purchase contentment. They cannot buy friends. They cannot lure sleep. They cannot buy appreciation. They cannot bribe death. They cannot purchase eternal life.

25. "The eye of a needle." It has been suggested that the needle's eye was a small gate, leading into the city, intended only for foot passengers, and that the camel could only squeeze through with the greatest difficulty, but "it is now generally thought that the calling this small gate the needle's eye is a modern custom, and not in use in the time of Christ." 26. "Astonished." Like all Jews, they had been accustomed to regard worldly prosperity as a special mark of the favor of God. "Who then can be saved?" All men by nature share the same guilt and love of the world.

27. "With men it is impossible." According to the power and ability of men this is impossible, but God, by His power, is able to so save a man that even the things that allured him most will lose their attraction to him.

III. Rewards of following Christ (vs. 28-31). 28. "Have left all." Their boats and nets and fish and father were everything to them. 29. "That hath left house," etc. In the days of Jesus those who followed Him were obliged, generally, to forsake house and home, and to attend Him. In our time it is not often required that we should literally leave them, but it is always required that we love them less than we do Him.

30. "An hundredfold." There are few greater promises than this. This is symbolical, and expresses an immeasurable advantage. "Houses," etc. Not literally a hundred houses, etc., but he obtains a hundredfold more of joy and satisfaction than he loses. "What was a barren rock before becomes a gold mine." "With persecutions." That is, he must expect persecutions in this world. "Eternal life." Which will infinitely more than make up for all the Christian's trials here. Here are ages of enjoyment that no arithmetic can compute; oceans of pleasure, whose majestic billows rise from the depths of infinitude, and break on no shore. 31. "First shall be last." The lesson intended to be taught here is that those who occupy important positions and who appear to be first in labor and wisdom here may place to others who have been of less in the next world be forced to give renown here. God does not measure men as we do.

Good Colors For Houses.

It is not generally known—not even among painters—why certain tints and colors wear much better than others on houses, and the knowledge of just what tints are best to use is, therefore, rather hazy.

One writer on paint, in a recent book, says that experiments seem to show that those colors which resist or turn back the heat rays of the sun will protect a house better than those which allow these rays to pass through the film.

Thus red is a good color because it turns back, or reflects, the red rays, and the red rays are the hot rays.

In general, therefore, the warm tones are good and the cold tones are poor, so far as wear is concerned. In choosing the color of paint for your house, select reds, browns, grays and olives which, considering the various tones these tints will produce, will give a wide range from which to choose.

Avoid the harsh tints, such as cold yellows (like lemon), cold greens (like grass green, etc.), and the blues.

It must be understood that no virtue is claimed for tints in themselves, irrespective of the materials used in the paint. Any color will fade, and the paint will scale off, if adulterated white lead or canned paint is used, but if one is careful to use the best white lead—some well-known brand of a reliable manufacturer—and genuine linseed oil, the warm tints mentioned above will outwear the same materials tinted with the cold colors.

Perfume to Follow Motors.

M. Deletrain, a young Genevan, claims to have made a discovery for motorists which would be a boon for the public. It consists of a small solid cone, which the inventor has named the motor cone. When it is dissolved in petrol or benzine the cone destroys the odor of burnt gases and leaves an agreeable perfume behind. Motor cones will be sold in small boxes containing six cones at about 25 cents a box, and one cone is said to be sufficient to perfume 60 miles of road.

Land of Sunshine.

Colorado is entitled to be called the land of sunshine. Statistics show that for the year ending March 1, 1905, the sun shone on all but eight days, at Colorado Springs; and that the temperature touched its highest point on July 15, when the thermometer registered 89 degrees.—Four-Track News.

BABY COVERED WITH SORES.

Would Scratch and Tear the Flesh Unless Hands Were Tied—"Would Have Died But For Cuticura."

"My little son, when about a year and a half old, began to have sores come out on his face. I had a physician treat him, but the sores grew worse. Then they began to come on his arms, then on other parts of his body, and then one came on his chest, worse than the others. Then I called another physician. Still he grew worse. At the end of about a year and a half of suffering he grew so bad I had to tie his hands in cloths at night to keep him from scratching the sores and tearing the flesh. He got to be a mere skeleton, and was hardly able to walk. My aunt advised me to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I sent to the drug store and got a cake of the Soap and a box of the Ointment, and at the end of about two months the sores were all well. He has never had any sores of any kind since. He is now strong and healthy, and I can sincerely say that only for your most wonderful remedies my precious child would have died from those terrible sores. Mrs. Egbert Sheldon, R. F. D. No. 1, Woodville, Conn., April 22, 1905."

Mountain Sheep Sacred in Colorado.

State Game and Fish Commissioner Jim Woodard declares that the mountain sheep of Colorado is in the same class as the sacred bull of India. It must not be touched, says Woodard. If the animal is seen browsing upon the mountainside the gun of the hunter must not be pointed in its direction.

The animal, therefore, may be called the "sacred sheep of Colorado." There are not many of them left, but under the protection of the law they are increasing every year. There is a band of them on the hills between Florence and Victor, and Mr. Woodard has a photograph of the bunch grazing on a hillside a short distance away from Florence.

But for the passage of a law which heavily fines those who kill this animal the species would have been extinct long ago.

A letter received in Mr. Woodard's office recently tells of the arrest and conviction of one Fred Klantasky for killing mountain sheep. Klantasky was fined $300 and costs in the county court at Canon City last Saturday. The costs amounted to $140, and if the accused man does not settle he will have a long term to serve in the county jail.—Denver Republican.

OXIDINE, THE CHILL CURE THAT CURES CHILLS

Too Credulous.

Senator Frye of Maine tells the following story of a man who fell asleep in a parlor car. He snored so loudly that every one in the coach was annoyed. Presently an old gentleman approached the sleeper, shook him and brought him out of his slumber with a start.

"What's the matter?" he exclaimed.

"Why, your snoring is annoying every one in the car," said the old gentleman.

"How do you know I am snoring?" queried the source of the nuisance.

"Why, we can't help but hear it."

"Well, don't believe all you hear," replied the stranger and went to sleep again.—Christian Endeavor World.

TOBACCO SMUGGLERS' TRICKS.

How Contraband Gods Are Carried Into France.

A great effort is being made by the French custom officials to break up the organization of smugglers which has lately been carrying on a lucrative and ever growing trade in contraband between Belgium and France.

During the last fortnight the French custom officials have had several important successes. The first was the capture of a Belgian fishing smack in the Straits of Dover. The vessel carried $5000 worth of tobacco. This contraband cargo was confiscated, the vessel seized and the owners were fined $5000. In the same night a smugglers' haunt was raided at Dunkirk and great quantities of tobacco were seized.

One of the latest devices was that employed by a man who disguised himself as a priest. He was in the habit of journeying from a Belgian frontier town into France every day with a large quantity of tobacco concealed under his cassock.

He returned to Belgium, not a portly priest, but a very lean, emaciated individual.

The capture of the fictitious priest led the authorities to suspect a number of nuns who daily crossed the frontier into France. A careful search had been organized, and in four cases the supposed nun was found to be a smuggler with many pounds of tobacco and cigars hidden beneath her heavy black skirt.

Suspicion next fell upon the drivers, firemen and guards of the trains running between Brussels and Paris, and for some days every train has been carefully searched. Hundreds of pounds of tobacco have been found hidden among the coal on the tenders.

In one case the cushions of a carriage were found to be stuffed with tobacco. In another, a passenger, who was well known as a regular traveler on the line, was searched, and found to be loaded with contraband. In a third case an invalid, reposing on air cushions, was found to be no invalid at all, and the cushions held tobacco instead of air.

Perhaps the most gruesome discovery was made when a coffin, supposed to contain the body of a Frenchman who died in Belgium and was being brought back to be buried in his native country, was searched. It was found to be full of cigars.

At the frontier towns on the roads several ingenious tricks have been discovered. Recently a peasant was stopped when driving across the border with a load of vegetables and an aged relative. The relative was found to be a dummy figure stuffed with tobacco, and the vegetables had their centres cut out and replaced with tobacco.—London Express.

Story of a Photograph.

The following story of a young lady living in the country who came to London to be photographed is vouched for by a well-known London photographer. After some days the lady, Miss B., was informed the photograph was not a success, and another sitting was suggested.

This she agreed to, but again she was informed that the photograph was a failure. There was a third sitting. In two days' time she received an urgent letter from the photographer, asking her to come up to his studio and to bring a friend with her. Miss B. went, accompanied by her mother, and was shown the amazing results of the three sittings.

The pictures of the girl herself were quite good, but in each plate there was to be seen standing behind her the figure of a man holding a dagger in his uplifted hand. The features, though faint, were clearly discernible, and Miss B. recognised them as those of her fiance, an officer in the Indian army. The effect of this experience was so great that after a few days she wrote to India, breaking off the engagement.—M. A. P.

The proposed erection of a 20-story office building on the American plan in London has aroused vigorous opposition.

COULD NOT KEEP UP.

Broken Down, Like Many Another, With Kidney Troubles.

Mrs. A. Taylor, of Wharton, N. J., says: "I had kidney trouble in its most painful and severe form, and the torture I went through now seems to have been almost unbearable. I had backache, pains in the side and loins, dizzy spells and hot, feverish headaches. There were bearing-down pains, and the kidney secretions passed too frequently, and with a burning sensation. They showed sediment. I became discouraged, weak, languid and depressed, so sick and weak that I could not keep up. As doctors did not cure me I decided to try Doan's Kidney Pills, and with such success that my troubles were all gone after using eight boxes, and my strength, ambition and general health is fine."

A Balloon Railway.

Engineer Balderauer of Salzburg has invented a balloon railroad, experiments with which are now being made in the neighborhood of that German city. A stationary balloon is fastened to a slide running along a single rail fastened to the side of a steep mountain which ordinary railroads could not climb. The balloon is to float 25 feet over the ground, and a steel cable connects it with the rail. For going up, motive power is furnished by hydrogen gas, while water poured into a large tank at the upper end of the road serves as ballast for the descent. Suspended from the balloon is a circular car with room for ten passengers.

Possibilities of Dry Farming.

Estimates of the amount of land that can be reclaimed by irrigation vary all the way from 50,000,000 acres up to 125,000,00 acres, with the weight of authoritative opinion decidedly favoring the lower figure. Yet if 1 per cent of the money now being expended for irrigation works were made available for the education of the people who ought to be interested in dry farming, it is probable that five hundred million acres of land—perhaps more than that—could be reclaimed from its present unproductive and comparatively worthless state just as rapidly as settlers, whether native born, or immigrants from foreign countries, could be taken to it.—From John L. Cowan's "Dry Farmer—the Hope of the West" in the Century.

AN UNUSUAL OPPORTUNITY.

Florence Drug Co. Will Pay Back Your Money if Pepsikola Fails to Cure Your Indigestion.

"Never in the history of this store," remarked one of the above druggists to an interested customer, "has there been so great a demand for a new remedy as there is just now for Pepsikola Tablets. Clanton people are coming in every day inquiring if it really is true that we sell Pepsikola with the understanding that it will cure dyspepsia or pay back the money. "Not one person in fifty has asked for their money, and it may surprise you to know that at least a dozen within the last ten days have been in to tell us how much they have been relieved and how glad they are to know at last there is a remedy that really will cure indigestion and dyspepsia." Pepsikola braces up and tones every nerve and fibre, helps digest the food, puts new life into the digestion, improves the appetite, cures coated tongue, dizzy spells and sour stomach.

Try it for ten days, and if you don't see a big improvement step in and tell Florence Drug co., and they will hand back your quarter cheerfully and without argument.

District No. 32.

Editor Banner—Please allow me a small space in the columns of your paper to say a few words to the young people of district No. 32 in regard to the writing school, which I have just finished there.

The examiner of the specimens of writing reports that Marion Foshee made the greatest improvement in the ten days, so he is the one who will be rewarded with a $2 00 gold writing pen.

The second in improvement was D D Easterling and Martha Jane Mims

Third came three—J. T. Sims, Arthur Mims and T. S. Chandler, making a triangular tie.

Men Past Sixty in Danger

More than half of mankind over sixty years of age suffer from kidney and bladder disorders, usually enlargement of prostrate glands. This is both painful and dangerous, and Foley's Kidney Cure should be taken at the first sign of danger, as it corrects irregularities and has cured many old men of this disease. Mr. Rodney Burnett, Rockport, Mo., writes: "I suffered with enlarged prostrate gland and kidney trouble for years and after taking two bottles of Foley's Kidney Cure I feel better than I have for twenty years, although I am now 91 years old." Timber Land, Act June 3, 1878

United States Land Office,
Montgomery, Ala., June, 5, 1906

Notice is hereby given that in compliance with the provisions of the act of Congress of June 3, 1878, entitled "An Act for the sale of timber lands in the States of California, Oregon, Nevada and Washington Territory," as extended to all the Public Land States by act of August 4, 1892, William P. Lay, of Gadsden, county of Etowah, State of Alabama, has this day filed in this office his sworn statement No. 20, for the purchase of the Southeast part of Fraction "A" or the Sw ¼ of Ne ¼, of Section No. 24, Township No 22 N, Range No. 15 E, and will offer proof to show that the land sought is more valuable for its timber or stone than for agricultural purposes, and to establish his claim to said land before Clerk Circuit Court, at Clanton, Ala., on the 1st day of September, 1906.

He names as witnesses: E. M. Pinckard, of Clanton, Ala.; W H. Foshee, of Clanton, Ala.; Hugh Simpson, of Clanton, Ala.; Abe Kanter, of Clanton, Ala.

Any and all persons claiming adversely the above described lands are requested to file their claims in this office on or before the 1st day of September, 1906.

Sour Stomach

No appetite, loss of strength, nervousness, headache, constipation, bad breath, general debility, sour risings, and catarrh of the stomach are all due to indigestion. Kodol cures indigestion. This new discovery represents the natural juices of digestion as they exist in a healthy stomach, combined with the greatest known tonic and reconstructive properties. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure does not only cure indigestion and dyspepsia, but this famous remedy cures all stomach troubles by cleansing, purifying, sweetening and strengthening the mucous membranes lining the stomach.

MAKE MONEY.

Here is an interesting study: Make out a list of all the people you know, and estimate the amount of money each one earns in a year. Total it up. The amount will be surprisingly large. Now, of all those people, only the few who SAVE SOMETHING really MAKE anything at all. Simply earning money isn't making it; what slips through the earner's fingers is finally "made" by somebody else. Don't forget to count yourself in on the list, and if you are not "making" money, begin now to save with us. One dollar will open your bank account.

Pine Mills, Texas. Aug. 25, 1906

Dear Editor—Just a word to the good old Banner, it is my old home paper and I like to see it come to my Texas home. I like to read the old Alabama news, it makes me think of the past. I can't tell you anything good of eastern Texas, I have been here thirteen years and we have the sorriest crops I ever saw here. We have lots of boll weevils here and the damage is great; we won't make one bale of cotton to every eight acres; the boll weevils are stirring in my cotton like the house flies are in your house. Texas is a good old state, but old Alabama is hard to beat; if you are doing well in Alabama, dont come to Texas. I spent last year in Alabama and I heard several farmers say "I believe the boll weevils are in my cotton." I want to tell you all when the boll weevils strike your cotton you won't say you believe it, you will say I know it. They have ruined my cotton. Our corn is fine, and we have very good health and plenty of rain, plenty of peas and corn bread to eat. So good bye to the good old Banner.

Raton, New Mex., Aug. 24, 1906

Editor Banner—I take the Banner and it is much pleasure to me to read the news of dear old Chilton and especially the letters from different parts of the county.

Raton does more business than any other town in northern New Mexico. The surrounding industries are farming, mining and stock raising, and it has many indications of being much larger in the near future. I have taken many pleasure trips since I came out here and the scenery is grand. Some distance north there is a natural wall about thirty feet high and five feet wide protruding out of a mountain and the stone it is composed of differs from any that surrounds it. I have visited two old craters near here, one was nearly one fourth mile long and in the widest place was about one hundred feet wide and the deepest place was about fifty feet deep. Much of the lava had fallen back into it and almost filled it up. Sunday, I went to Capaline crater which has an altitude of nine thousand feet and from the surrounding conditions, I think it burst out, throwing lava in every direction, then began boiling out the melted mass. There are masses of lava three miles from the foot of the main hill that covers one fourth of an acre and as approached nearer they become larger and the largest were very large hills by themselves. It was a very hard climb to get to the top and I felt the affects of the altitude very much. The opening is about one fourth mile wide and about four hundred feet deep; much of the lava has fallen back into the crater. Looking from the top, we could see into Colorado, Oklahoma and Texas, and by looking west, we could see a chain of the Rocky Mountains that were covered with snow; they are more than one hundred miles away.

Dear Editor—Will you please allow me a small space in your valuable paper to say a few words about our school. Miss Jessie McGee has taught us a two months school at this place this summer and has made a grand success. Her school closed Friday last. The children all recited some nice recitations and sang some pretty songs. The children all learned to love Miss Jessie very much and we all hated to see her leave us and hope to have her with us again soon; and if she should get a school in another place I hope she will have much success.

Fodder pulling has been all the go these days, but it is all about over and has turned into cotton picking.

Mr. Nicholas Miner visited his cousin, Mr. T. B. Chambers, lately.

Mr. Andrew Deason, we are sorry to say, is very sick, but we hope he will soon recover.

Messrs. T. B. Micor and G. W. Sansom virited the Latham saw mill lately on business. Best wishes to the Banner and its many readers.

Every Man Taken Ill.

Pensacola, Fla.—With every member of her crew sick, including the captain, and one man dying, the British schooner Donido arrived off Pensacola and asked for assistance. She is bound from Colon for Ship Island, but the men were no longer able to man her, and signals for assistance were sent up from the first port. The pilot boat Pilot went out and was told by the master that when out some days from Colon one of the men was taken sick with fever of some nature, and that one by one his men took it until every member of the crew was down, including himself, and that one of the men was not expected to live. He asked that a tug boat be sent to tow him to Ship Island, where he could get in quarantine and receive treatment.

The schooner has been fourteen days out from Colon.

Murders Husband and Child.

Piggot, Ark.—Suddenly becoming insane, Mrs. Frank Polsgrove, wife of a well-known farmer of the St. Francis neighborhood, killed her husband and 4-year-old child with an axe, and fatally wounded her two other children, a boy of 13 years and girl of 7. The demented woman then set fire to the building, the bodies of the man and 4-year-old child being cremated. The other two children were found in a field adjoining the house badly mutilated, and it is not believed they can live more than a few hours. The mother when apprehended confessed her crime and begged that she be killed.

To Erect Statue to Washington.

Budapest, Hungary.—The authorities of the city of Budapest have decided to unveil the Washington statue, now under erection, on September 16, and have sent out invitations to the mayors of American cities, presidents of American universities and many notable public men of the United States to attend. The idea of raising this statue rose out of the erection in Cleveland some years ago of a statue to Kossuth. The Hungarian-Americans who were instrumental in bringing about the erection of the Kossuth monument were so cordially supported by Americans that they decided as a mark of gratitude to raise a Washington monument in the capital of their native country.

London Stock Exchange.

London.—The week's trading on the stock exchange left quotations generally lower, except Americans, which showed a substantial gain.

Foreign securities in which Paris is interested did not show much irregularity, though Russians weakened, owing to the unfavorable Russian news.

Americans had exciting sessions early in the week, following the boom in Wall street. The prices of Union Pacific and Southern Pacific soared to fresh high levels, other issues following to a smaller extent. Comparative dullness ensued in the middle of the week, but Saturday another upward burst occurred, Union Pacific leading and closing at $22 higher than last week.

Royal House of Lippe Extinct.

New York.—A cable dispatch to the Herald from Detmold says:

Princess Pauline of Lippe, last descendant of the former reigning house, died here Friday. The last masculine descendant died in 1905, so that the line is now extinct.

The princess was the youngest of nine children of Leopold II, of Lippe. Three of her brothers occupied the throne in succession. Leopold III, who reigned from 1851 to 1875; Waldemar, from 1875 to 1895, and Charles Alexander, who was sovereign 1895 to 1905, although his mental state necessitated a regency.

Toothache Causes Suicide.

Sioux Falls, S. D.—Miss Grace Haward, of Fairfield, Ia., lately of Mitchell, S. D., because of suffering from an ulcerated tooth, committed suicide by throwing herself over Minnehaha Falls. The young woman wrote a letter to a friend, sending all her money and saying she would commit suicide.

Smiles at Death.

Mason City, Ia.—With a smile as the answer to the engineer's continued whistles for her to get out of danger, Miss Maggie Hogan complacently sat on the track at Austin, near here, and waited until the fast passenger hurled her to instant death. It is thought that she was demented as the result of a love affair.

COMER NOMINATED

Grey in the Lead. Bankhead Ahead. Weakely Strong But Tyson Gains.

BOTH CLAIM THE VICTORY.

Indications Show That Comer Has Carried Most Localities of the State. His Majorities Small.

Birmingham.—Returns indicate that B. B. Comer's majority for governor of Alabama over Dr. R. M. Cunningham will be above 10,000. Upon the face of the returns Wednesday morning Cunningham seems certainly to have carried but seven counties in the state, although a number of others are so close that this number can be easily increased.

A notable feature of the returns is the small majority that Comer seems to have received in a number of counties. For instance, he is but 4 votes ahead in Calhoun county. In Russell his majority is 60, in Marengo it is 88, in Walker 75 and in Franklin it is but 25. The largest majority he received was in Marshall county, where ran 1,159 votes ahead of Cunningham. In Barbour county his majority was 1,000, while in DeKalb it was 800.

Henry B. Gray is making a fine race for lieutenant-governor, and his election seems assured, although O'Neal has developed much strength. Meador's majorities in several counties are large.

An important development has been the fact tht Congressman J. H. Bankhead is running ahead of former Governor Johnston for alternate senator. The nomination of these two men to first and second places, respectively, seems assured. Mr. Knox is very strong in several counties, but his votes will hardly be in sufficient quantity to overcome the lead of the other two men.

The indications from Wednesday morning's returns are that Brandon has been nominated state auditor and that Henderson and Harris will be the successful associate railroad commissioners.

Dowdell and McClellan are still in the lead for associate justice of the supreme court, but it is possible that later returns will change this result.

"Reports received through the press and private sources up to this time indicate that Judge Weakley will have a majority in the state convention, and that he has carried forty-three counties.

Montgomery.—Tyson headquarters here claim thirty-one counties, which will give him a good majority. Judge Tyson said that he was quite sure of success. A number of counties are behind yet, which he says will give him a good vote.

Passes Stopped.

Birmingham.—The Hepburn rate act went into effect at 12 o'clock Monday night. At that time the new law in regard to railroad rates and the posting and filing of tariffs went into effect. It means a revolution in many respects in the railroad world.

Among other things a number of the railroads have shut off entirely all passes and complimentary transportation of every kind. Notices have been issued those holding passes that they would not be honored after midnight Monday night.

These instructions have not been received by the passenger men of all the railroads, but by a majority of the lines entering Birmingham. Several of the railroad officials have been instructed to return their pass books, with complete records of passes which have been issued, to the office of the general passenger agents of the railroads.

In regard to the freight end the interstate tariffs to all points have to be posted in each place from which they are effective, and so placed that they are convenient to the public. This law in regard to tariffs also applied to the passenger department.

Will Devote Time to Fair.

Montgomery.—It is announced that Jesse Adams, for several years chief clerk to the commissioner of agriculture, has resigned, to give his entire time to the business of the Alabama Agricultural Fair Association, of which he is the secretary. The resignation is to take effect at the first of the month. He will be succeeded by Capt. George F. Sedberry, at present one of the examiners of public accounts, whose home is at Wetumpka.

CUBA ANXIOUS

General Battle is Expected in the Pinar Del Rio Province.

HAVANA IS LOYAL TO PALMA.

Colonel Bacallao Leaves With Artillery to Do Battle With Body of Insurgents.

Havana.—So far as actual developments go, the situation is unchanged. The eastern provinces are perfectly quiet and no encounters of any consequence have yet taken place in the province of Santa Clara.

The insurrectionary movement there is not growing. The loyalty of the people of Matanzas appears almost as well established as that of the inhabitants of Puerto Principe, which so far has been the model province for peacefulness. There has been some skirmishes in the vicinity of Havana and large bands of insurgents are still roaming about the southern part of Havana province, but there have been no disturbances in western Havana since the death of General Bandera.

Governor Nunez, of Havana province, said that this province will be free from insurgent bands within a fortnight. The center of interest continues to be in Pinar del Rio, in which province only is there a large and well organized movement against the government. Considerable criticism has been aroused by the policy of the government in dividing its forces in Pinar del Rio, but the die in this regard is cast, for Colonel Bacallao with a force of artillerymen and recruits sailed out of Sanu Juan de Martinez in the expectation of encountering the insurgent forces commonded by Pino Guerra.

The fate of the revolution appears to rest largely on the result of the coming engagement between these two forces. The people of Cuba will be relieved to hear some news of a decisive nature either way from Pinar del Rio. The sympathy of the people of Havana is with the government, but there is no general, overwhelming anxiety to see its forces prevail.

Meanwhile business enterprises are at a standstill.

If these disorders continue for two or three months Spanish business, as well as American, British, German and Canadian, would welcome an intervention. The subject, however, is so delicate that it is not much discussed except in private.

Issue More Bonds.

San Francisco, Cal.—The Southern Pacific Railway Company is authorized to issue a bonded debt of $100,000,000, but will probably not issue, it is said, more than $72,000,000 of that amount during the next two or three years.

This company was organized about two years ago by a merger of the Southern Pacific Railroad of California, the Southern Pacific of Arizona and the Southern Pacifi of New Mexico. It includes all the Southern Pacific lines in Arizona and New Mexico and all Harriman properties in this state except the South Pacific Coast and Cenral Pacific. It is a California corporation.

These merged railroads have in the aggregate $72,000,000 of outstanding bonds, bearing 5, 6 and 7 per cent interest. It is proposed to retire them with the new securities, which bear but 4 per cent interest.

End Long Quarrel.

Leesburg, S. C.—Henry Monts, a farmer, was shot and killed by J. Godfrey Taylor, his neighbor. Both men were about 40 years of age and have families. The killing resulted from an old quarrel over the boundary line between their lands. About one year ago Monts shot at Taylor.

Six months ago Monts' house was burned. Taylor was charged with the crime, but was acquitted. Taylor went at once to the home of the county supervisor and surrendered. Both men were among the most respectable of the community.

Passenger Fares to Be Reduced.

Pittsburg, Pa.—E. A. Ford, passenger traffic manager of the Pennsylvania lines west of Pittsburg, has notified the commissioner of the Central Passenger Association and passenger officials of competing lines that, taking effect as soon as the tariffs can properly be compiled the interstate fares in which the Pennsylvania may be interested will be modified, using the 2-cent per mile fares in Ohio as a basis.

Seat Sells for $95,000.

New York.—The New York stock exchange seat sold Thursday for $95,000 was that of Alfred Decordova, a retired banker and broken. Mr. Decordova purchased his seat on February 18, 1875, for $5,000, and by this sale he has netter $90,000 in thirty-one years. Mr. Decordova retired from the firm of Alfred Decordova & Co. in 1902, since which time he has devoted his time exclusively to outdoor sports.

PRINCESS MEETS DEATH.

Peasants Set Fire to Country Mansion and the Woman Was Unable to Escape.

Tiflis.—The country mansion of Prince Palavandoff, at Okoni, was set on fire by peasants. The princess was unable to escape and was burned to death.

Berlin.—A dispatch to the Tageblatt from Kattowitz announces that a bomb was thrown in Benseln, Russian Poland, killing Police Captain Jakubik and two policemen and seriously wounding another policeman. The bomb was evidently intended for Jakubik, who commanded a patrol who on Monday killed a Jew. The explosion destroyed the district police office. A detachment of Cossacks fired several volleys and wounded a number of passers-by.

The Old Cotton Crop.

Within two weeks of the close of the old cotton crop year, and with new cotton coming to the market at the rate of 30,000 bales a week, it is not out of place to sum up in a preliminary way the commercial movements of the crop as they present themselves in the weekly statements of visible supply.

Less than 25,000 bales are wanting to make the crop of the closing year 11,000,000 bales. The census office gives 10,725,000 as ginned up to the date of its last canvass. Meanwhile there have been added to the visible supply 250,000 bales, making a total in sight of American cotton of 10,975,469 bales this year. There was on September 1, 1905, a total of 1,638,470 bales. This surplus added to the quantity broug into sight during the year makes 12,613,969 bales. The world's taking of American cotton have been 11,633,519, leaving a visible supply of less than 1,000,000, or 980,450.

One things certain is that the new crop year soon to begin will start with less cotton to its credit than that of 1905-6; the difference will be about 650,000 bales less or between four and five weeks of the world's takings of American cotton during the months of July and August.

Apparently the market is more generally emptied of cotton in first hands than it was last year at the corresponding date. A year of 11-cent cotton for export has probably cleared storage places for cotton in planters' hands.

The falling prices, such as are now prevailing, will tend still further to prevent the rush of cotton to the markets. The year 1904-5 had a surplus from the preceding year to carry over into the current year. The present year of 1905-6 is not in a position to bequeath a corresponding amount to the new year, and for that reason, if the planter's immediate needs of cash are met, there may be more storing of the crop than has ever been the case, especially if the size of it exceeds 12,000,000 bales.

Throughout the south the move for the organization of cotton warehouses has made a great deal of progress. The effect of this will be to favor the holding of cotton in first hands to an extent that probably the grower has never known before. This is an aspect of the market which may help to bring prices nearer to a sounder level than is now the case.—Wall Street Journal.

Maneuvers End at Chickamauga.

Chattanooga, Tenn.—The maneuvers at the Chickamauga National Park have come to an end so far as the national guardsmen are concerned. The First and Second Tennessee and Third North Carolina left for home and their places will not be filled. During the last four weeks citizen soldiers from Virginia, Alabama, Mississippi, Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina and Tennessee have been trained in conjunction with all branches of the regular service in practical soldiering. The Seventeenth United States Infantry, Twelfth United States Cavalry, Third and Fourth batteries of field artillery and signal corps and engineer detachments will remain for some weeks.

Caught in Rapids.

Niagara Falls, N. Y.—Martin Kane and H. L. McGrath while boating in the gorge were caught by the current and carried through the whirlpool rapids. Kane was drowned, but McGrath managed to swim to the shore.

American is Given Command.

Havana.—Herbert Clews, an American, who is a veteran of the Cuban revolution, has been appointed a major, and will command a battery of rapid-fire guns.

Shot Sweetheart and Herself.

Anadarko, Okla.—Annie Dresback, aged 16, accidentally shot Newt. Mulliken, her sweetheart, and then, believing she had killed him, shot herself. Both will die.

Imprisoned in Car.

Cleveland, O.—Seven people were injured and twenty others imprisoned in a disabled car for some time following a head-on collion of two street cars on the Woodward avenue line. Almost a panic followed the collision, and those who were imprisoned in the disabled cars were trampled upon by other frightened passengers in their efforts to escape. None of the injured will die.

GENERAL STATE NEWS.

Current News Garnered as It Falls From the Plant of Report.

FARMERS' CONVENTION.

Delegates Grateful to Bessemer for Kind Treatment That Was Accorded Them.

Bessemer, Ala.—The first annual convention of the Farmers' Educational and Co-Operative Union has passed into history. After a three days busy session the meeting adjourned. Nearly all the meetings were in executive session and there was nothing given out for the benefit of the public. As a matter of fact, the business has in a measure been more or less routine in nature and relative to the plans of the body for the disposition and marketing of the product. President Worley stated that the convention had been entirely successful and that much good had been accomplished. He spoke highly of the hospitality of the people of Bessemer and vicinity. Altogether there were about 460 delegates to the convention, and all were handled without a single unpleasant incident to mar the occasion. To the credit of the visitors it should be said that during the four days which they were in the city there was not a sign of disorder among them. With them it was strictly business and as a matter of fact all offers of a social nature extended them were refused. After the adjournment, however, the farmers were taken through the big pipe works and afterwards to Jonesboro, where they were informally entertained by Mayor J. D. Martin. On the return to the city short speeches were made thanking the city for the hospitality and immediately the crowd left the city for their respective homes.

Pythian Convention.

Anniston, Ala.—The second semi-annual session of the First district convention of Knights of Pythias was held at Oxford Thursday, the convention being the guests of Rathbone Lodge No. 68. A good per cent of the lodges were represented, and there was a good attendance. It was decided to create a committee on program for the next meeting and the committee was appointed as follows: A. M. Humphries, of Oxford; W. P. Acker, of Anniston, and Judge J. H. Disque, of Gadsden. The time of meeting was changed from the third week in August and February to the second week in each of these months. The address of Grand Chancellor B. C. Jones followed.

The following officers were elected for the next six months: First vice-president, A. M. Humphries, of Oxford; second vice-president, H. H. White, of Centre; third vice-president, John P. Stewart, of Attalla; fourth vice-president, Howard W. Sexton, of Anniston; secretary, W. T. Edmonson, Jr., of Anniston. District Committeeman L. F. Greer, of DeArmanville, is president of the convention by virtue of his office as committeeman.

Survey for Public Building.

Florence, Ala.—Another step was taken towards securing a public building for Florence when Major A. G. Negley, the postmaster, forwarded to Washington the survey of the site which was purchased for the building. Several weeks ago Major Negley was instructed to have the survey made, and the result of his labors was handed in by Surveyor Gregory. When the papers reach Washington the plans will be made and the commencement of the $50,000 public building will then be a question of a few months. The splendid old college building now standing on the grounds will be razed. The government site is a magnificently wooded piece of property, surrounded by Seminary, Mobile, Tombigbee streets and Wood avenue, and is within a few blocks of the business portion of the city.

Picnic and Barbecue.

THE MYSTERY OF MONA HOUSE.

By CHARLOTTE M. BRAEME.

house had been empty for rs, and had a weird, forlorn The windows were broken, rusted, and tall, rank filled the garden. Yet it was, nd, the prettiest house in . It was separated from s and overlooked a broad ex- of green meadow land.

that is, my mother and I to live in Western terrace nine years before the story to relate opens. Western is the last row of houses in pretty outskirt of London I will call Surbiton. The fertile country lay fair ing on either side of us; in distance we caught a glimpse chain of blue hills. The mea- were green and studded with and golden flowers.

Terrace is far from the city, from all the haunts of men; are no shops near it; no busy ever pass by. The silence of summer evenings is unbroken, by the singing of the birds and distant chiming of the church

When we first came to live here, next house was empty. My often wondered that no one it; but there were many ob- it was so far from all the then it lay back, apart and from all the other houses; was, too, a grove of solemn, choly pine trees near it, an wintry nights the wind wailed moaned there until it shook serves

I believe the real reason why cared to take it was that a ful murder had been committed In the silence and stillness dark night a deed had been mitted in Mona House that cried high heaven for vengeance. never cared to inquire about the ulars. It was some sad story unhappy marriage—a few of sullen resentment and misery—a wild outburst of anger—a fierce and cruel blow, ed by the stillness and hor- of death.

Perhaps, before telling my little I should introduce myself, in that you may fully understand I relate it. My mother, Mrs. ham, had been for some years ow. I was her only child. My ssion was that of a barrister I am glad to say I stood fore- in the ranks. My mother had ample fortune of her own and father had bequeathed to me the gs of a long life.

My mother loved the country; she not endure the city. She must fresh, pure air, large rooms, fields. I was obliged to live where near town. We found what we wanted in Western . It was in the country, yet an omnibus ride of the city. had many friends, many acquain- , but no relatives living. Few passed without my mother a dance of an evening party. had a constant succession of , and altogether life in West- Terrace was very gay and agree-

Strange to say, and unlike most ers, mine wished me to marry. already reached the mature of thirty-six, and had never yet in love. I laughed at the no- . I had seen pretty girls and tiful women, but no face, as charmed or haunted me. My er continually made a point inviting young and attractive girls the house. It was all in vain; to me was a stranger.

It happened just at this time that was confined to the house for a k or two, from the effects of a re cold, and then it became to a source of continual amusement watch Mona House and the doings

From a dull, dusty, dirty building gradually changed into a bright, , cheerful one, with freshly ted railings. It amused me to ch the arrival of large vans of niture and other effects. We often ulated as to what our neigh- would be like. Would they be or young, dull or sociable? For time after all the arrange- ts at the house had been com- ted there was no sign of them. elderly woman of respectable ap- rance took up her abode there. saw no arrival or the usual fore- ners of a family moving. Once heard (late in the evening and the dark) the sound of a carriage, ving slowly up to the next door. could distinguish some slight con- ed sounds, and in a few minutes drove away again.

Three days afterwards I was walk- home, when suddenly, at one of upper windows of Mona House, caught sight of a face that I shall ver forget. The fair, pale face a lady, with the saddest expres- in her dark eyes I ever beheld; beautiful face, set in a frame of lden hair, with sweet, patient lips, t looked too grave and mournful smile.

I cannot tell why the face affected so keenly; it seemed like the alization of a want I had long felt like the completion of a dream. that one moment it was photo- aphed on my heart, and will be there till I die. All night long it haunted me; those sweet, sad eyes seemed ever looking into mine. I ged to hear the voice that should e from those patient lips. I told my mother that our new neighbors had arrived, and that one of them was a most fair and lovely lady.

"It is strange," she remarked, "that I have neither seen nor heard anything of them."

And as the days went on the fact grew more and more strange. We neither saw nor heard anything of them. I could not obtain another glimpse of the fair, sad face that haunted me. I am not ashamed to say how much I tried to do so. I lingered in the road and watched from the window, but there was no sign of it.

Other things struck me as strange and mysterious. Whoever resided there—whether the lady I had seen was alone or not, I could not tell; but no one ever called. I never once saw friend or guest or visitor approach that closed door. The postman never took letters to Mona House. No one ever crossed the threshold; it was silent and solitary as a large tomb.

Early in the morning I saw the old servant at work; but look when I would, whether in the bright, warm flush of morning or in the dewy evening, early or late, I could not see the pale, lovely face I could never forget.

Was she maid, widow, or wife? I could not tell. I might have lived a thousand miles from Mona House, and I should have known just as much of it as I did then. We wondered often whether any one else lived with the lady I had seen.

Once again I saw her. It was early in the morning. Unable to sleep, I had come out into the garden to look for some favorite flowers. She was in her own garden, leaning against the lattice-work that separated our grounds from those of Mona House. She had gathered a few flowers, but during her fit of musing they had fallen from her hands.

For full half an hour I stood under the flowering lilac trees, drinking in the beauty of the pale, drooping girl, who neither moved nor stirred. Presently the old woman came out and touched her gently on the arm.

"Come in, Miss Clarice, and take some breakfast," she said. "You look tired to death. A long sleep will do you as much good as fresh air."

Slowly and wearily the girl followed the old servant into the house.

"Why should she be worn and wan? Why should she be tired or wearied?" I asked myself. "Why should she have watched through the long hours of night? What shadow had fallen upon the young life? What was the mystery hanging over Mona House?

There was no guilt, shame or crime. I could have doubted anything rather than the pale, sad face upon which the morning sun had shone so lovingly.

I asked my mother to make some advances towards our neighbor. She tried to do so but her efforts were all in vain. The lady seemed to shrink from observation, and only wished to avoid notice.

At last we began to notice that a closed carriage stopped once a day at the door; a gentleman descended from it, and remained some few minutes in the house. For a long time I wondered who he could be; one day I saw him plainly, and recognized the celebrated physician, Dr. James.

The mystery seemed now to be solved; doubtless the lady was a great invalid—that accounted for her pale face and utter seclusion from all society. I told my mother of my discovery, and she, always kind of heart, resolved to do something to help and aid the young girl who seemed so utterly friendless.

The next time she saw the old housekeeper, my mother stopped her and inquired after the health of her mistress.

"My mistress is quite well," replied the woman, taken by surprise and thrown off her guard.

"I am glad to hear it," said my mother. "I was afraid, from Dr. James' frequent visits, she might be ill."

Something seemed to come over the woman, like a start of recollection.

"She is not well," she stammered, "but there is nothing serious the matter."

There was a strange hesitation about the old servant that my mother could not understand.

"Can I be useful to her in any way?" she asked again.

"No!" replied the woman abruptly; "she wants nothing but quiet."

My mother saw there was something constrained about her manner; she noticed, also that she seemed anxious to end the conversation.

From that time the housekeeper avoided all chance of meeting with any one from our house. But fortune favored me again.

A few evenings afterwards I was in the garden. The lady from Mona House stood, holding a heavy flower-pot in her hand. She was trying to open the door of the little conservatory.

I cannot tell if a small slate fell from the house-roof, or if some-one passing along the wall flung a stone; I saw only one thing; the heavy flower-pot was broken into a hundred pieces, and the little white hands that held it were fearfully cut and bruised.

In one moment I had leaped over the wall and stood by her side.

"Are you hurt?" I cried.

I shall never forget the look she turned upon me; it was one of the most intense terror.

"How did you come here?" she asked. "Who are you?"

I never in my life saw anything like the wild fright in her eyes; her face was white and quivering.

"I am your next-door neighbor," I replied quickly; "from my garden I saw the accident which happened, and came to help you."

"I am not hurt," she said faintly.

"You must be," was my reply, pointing to a large crimson stain on her dress; "see how your hand is cut. You look faint; sit here and rest, while I tell your servant."

"No," she gasped, rather than spoke, while her feeble fingers clutched my arm, "no, no; do not enter the house."

I bowed, and was turning away, when she said, gently:

"You are very kind, and I thank you very much indeed. Pray do not think me rude or ungrateful."

"It would be impossible to imagine you either," I replied. "Let me at least bind up your hand.

I saw her give one quick, eager glance at the windows of the house, then with the trusting simplicity of a little child she laid that little white hand in mine.

Nothing ever took me so long as that act of kindness did. It was like the realization of a bright dream to see that fair, sad face—to look into the sweet, shy eyes. I was obliged to finish at last, and then she gave me a grateful, gentle smile.

"Do not thank me," I cried, seeing she was about to speak. "Will you grant me one favor? Will you allow me to call and see how your hand is to-morrow or in a few days time?"

"Pray do not ask me," she said, in such evident terror I could not persist in the demand.

Seeing my presence really distressed her, I went away, bearing with me a passionate love of the fair, sad face, haunted by the musical tone of that sweet voice.

Yet afterwards, in thinking over the interview, I was more at a loss than ever. What was the mystery? Why did she look so frightened? Why did she evidently dread lest I should enter the house? What was concealed or going on there?

My dear mother was moved to compassion when I related the incident.

"I shall certainly go in and see her," she said. "Poor young lady! I cannot help thinking she suffers from a nervous disease."

That evening when I returned home, she, my mother, had a strange tale to tell me. She looked pale and scared.

"Paul," she said, when we were seated alone in the drawing-room, "I have had a great fright to-day. I have been to see our next-door neighbor."

Before I had time to reply she continued: "Yes, I have been to see her; but I shall never go again. There is something either very mysterious or very wrong going on there. The old servant seemed terrified when she met me. I asked to see her mistress. At first she said the young lady was engaged; then she said her mistress was not at home. What alarmed me so much was that as I turned to leave the room, I heard a noise.

"I cannot describe it," continued my mother, shuddering, and turning quite pale; "it was unlike anything human—unlike anything I have ever heard. Just as I stood still, paralyzed by the awful sound, I distinctly saw the young lady herself cross the landing above the stairs."

"It seems very strange," I replied, musingly.

"She was evidently in the house the whole of the time," resumed my mother. "What can be the reason of her mysterious seclusion? What could be the cause of that fearful sound?"

Even as we sat, trying to solve the mystery of Mona House, there came a violent ringing at the hall door.

"Who can be there?" said my mother. "It is eleven o'clock."

Before I had time to reply the old servant from the next house hastily entered the room, and went straight up to my mother.

"Will you come in to see my mistress now, directly?" she said. "He is dying at last, and she is all alone."

"Who is dying?" asked my bewildered mother; but the woman had gone out again, and we followed.

In silence we entered Mona House and followed her up the broad staircase. We heard a strange, half-moaning sound. The old woman opened the door of a room, and we entered.

I can never forget the sight. On a bed near the fire lay a most beautiful boy; but at one glance we could see he was not only an idiot, but also dumb. A mass of short golden curls lay on the pillow. His large, bright eyes wandered restlessly. The beautiful face was flushed, and the damp of death hung heavily on the broad, white brow. From his lips there came incessantly that moaning, half-articulate sound that chilled one's very blood. By his side knelt the gentle lady I loved so well.

She rose as we entered the room, and coming towards us, said, simply:

"You have been kind before; be kind to me again. He is dying and I am all alone."

My mother—Heaven bless her for it!—clasped the slender, girlish figure in her arms, and kissed the white face over and over again. Then we knelt by the side of the bed.

Hour after hour passed, and no sound was heard, save the moaning of the poor dumb boy and the bitter sobs of his sister.

The gray dawn of morning appeared before the struggle ended, and the beautiful face wore the pallor and stillness of death.

Then, while tears rained down her face, Clarice Holte told her simple story. Her father had been a wealthy London merchant, who had made a large fortune entirely by his own skill and exertions. He died when Clarice was fourteen, and her little brother a babe in his mother's arms.

She told us of her mother's despair, when the boy, who had the most beautiful face and soft golden curls, was declared to be utterly and hopelessly imbecile. From that time she withdrew herself entirely from the world. She went no more into society; she shut herself up with her children, and devoted every moment, every thought, every care of her life to her boy. Clarice willingly shared her solitude. When she was eighteen her mother died. Then the real troubles of this life commenced for Clarice Holte. On the mother's death-bed she exacted from the young girl a promise that, while her brother lived, she would devote her life to him, even if it obliged her to forego all love and all happiness. Clarice promised, and she kept her word nobly.

To her great alarm one or two friends wished her to send the boy to a public asylum, saying he would be better cared for.

Then she determined upon leaving her old home and going to some secluded, quiet spot, where no one who knew her could find her—where she could devote herself, as her mother had done, to the unfortunate boy.

Her faithful old nurse discovered the house in Western Terrace. It suited them exactly, and in the silence of the night the poor idiot was brought home. It was a heavy burden for young shoulders to carry. The constant watching, both night and day, drove the bloom from the fair face, and imprinted there a look of dreamy sadness, pitiful to see.

To add to her troubles, poor Herbert began to droop; he pined after his dead mother, and could not be comforted. Dr. James still attended him, as he had done during his mother's life. Clarice lived in continual dread lest the kind but officious friends, who were so anxious to remove her brother from her care, should discover her residence. Hence her terror when I suddenly appeared in the garden. She believed herself discovered. For the same reason, she dreaded any one visiting or entering the house, fearing that, if her brother's existence became known, she would be deprived of him.

The mystery was solved at length. We helped Clarice—we stood by her when her brother was laid in the pretty cemetery near Surbiton. We soothed her sorrow, and helped her to bear her grief. Gradually the shadow passed from the fair face, and the lips learned to smile.

She looked perfectly happy, one morning, when the golden sunbeams fell upon her, and we stood side by side at the altar. She looked perfectly happy, for on that morning Clarice Holte became my wife.—Good Literature.

To Mark the Old Trails.

In Kansas an effort is being made to have the Legislature appropriate funds to mark the course of the Santa Fe trail, which is perhaps the most historic highway in the Union. In California a society has been formed to locate the route of "el camino real," or king's highway, the road used by the Franciscan missionaries from Mexico who founded missions from San Diego to San Francisco more than a century ago. It is proposed to restore this road and make of it a wide boulevard for its whole length. The project is thus practical as well as sentimental, a circumstance which augurs well for its success.

Many historic trails remain to be marked, however, and the work will have to be inaugurated soon if it is to be done at all. The wagon trails from the Missouri River to Salt Lake City on the south and to Fort Fetterman on the north will soon be obliterated through disuse. The railroads have long ago taken all the traffic that once passed over these trails. Nothing now remains to mark where they once ran except an occasional deep-worn rut which time has yet failed to fill up and the ruins of a "station" far away from any human habitation. For many miles no trace of many of the overland routes can be found, and history and tradition will often have to be relied upon to relocate them.

Yet the task of picking up the old trails is not at all impossible, as is shown by the success which has attended efforts to locate the old military road over which General Braddock marched from Virginia to death and defeat near old For Duquesne, now Pittsburg. Thanks to the exertions of individual investigators, the route of practically the whole road is now defined, and he who has leisure and inclination can follow it from its beginning to the very spot where George Washington and his "irregulars" saved the broken remnant of the Braddock expedition from annihilation.—Chicago Chronicle.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING

It is noted that English ideals of comfort are gradually altering the style of German domestic architecture.

A Chinese Emperor's name is too sacred to be used by the general public, and no one is permitted either to read or write it.

The Japanese imperial library, at Tokio, has on its shelves something like 2000 written and printed mathematical works, extending as far back as 1595.

Sycamore is an exceedingly durable wood, and a statue composed of it, now in an Eastern museum, is said to be quite sound, although nearly 6000 years old.

According to La Tribuna di Roma, one of the gaiters worn by Garibaldi when he was wounded in the Battle of Aspromonte, August 28, 1862, has been presented to the Mayor of Rome.

The authorities of Clacton, a leading British seaside resort, grant licenses for donkey riding only on the stipulation that the owners of the donkeys don't beat the animals or use any bad language.

One hundred pounds was given in London for the first edition of Daniel Defoe's "The Life and Surprising Adventures of Robinson Crusoe," 1819, together with "The Farther Adventures," issued in the same year.

Without doubt China is the original home of silk, and from the twenty-third century B. C., and even earlier, the care of the silk worm, the spinning and the weaving of its produce have been the special province of the Chinese women.

In some parts of West Africa the girls have long engagements. On the day of their birth they are betrothed to a baby boy a trifle older than themselves, and at the age of twenty they are married. The girls know of no other way of getting a husband, and so they are quite happy and satisfied. As wives they are patterns of obedience, and the marriages usually turn out a success.

Women sailors are employed in Denmark, Norway and Finland, and are often found to be excellent mariners. In Denmark several women are employed as State officials at sea, and particularly in the pilot service. They go out to meet the incoming ships; they climb nimbly out of their boats; they show their official diploma and they steer the newcomer safely into the harbor. It is the same in Finland.

HOPE FOR BIG EATERS.

Some Famous Old Men Always Indulged in Good Square Meals.

The man with a good appetite has a hard time nowadays. All the faddists are shouting that he eats too much. If he doesn't jump at the chance of fasting forty days he is snubbed. And if he doesn't joyously cut out two of his quondam three meals a day he is scorned. But once in a long while he does get a little comfort. A writer in Truth gave him hope recently by telling about famous old men who had been hearty eaters.

There was Victor Hugo, who, in the very stronghold of French chefs, kept an Irish cook who herself attended her master at table. She had her reward in the heartiness with which he ate of her roast and boiled viands—such as a leg of mutton, rib of beef, ham, gammon of Wiltshire bacon and greens, a dish one hardly ever tastes in France.

She and Mme. Drouet, the tactful friend and secretary of Victor Hugo through the greater part of his literary career, were agreed in satisfying to the full his fondness for early spring vegetables and new potatoes. As he insisted on their being passed around the table, which was spread for many disciples, admirers, hangers-on, they must have cost him a small fortune.

Asparagus, which cost twenty-five cents and more a stalk, was often served, Hugo always taking a generous helping and then calling for more. He arranged the stalks circularly on his plate, with the points inward like the spokes of a wheel, and placed the sauce in the middle in a round space left vacant for it. This arrangement was always symmetrical. He disliked to see a broken point, talked while eating, and ate, one might have thought, enough for two or three laborers.

All the sons of Louis Philippe were bonnes fourchettes, and, without being tipplers, were fond of the high-class French vintages. Two of them—Nemours and Joinville—exceeded the fourscore limit of age. Aumale attained his seventy-sixth year. The Duc de Montpensier lived only to the age of sixty-six, but his early death has been attributed to his habit of sharing the chocolate made for the Duchess.

She required half a kilo of chocolate for each person at the petit dejeuner, with toast allowed to cool in a toast rack, which she buttered thickly herself.

The Princess Clementine, now the only surviving child of Louis Philippe, has all her life been a hearty eater, without, however, Bourbon excess. She is now eighty-six.

A LESSON IN KINDNESS.

From teasing poor, dumb brutes refrain;
It's very wrong to give them pain.

If near you a bulldog should lie
Asleep, it's best to pass him by.

Don't kick him in the ribs, at least;
That's cruel to a slumbering beast.

To snakes you always should be kind
And never tickle them behind.

You ought to know how queer it feels
When you are tickled on the heels.

Be kind, my child, I say again;
Don't feed the elephant cayenne.

I early was convinced that we Should not annoy the bumblebee.

It's very wicked to molest
The hornet and poke up his nest.

No; leave it hanging to the twig.
The hornet's small and you are big.

Be kind to all created things—
Particularly those with stings.

Before you hurt them always pause
To see if they have teeth and claws.

"No," replied the fair shopper, "I guess I won't select the goods now. You see, I'm just looking for a friend." "There's another roll on the shelf," said the salesman, "I'll take it down if you think your friend is likely to be in it."—Puck.

A Terrible Spectacle.

The present eruption as a spectacle has been terrible and awe-inspiring, but not, for the most part, as brilliant a sight as other minor manifestations of the volcano's power, for the whole region was covered nearly all the time with a dense pall of smoke and powdered dust through which nothing could be seen except the terrible flashes of lightning which seemed to pervade the earth and sky. This lightning was incessant, and accompanied with horrible roarings, which, mingled with the unceasing bellowings of the crater, made a scene of terror that might well be compared to the descriptions of Dante's Inferno. Yet such was the unquestioning faith of the peasants in the protective power of their saints that they confronted the monstrous serpents of lava sweeping down on their homes almost as if they were watching the progress of a railroad train, till the implacable nature of their deadly enemy dawned upon them.—From William P. Andrews' "Vesuvius in Fury," in the Century.

How is This For High.

Senator Clay, of Georgia, was once showing a constituent the sights of the National capital when the Washington Monument was reached.

"What do you think of it?" carelessly asked the Senator, as the constituent stood gazing in awe at the stately shaft.

"Senator," responded the Georgian, gravely, "that the darndest, highest one story building I've ever seen!"—American Spectator.

THE Populists of Georgia have decided not to put out a State ticket, but will vote for Hoke Smith, the Democratic candidate, the democratic platform embracing all their needs.

ANOTHER election confronts the people of Clanton on Tuesday September, 18, when a vote will be taken upon an issue of bonds to the amount of $5,000, payable in ten years. There has been a well defined objection to bonds of any sort in this county, but it does appear that, as the present needs of Clanton exceed its income, there can be no reasonable argument against this issue. The town is in debt, the streets ought to be lighted, and the school must be properly furnished. All this can be accomplished by the proposed issue, and the taxpayers relieved of a burden at present, while the future will take care of itself.

ON page 2 of this issue will be found the correspondence between Mr. F. A. Gulledge and Mr. J. Osmond Middleton. Ordinarily we should decline to publish the last epistle of Mr. Middleton for two reasons—first, on account of its intemperate tone, and second, on account of its length, but present it to our readers at the request of Mr. Gulledge, who certainly has no reason to fear its publication.

We regret very much that Mr. Middleton should have decided upon taking the course he has; up to the present the campaign has been conducted in a pleasant manner, both sides exhibiting a desire to be reasonable and conservative, but this latest effusion of Mr. Middleton,s would seem to indicate a lack of consideration for the proprieties which the even tempered and well balanced minds of the voters of Chilton will resent, and assuredly turn to the advantage of Mr. Gulledge in November.

IN MEMORIAM.

The death angel visited the home of Mr. M. C. Williams on last Wednesday evening and took from our midst Sister Mattie, the wife of Mr Williams; Sister Williams was a devoted Christian and a fond and loving mother She had been a member of the church eighteen years, since God in His infinite wisdom and love has seen fit to call her away from our midst, we should bear in mind that God is the giver of all good and perfect gifts. We know by the ties of nature that it is hard to give her up; our loss is her eternal gain Sister Williams leaves a husband and eight dear children to mourn her loss God be with them in their lonely hours; help them to raise up the little ones in the way that thou would have them go Since it is our Father's will to call her away from us, we can't call her back but we can only live to meet her in that sweet and happy home where parting is no more.

A precious one from us has gone,
A voice so sweet and still,
A place is vacant in their home
Which never can be filled.

ONE WHO LOVED HER

Shiloh.

Dear Editor—Please allow me space in your paper to say a few words about our meeting at Shiloh We had a fine meeting which began on Saturday before the second Sunday in August; I think everybody that attended enjoyed it There will be preaching there on Saturday before the second Sunday in September, at 11 o'clock a.m, Also Saturday night, Sunday and Sunday night; baptising Sunday at 10 o'clock Every member is requested to be there for purpose of choosing a pastor for next year

I am glad to say that Mrs Emma Mullins is improving under the treatment of good Dr Hayes

Jemison.

Editor Banner—Please allow me space in your valuable paper for a few words in regard to the meeting held at the court house by the R. F. D., carriers, I was indeed sorry I could not be there. I thought I could go on my route that day, and go down there that night but was disappointed.

I guess the carriers thought that we did not believe in organization or did not appreciate Mr. Caddell as district oaganizer by not being present at the meeting, as nearly all the carriers in the county were there except three Jemison carriers. But nevertheless, we believe in organization whole soul and body; we belong to the state organization and will to the county just as soon as possible, and as far as Mr.. J. A. Caddell being appointed District organizer, they could not have appointed a man that was any more capable than Mr. Caddell, and for my part I think he will stir up great interest among the carriers, and we will have an interesting meeting on Labor Day. I feel sure he will use every effort while he is gone to organize the carriers, and build up the R. F. D., service. Now let every carrier meet Mr. Caddell in Clanton on Labor Day and have as interesting meeting as possidle. I would like very much to have our patrons there or as many as will come to see what great work the carriers are doing for the people in the county. We are not only putting forth every effort to build up the public roads and get them in a better shape not only for the carriers but for the people throuhout the county. I cannot see why the people are so careless about their roads, when they see they need good public roads throughout the county.

Well, now let every carrier meet Mr. Caddell in Clanton on next Monday and see if we cannot have a meeting that will be a benefit to our patrons also build up our routes so that our patrons will appreciate it in the near future. I would be glad to see a letter in the paper every week from some one of the carriers.

Old Prospect.

Dear Editor—As I have not seen anything from this place, will write a few lines. Corn in general is good, but cotton is sorry, owing to the excessive rains; I see no reason why we should not receive a fair price for our cetton this fall, and I think we will if we do not rush it on the market too fast. Boys, stick to the S. C. A., let us make it a success; its just what we make it; let us push the thing further, we know that we have been benefitted by it, why not keep the good work going.

Let us not be like the two old darkies were. There were two old darkies out in the woods one day and a rabbit jumped up and ran off at a swift pace and one of them took after it and chased it a good ways and stopped. On returning, the other wished to know why he didn't keep on after it. Let me tell you, in the first place it run too fast, in the second, I didn't run fast enough; third, I saw I was gwine to tire 'fore I 'gin, and so I jest 'cided to let 'em go. Why, says the other old darkey, you would er soon caught 'em, the main part of your race was over, you wus gaining on 'em, yet you tire 'fore you 'gin. Boys, let us not be this way by the S. C. A.; we have run this far, so let us run on till we ketch 'em—that is, receive a fair and just price for our cotton.

Hurrah for the Democratic ticket.

DEMOCRAT.

OBITUARY.

On the 4th of August, 1906., the death angel visited the home of Dr. I. W. Johnson, Calera, taking away the devoted husband and loving father.

Dr. Johnson was a man of high honor and from an honorable family. He stood well and gained many friends wherever he went.

On the 2nd day of June, 1904, he was happily united in matrimony to Miss Bettie M. Roy. Our Heavenly Father has blessed them with twin boys, which brought much happiness and sunshine to their home, Dr. Johnson almost idolized his twins and had high hopes of seeing them useful men in their future lives, but alas, how often are we disappointed in this life.

The burial of Dr. Johnson took place Sunday afternoon at Plantersville, where he was quitely laid away in the Christian cemetery.

The remains were accompanied to its last resting place by Evergreen camp No 183, and a train of sorrowing relatives and friends.

May God bless the grief stricken wife and parents is the prayer of,

A FRIEND.

It is no trouble to see that wealth is a curse—when the other fellow has it.

ALABAMA STATE FAIR.

The big State Fair to be given in Montgomery October 22nd to October 27th is attracting much more attention in this section and many people are already making their arrangements to go to the capital city to hear William J. Bryan speak. Mr. Bryan has accepted the invitation and will be at the Fair.

Other speakers who will address the thousands at the Fair are: Secretary James Wilson of the Agricultural Department. Commissioner Sargent of the Imigration Department, President Harvie Jordan of the Southern Cotton Association and an officer of the Farmer's Union which has been invited to be represented; President Samuel Spencer of the Southern Railway and others.

Farmers Day will be the big day at the Fair. On this day Mr. Jordan and the representative of the Farmers Union will speak. It is probable that the announcement of the winner in the contest between the counties for the best agricultural display will also be announced on Farmers Day. A cash prize of $1,000 has been offered for the best disylay from one county and already more than 30 counties have entered the contest.

The Alabama Agricultural Association organized to give an annual affair in Montgomery, the center of the agricultural section of the State, has purchased 100 acres of land close to Montgomery. W. F. Vandiver, the progressive citizen of Montgomery is President of the Association and its stockholders are scattered throughout the farming section. The Association has constructed permanent buildings and a fine race track and everything is in readiness for the great event.

Many fine horsee have been entered for the races and one of the best brass bands in Alabama has been engaged to give continuous concerts.

The railroads have promised exceptionally low ticket rates to the Montgomery Fair and a committee is laboring to perfect an arrangement whereby every person visiting the Fair will be cared for with comfort.

The people of this county should begin making plans to go to the Fair as it will not only provide innocent amusement but will make a display of what the Farmers of Alabama are doing.

Men Past Sixty in Danger

More than half of mankind over sixty years of age suffer from kidney and bladder disorders, usually enlargement of prostrate glands. This is both painful and dangerous, and Foley's Kidney Cure should be taken at the first sign of danger, as it corrects irregularities and has cured many old men of this disease. Mr. Rodney Burnett, Rockport, Mo., writes: "I suffered with enlarged prostrate gland and kidney trouble for years and after taking two bottles of Foley's Kidney Cure I feel better than I have for twenty years, although I am now 91 years old." Topographical Survey of Chilton County.

Birmingham, Aug. 17, 1906
Editor Banner, Clanton

Dear Sir—I herewith enclose copy of letter from the Director of the United States Geological Survey, which explains itself.

After these surveys have been completed and the maps prepared, I shall take pleasure in furnishing copies of the same to such persons as may need a supply thereof, as long as my quota lasts.

Yours very truly,
SYDNEY J BOWIE.

Washington, D. C. Aug. 10, 1906
Hon. Sydney J. Bowie,
House of Representatives,
Washington, D.C,

Sir—The Director of the Survey, who is now absent in the west, instructed me to advise you that as a result of appropriations made by the last Congress for the continuation of topographical surveys in the United States, we are now engaged in topographic mapping in portions of Shelby and Chilton counties.

The surveys will undoubtedly be of value in connection with studies of the developoment of the mineral resources. Very Respectfully,

H. C. RIZER,
Acting Director.

Sardis.

Dear Editor—Please allow me space in the Banner this week, as I have seen nothing from Sardis recently. I want you and the readers of the dear old Banner to know that we are still here and the Banner finds its way down here each week and brings us the news from all parts of Chilton.

Our crops are looking fine, especially corn; cotton not so good as was expected on account of the continued rains in July.

Our Sunday school at this place is doing nicely, though we don't have as good attendance as we should; so let us strive to keep our Sabbath school up. Parents, come and bring the little ones.

Rev. Deason filled Bro. Jones' appointment here Sunday and preached a good sermon to a large congregation. We have prayer-meeting every Wednesday night; everybody come and bring someone with you.

We are sorry to say Mr. Andrew Deason is still very sick with fever; hope to see him up again soon.

Mr. R. J. Campbelle of Summerfield, accompanied by her two little daughters, Misses Ethel and Anna, visited relatives here Sunday,

Mr. and Mrs. Rollins of Mulberry visited friends in our community recently.

Mrs. D. McCary and sweet little children of Blocton, are visiting Mr. S. B. McCary's family this week.

Miss Everee Ratiiff is spending awhile with relatives at Maplesville.

Mr. Lee Hayes and family of Mulberry visited Mr. L. B. Broadhead, Sunday.

Prof. Joe Bone's school closed Friday; we are sorry we can't keep him in our community all the time. Well, as we don't have much news in this part of Chilton, I will close with good wishes to the Editor and the many readers of the Banner.

SUNDAY SCHOOL GIRL.

Letter to Mayor Kicker.

Clanton, Ala.

Dear Sir: You are interested in the prosperity of your town. You can contribute to it materially, and give it a far more prosperous look at the same time.

Perhaps the public property needs a good coat of paint.

Devoe will supply that coat with two thirds of the number of gallons required of any other. Devoe will last twice as long as any other. Devoe is all paint and full measure. Devoe is the strongest paint known. Devoe will take care of the property, in the long run, for half the money required by any other.

The reason is stated above: Devoe is all paint and full-measure: the strongest paint known.

E. D. Jewell, Corry, Pa., painted his house 5 years ago with a mixed paint; took 14 gallons Last spring he repainted with Devoe; bought 14 gallons and had 4 left. Saved $15 to $20, for painting costs two or three times as much as the paint.

Yours truly
F. W. DEVOE & Co.

NOTICE

To the Churches of the Chilton County Association—Greeting:

I have sent blank associational letters to the clerks of all the churches af this Association except two, viz: Pleasant Hill and Thorsby, not knowing the names of the clerks, I could not send the letters. If the clerks will write me. I will gladly send them. The Association meets at Pilgrim's Rest, near Pletcher on M & O. Oct. 17 and 18. I earnestly hope that the churches will use the blanks, send up a full quota of messengers and endeavor to do all they can for the great work fostered by our denomination. P. G. MANESS, Mod.

Prof. Tyler, of Amherst college, said recently: "A man can live comfortably without brains: No man ever existed without a digestive system. The dyspeptic has neither faith, hope or charity." Day by day people realize the importance of caring for their digestion; realize the need of the use of a little corrective after overeating. A corrective like Kodol For Dyspepsia. It digests what you eat. Sold by Upchurch Drug co.

A REMARKABLE SKIN BEAUTIFIER.
Health, Beauty and a Clear, Complexion Through Laxakola Tonic Tablets.

"In all the years we have been in business," say Florence Drug co, "we do not recall ever selling anything that has aroused so much interest among our lady customers, and not a day passes but we hear of some one greatly benifitted through using Laxakola Tonic Tablets," Clanton ladies who have been troubled with pimples, blotch s, moth spots and other skin affections, now pride themselves on the fresh, healthy complexion obtained through using this mild tonic laxative.

"And it is not surprising. They are different from anything you ever heard of." A CHALLENGE.

To the Republican Nominee for Representative of Chilton County in the Coming Campaign, Whoever You May Be:

I hereby challenge you to joint discussion of the issues of the day at such times and places as the executive committees of our parties may agree upon. I am not yet the nominee of my party, but I know I am of and for the people and I await their verdict. Respectfully,

F. A. GULLEDGE.

MIDDLELTON ACCEPTS CHALLENGE.

Mr. F. A. Gulledge, Verbena, Ala.:

Dear Sir—I am now the nominee of the Republican and Populist parties of Chilton county for representative in the legislature, as voiced by the people's primary held August 6, and I hereby accept the challenge which you had the assurance to issue six weeks prior to your nomination.

My campaign committee will be named within a few days and you will be notified accordingly in order that you, or your committee, may take the matter up with them and arrange for the joint discussion. Respectfully,

J. OSMOND MIDDLETON.

MR. GULLEDGE'S LETTER.

Verbena, Ala., Aug. [illegible], 1906.

Mr. J. O. Middleton, Clanton:

Dear Sir—I note your letter without date, published in The Union of August 16, 1906.

Not having a ring backing my candidacy, to say who should or who should not run as candidates in the primary, and being unhampered by the localized collar of any man or set of men, and relying upon pure, conservative Democracy of that pattern framed by Thomas Jefferson, I submitted, and submit now, my lot to the people, and the challenge was issued to the nominee of the Republican combine, conditioned upon my nomination.

Individually I will have no campaign committee, except the people; my party is of the people and springs from principle, in advocacy of the people's needs, wants and desires; its campaign committee, not mine, will, in due course, take the matter up with "your" committee.

I expect to receive a good size vote at the hands of the Populists, who see fit to take advantage of the chance offered them to identify themselves with the best and most conservative interests of the state. You, as a Republican, having no plausible or reasonable claim to their votes.

You claim your nomination from two political organizations, which represent and stand for divergent ideals and principles. Therefore, the citizens of Chilton county, to whom you submit your candidacy, are entitled to know what your platform is. Upon what theory of governmental policy do you rest your claim to the votes of the citizens of Chilton county? I call upon you now to set forth in public print the platform upon which you stand.

I shall ask the Banner to publish this reply this week, and if you will join me in this request, next week both of us will ask the Banner and the Union to publish this letter or the entire correspondence.

Unless physical disability prevents I will meet you at appointments arranged by the campaign committee of the Democratic party, and in the event of my enforced absence, I shall try to have some one in my stead. Yours truly,

F. A. GULLEDGE.

MR. MIDDLETON WRITES OPEN LETTER TO MR. GULLDEGE.

Clanton, Ala., Aug. 27, 1906.

Mr. F. A. Gulledge, Verbena, Ala.:

Sir—Your open letter, addressed to me and published in the Banner, has had my attention. While as a reply to my letter accepting your challenge, it is palpably impertinent, yet there are certain observations in it to which I shall direct attention.

First, you lay stress on the fact that there is no ring backing your candidacy, to say who should or should not run as candidates in the primary, etc. I do not recall that I have heard the specific charge made that a "ring" was backing your candidacy, but the fact is that, after careful consideration, it seems that your candidacy is without any backing of any kind or description, except it be your secretary, William M. Adams, Esq., of Clanton, and Martin Sorrell, of Thorsby.

Second, you say that you are unhampered by the "localized" collar of any man, or set of men. Now, Mr. Gulledge, just as a matter of information, tell us what kind of "collar" you wore when you were supporting the gold standard candidate for Congress and hobnobbing with the Republican candidate, W. F. Aldrich, against the regular Democratic candidate. This is the time, you will remember, when your services to the Republican party are alleged to have been rewarded by giving you the appointment of postmaster at Verbena. It was by resorting to such tactics as this that you were able to defeat a worthy young woman who was an applicant for the place. Tell us about that "collar," Mr. Gulledge!

Third, you state that your challenge was issued conditioned upon your nomination. Then common sense, to say nothing of propriety, would have dictated that you wait until you had been nominated instead of making the challenge six weeks prior to your nomination. It smacks mightily of the "ring." Why did you direct the call of the mass meeting, and then as soon as Hawthorne (poor Hawthorne!) had been driven from the field have your crowd recede from that position? It savors strongly of the "ring." The fact is, Mr. Gulledge, you have formed the most consummate "ring" in the history of the politics of this county, and you are the bell-wether of the gang.

Fourth, you say that your campaign committee will be the "people." If I mistake not, you base your claims to the suffrages of the people of this county largely upon the fact that you are a man of "practical" ideas, and schooled in the "practical utility" of things. This being true, you ought to know, if you are sincere when you say the people constitute your campaign committee, that it would be impracticable to arrange the joint discussions unless your representatives were narrowed down to a smaller number to confer with my committee; and to say that the people of this county are backing you in your political ambitions is the most absurdly foolish assertion I have heard of even you making during the campaign.

Fifth, you boast that your party is "of the people, and springs from principle." If this be true, you must feel mightily out of place, for the only time in the last forty years that the Democratic party ever even approached principle was, when, under the leadership of Bryan, it endeavored to make a fight against trusts and corporate greed, and then, I am informed, you bolted the party and assisted in Bryan's defeat by supporting Palmer and Buckner. Your assertions are easily made, but they wither in the light of your politcal history.

Sixth, you say you expect to receive a good vote at the hands of the Populists. This is an extravagant assertion for you to make, in view of the fact that you can't control the strength of your own party. But then, no doubt, you are old enough to understand the difference between "expectations" and "realizations." The Populists of Chilton county have never yet learned to lick the hand that smites them; and, pray, what special faction of your party would you advise them to join? I suppose you would like for them to join Gulledge.

Seventh, you call upon me to set forth in public print the platform upon which I stand. Democratic candidates have a kind of mania for "platforms"; the result is that each one has a "platform" of his own, and you seem to be visibly affected by the craze. I stand upon the broad platform of the party to which I adhere—the platform of that splendid party which, for forty long years, with one or two lamentable exceptions, has shaped the destiny of this great country. When it comes to questions of legislation, of course, I have ideas of my own, but when it comes to matters affecting Chilton county, you may rest assured that I will be governed entirely by the will of the majority of the people. If you were one-tenth as smart as you think you are, you would not have to make this demand. If you will refresh your recollection, you will recall that I gave you my platform when we met at New Cedron, in Beat 6, and again in Beat 8, at Pilgrim's Rest, where, in the presence of a thousand people, I made you come out from behind your treacherous memory and repeat a plank in your "platform" which you had inadvertently (?) omitted. It was the plank in which you pledge the people that, if you are elected to the legislature, you will pass a law making it a crime for one candidate to utter, or give circulation to, any remarks derogatory of his opponent, unless made in the presence of that opponent. It was at this same place, you will remember, that I told the people of the earnestness with which you repeated this plank, and that you said that, as you wrote this plank, "each stroke of the pen was mingled with your heart's blood," and it was here that I branded you with inconsistency in not living up to that plank, and I told the people that at the time you were reading the plank at New Cedron you had, with the deliberate intent to assassinate my character, placed a foul libel against me in cold print and put it in a thousand homes in Chilton county.

I again make the charge that you do not stand upon your own platform; I charge you, sir, with taking a position and receding from it, or attempting to do so. And you are the most phenomenal political acrobat in the history of this county. You launched your campaign as the "farmer" candidate, and realizing that the people of this county would not be duped by any such rot, you begun to pose as the "practical business man," and now the Banner commends you to the people of this county as the "gentleman of leisure." You have in your platform a plank favoring the settling of questions of local legislation—"such as stock law"—by a vote of the people to be affected thereby. Didn't you know when you wrote your platform that this question had been settled by the fundamental law of Alabama. If you are ignorant of our fundamental laws you would be the less efficient legislator. If you knew the question was settled, then your motive in inserting this plank in your platform must have been sinister. I charge you, sir, with inserting this plank in your platform for the purpose of trying to cover your connection, with that infamous "piece of legislation" which thrust stock law upon the people of Beat 8 against the will of an overwhelming majority. You may have your friends sign a statement saying that you did not visit the legislature during that time, but I made you admit at New Cedron, in the presence of six hundred people, that you contributed twenty-five dollars to have the law passed.

You refer contemptuously to the Populist and Republican "combine." You may look with scorn upon them if you see fit, but, sir, they are the very backbone of this county. They are the brave men who, for twenty long years, have battled against such infamous practices as I have just referred to. They are men who stand for liberty and justice; men whose heart beats are responsive to every noble sentiment. The Roncesvalles Pass, where fell before the opposing lance the harnessed chivalry of Spain looked not upon a better or a braver band! You may refer to them with scorn if you will, but I will deem it the proudest moment of my life if I should be elected to represent them in the legislative halls of Alabama.

You say that you will meet me in joint discussion unless physical disability prevents, in which event you will have some one in your stead. I demand that you live up to your challenge; I demand that you meet me on every stump in Chilton county. I shall expect you to fill your engagements and to do your own speaking so far as the joint discussions are concerned. I am going to do my own speaking in this campaign, and if I am elected to the legislature I will represent the people in person and not by proxy. You complain of feeble health, but you are continually scouting around over this county and "reading my platform" wherever you are able to "corner" two or three fellow citizens. The same day that your letter was written and mailed here at Clanton you were in the western part of the county boasting that you were bound to be elected because there was no one running against you. Now, if I am so insignificant as this, why is it, sir, that since I have accepted your challenge, and invite you to come into the open and get the issues squarely before the people, you become suddenly sick, complain that the disease from which you suffer won't permit you "to stand" and you talk of getting some one to meet me in your stead? The fact is Mr. Gulledge, I am inclined to think when it comes to politics, you are a great big bluff. You remind me of the story I have heard told of the wealthy merchant and the humble well digger. The merchant, who had grown rich off the people by selling them goods at an exorbitant price and by lending money at a usurious interest, had an unwritten law (characteristic of the czar) that if any of his customers fell behind with their accounts he would give them a flogging. The poor well digger was one of the unfortunates who couldn't pay his account; the merchant took him back to his office, and there, surrounded by his son and son-in-law, he told the well digger of the inevitable—that he must take a flogging—and as he reached for his raw-hide, the well digger, with a look of despair on his face remarked, as he drew from his bosom something that resembled dynamite "Well, I guess we can all go to hell together." "For God's sake, don't," exclaimed the merchant, and in terror the Shylocks took to their heels, leaving the well digger in full control of the situation, and who ever afterwards laughed about the fact of routing the whole gang with a "raw potato." There is no doubt but what you started into this campaign with the "flogging" idea, but you have evidently scented dynamite somewhere. I think it possible to take a few "raw" facts of your history and run you out of the campaign.

I again demand that you meet me in joint discussion on every stump in this county, and then "Lay on, McDuff, and damned be he who first cries hold, enough." Respectfully,

J. OSMOND MIDDLETON.

THE PULPIT.

A SCHOLARLY SUNDAY SERMON BY DR. W. S. LEWIS.

Subject: The Secret of the Lord.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—President W. S. Lewis, D. D., of Morningside College, Sioux City, Ia., is the vacation preacher in the Hanson Place M. E. Church. He began his services there Sunday morning and had a good audience. He is an excellent preacher. His subject was "The Fear of the Lord." The text was from Psalm xxv.:14: "The secret of the Lord is with them that fear Him, and He will show them His covenants." Dr. Lewis said:

Words, like men, are affected by the atmosphere in which they live. A word spoken 2000 years ago, but to another people, and in another clime, may fail to represent its highest and best meaning to those born in another age and under other skies. Many years have flown since this word was spoken, and at least one of these in the text needs a word of explanation—fear. The good Book says: "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom," but reference is made in the New Testament to the fact that perfect love casteth out fear. Thanks to the cross, the broken tomb, the descent of fire which spoke on cloven tongue, for a changed atmosphere, in which our text may read: "The secret of the Lord is with them that love Him."

The problem of knowledge is not that, but how, it is. A few small philosophers have doubted the fact that they knew, but that is carrying doubt to the point of insanity. We know, and we know we know; the how that we know is the problem. That an idea may be passed from one mind to another, may even by crystallized into a word and remain pent up there from century to century, to break forth into another mind, to be reflected on, and on, through the ages. How this is, is more than we know. How that the mind may get a voice from the rocks so that the mountains shall speak and make themselves understood, and from the sky and from the sea. We know they speak, but how? That is the question. Do you think that God, who has expressed His love in flower, in brook, in sky, should have exhausted all His resources to make Himself known as He speaks from nature? God speaks to the heart, the inner world is His realm. This is His throne, and He leaves His secrets there to become the seed of thought, of inspiration and of action. The great problem of hearing His word and then to translate it through the tongue, the finger tips and footprints, so that it shall become the living word to other folks, is the problem of the hour.

To whom will God speak? We raise this question to answer it by asking you to whom do you commit the secrets of your heart? Do you tell those who revile you, who have no faith in you, who speak ill of you? Do you tell these the secrets of your heart? It's a great thing to be a friend, to know how to awaken the spirit of friendship in others. To whom do you commit your secrets? The first quality of friendship is the capacity for faith. You cannot trust those in whom you do not believe. You cannot inspire in them the first note of friendship. The captious critic has no friends. The teacher who asks his pupil the hardest questions and criticises him because he fails to answer; the preacher who begins his service and ends it with a spirit of criticism, will not awaken in the heart the deepest, the best inspirations. We must begin by saying: "I believe in you." We must have the capacity for seeing the best and the truest in people. We are commanded in the good Book that we should love one another, and I trust we do, but I am thankful that that does not include that command that we must like everybody, for there are some folks whom it is hard to like, and of these are the thin-voiced, pinched-faced, hollow-eyed critic. The first quality, then, is that of inspiring people with the idea that we believe in them, and if we have faith in others, they will have faith in us, for faith in the heart begets faith in one another. It is so with God. If we would know Him and awaken within Him the power even of committing to us His secrets, we must believe, for with the heart the man believeth unto righteousness—that righteousness which brings the image of God into the face of clay. And then, too, we must tell our friends that we believe in them. I love flowers much, but pray you do not reserve them all for the funeral. Tell your friends you believe them; tell them that you love them. Speak with your lips, speak with your eye, speak with your finger tips. Tell them you love them. And God, too, is touched by the same testimony. "With the mouth confession is made unto salvation." Another quality absolutely essential to friendship, absolutely essential to true friendship with man and with God—and that is downright, sincere heart honesty. I heard a man say the other day: "My religion is to pay my debts." He answered the question of how much he is worth by a round $50,000, and I said: "Of course, you pay your debts. There is one a little less great than the Almighty who would be after you if you did not, for Uncle Sam sees to that." You will pay your debts, but that is not the measure of honesty in the sense in which I speak it now. It is that sort of spiritual honesty that would blush deeply to think a falsehood or to harbor in the heart one moment a shadowy thought. It is the kind of honesty that is born of a pure heart—a heart touched by the sunlight of His infinite love, a heart that is made clean by the power of His spirit. Such sincerity as this, such downright honesty of purpose, is loved of men and God alike. It is the basis of true friendship with man and with God!

I read a new text the other day. It was as old as the voice of David, but it came with a new voice, thus: "The Lord made known His ways unto Moses, and His acts unto the children of Israel." This is the distinction between Moses and the children of Israel. Moses understood the act of God, but some way he had the soul-reach which recognized the finger of God uniting act to act to tell the sweet story of His love. I remember once, when the children of Israel were hungry, and Moses cried to God. In the morning, on the sand of the desert, everywhere, were little round, white loaves, and the Israelite, standing in the door of his tent, said: "What is it?" "Manna." He ate the gift of God and his hunger was satisfied, and said in his heart: "This is the act of God." But Moses, looking on hungry Israel, satisfying its appetite, and looking up to the blue, said: "This is the way of God." Again, the Israelites cried for food, and God at the word of Moses sent quails, and covered the camp, and the Israelites ate, and were satisfied, satisfied with the act of God, but the spirit of Moses would not rest until he saw through the act to the heart-beat of God, and he saw in quails, in rain, in fire, everywhere, when God spoke, he saw His way. And once, when he climbed the mountain and stood in the presence of Jehovah for forty days, so catching the heart-beat of the Infinite that his face shone with peculiar glory, and he must needs cover it with a veil ere the children of Israel would look upon him. Would you know the difference between Moses and the children of Israel? Their bones were buried in the wilderness, while he, long after, climbed Nebo's height, and, as the old tradition says, God kissed his spirit from his body and buried the clay with His own hand, and gathered the soul to His bosom. We have heard from him once since, when on the Mountain of Transfiguration with Elijah he talked with the man of sorrows concerning the death which He should accomplish at Jerusalem. Moses lives because he learned the ways of God. And would you know the secret of this in everyday life? Some of you have said: "I am poor; I was born poor, and I have held my own." I saw a poor woman the other day. I was directed through a gate into a pasture, down over a hill, through another gate into a green plot of meadow, and there was a little lonely house. The chairs were poor, the stool was broken—poverty everywhere, save only in the face of the woman. Every joint save one was stiff with incurable disease, and with the right hand she toiled busily on for the little ones taht gathered about her feet. I thought that I would bring her a word of consolation, but it was I that was consoled, for in the silence and sorrow of poverty God had talked to her, and her face shone with His beauty, and her eye was bright with His glory. Her words were like ointment poured forth. She lived in the heart of the beatitudes. And once I saw a rich man whose money came easy, and one day he heard the voice of God, and like a brook from the mountain he poured forth his dollars to sweeten and bless society, as the brook makes beautiful the meadows through which it runs on its way to the ocean. He had learned the way of God in riches. And this is what I would say whether the gift be poverty or riches, sickness or health, prosperity or adversity, cloud or shine—they are but the acts of God, and out of these acts He allows us to weave the story of His love, and to learn the beautiful lesson of His ways to the children of men.

Could I tell it all in one word, it is this: Can you remember the days when the smoke of the awful war between the North and the South was beginning to drift toward the ocean? Can you remember the last days of the war? One incident lingers in my memory. It was up in the Adirondack Mountains. A boy had gone from the home early in the sixties—gone to the war. Day after day a mother had prayed — prayed with such importunity, prayed with such faith, that the boy might come home—but the winter of '65, in March, the snow had fallen so deep that it covered the fence, and then a thaw, and then a frost, and the crust was so thick that a beast could walk over it without breaking through. In the early days of March a friend walked fourteen miles over the mountains. He came to the home, and brought a paper, and said: "A battle has been fought, a battle down on the ocean at Fort Fisher, and a stronghold has been taken." And then his voice grew hoarse. He said the battle had cost us much, and then a tear came into his eye, and then he read a long list of the slain, and when his voice spake one word it read: "Charles L——, killed in the fort, buried in the trenches. And the woman did not cry out, but went up stairs and stayed there all the rest of that day and that night, and until the afternoon of the next day. We thought she might never come down, for we had learned of Moses in the presence of God. But in the afternoon she came down, and her face shown like the face of an angel. In the secret of a great sob you may learn the secret of God. The secret of the Lord is with them that fear Him, and He will show them His covenants.

The Chief Duty.

There are times when it is a duty to make money; but the man does not live whose chief duty it is to make money, nor whose chief attention can safely be given to money-making. If one gives money-making first place, both his work and his judgment are undermined and unreliable. If he lets the opportunity to make money be the usual determining factor in his decisions, he is building character on about as stable a foundation as that man who heard Christ's words and did them not. In at least nine cases out of ten there is a better reason for or against any given course of action than a money-making reason. Those who will not believe this soon come to be recognized by their fellows as branded by the dollar mark. And such a mark is the sign of a slavery which robs life of all its real richness.

Make a Friend of Christ.

As we must spend time in cultivating our earthly friendships if we are to have their blessings, so we must spend time in cultivating the companionship of Christ.

Be Kind.

God has put in our power the happiness of those about us, and that is largely to be secured by our being kind.—Henry Drummond.

The department store salesman had taken twenty-nine rolls of dress goods from the shelf and was a trifle impatient.

"No," replied the fair shopper, "I mean I won't select the goods now. You see, I'm just looking for a friend."

"There's another roll on the top shelf," said the salesman. "I'll take it down if you think your friend is likely to be in it."—Puck.

Figuring Profits.

A Western writer has added another article to the list of those recently published on the subject of how to figure profit in the retail business, and as a practical method of figuring he suggests the following methods:

Subtract the cost from the selling price, the difference, of course, being the profit. Divide the latter (decimal) by the selling price, and the result will be the true profit, thus: Cost $5, selling price $8, profit $3, and $8 is contained in $3 .375 times, showing the profit in this instance to be 37 1-2 percent.

Below will be found a table that may be helpful to the man in a hurry:

To make a profit of 16 2-3 percent, add 20 percent to cost.

To make a profit of 20 percent, add percent to cost.

To make a profit of 25 percent, add 33 percent to cost.

To make a profit of 33 1-3 percent, add 50 percent to cost.

To make a profit of 50 percent, add percent to cost.—Confectioner & Baker.

GOOD NIGHT'S SLEEP.

No Medicine So Beneficial to Brain and Nerves.

Lying awake nights makes it hard to keep awake and do things in day time. To take "tonics and stimulants" under such circumstances is like setting the house on fire to see if you can put it out.

The right kind of food promotes refreshing sleep at night and a wide-awake individual during the day.

A lady changed from her old way of eating to Grape-Nuts and says:

"For about three years I had been a great sufferer from indigestion. After trying several kinds of medicine the doctor would ask me to drop potatoes, then meat, and so on, but in a few days that craving, gnawing feeling would start up and I would vomit everything I ate and drank.

"When I started on Grape-Nuts, vomiting stopped, and the bloating feeling which was so distressing disappeared entirely.

"My mother was very much bothered with diarrhea before commencing the Grape-Nuts, because her stomach was so weak she could not digest her food. Since using Grape-Nuts she is well, and says she don't think she could live without it.

"It is a great brain restorer and nerve builder, for I can sleep as sound and undisturbed after a supper of Grape-Nuts as in the old days when I could not realize what they meant by a "bad stomach." There is no medicine so beneficial to nerves and brain as a good night's sleep, such as you can enjoy after eating Grape-Nuts."

Bears in the Adirondacks.

The newspaper stories of the killing of three black bears by some city boys in the Adirondacks calls attention anew to the bear law in force in this state. Under the provisions of the statute bears may not be killed in July, August and September, except in Essex county. When the bear protectors went to the legislature for a protective law Essex county objected. The sheep raisers were unwilling to sacrifice their sheep to the bears, and protested so strenuously that they carried their point. It is the feeling of residents in the Adirondacks that bear protection is foolish.

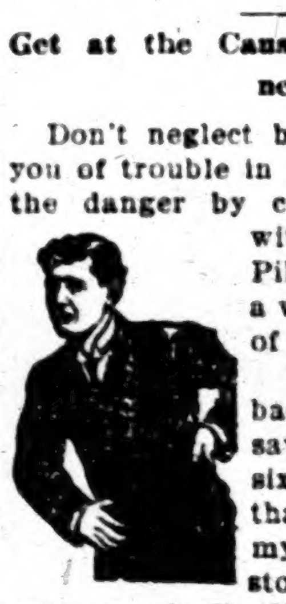
They profess not to be unwilling to live in a menagerie, if the rest of the people of the state are bound to give that character to the North Woods, but they do object to feeding the bears on mutton. A man who has lost fourteen sheep, killed by bears, is in no humor to indulge in sentiment, at all events not in sentiment which gives bruin immunity. The bear protective law in the Adirondacks has no substantial support there in any conviction of its usefulness or reasonableness. On the contrary it is regarded as a "fool law," and one unfortunate effect of it is to bring discredit on game laws in general. There is in the North Woods as elsewhere a growing acceptance of the game protective principle, and it is a great pity that this silly bear law should be in operation to retard the growth of right sentiment.—Forest and Stream.

George Eliot's House Sold.

Bird Grove, the house at Coventry where George Eliot lived with her father, was sold at auction a few days ago for 1600 pounds. It was at this house that the famous novelist formed her friendship with the Brays, through whom she was introduced to literature. Her father died in 1849, and the home at Bird Grove was then broken up.

BACKACHE IS KIDNEYACHE.

Get at the Cause—Cure the Kidneys.



Don't neglect backache. It warns you of trouble in the kidneys. Avert the danger by curing the kidneys with Doan's Kidney Pills. J. A. Haywood, a well known resident of Lufkin, Tex., says: "I wrenched my back working in a sawmill, was laid up six weeks, and from that time had pain in my back whenever I stooped or lifted. The urine was badly disordered and for a long time I had attacks of gravel. After I began using Doan's Kidney Pills the gravel passed out, and my back got well. I haven't had backache or bladder trouble since."

An April Drive in Labrador.

Now we are off for a cross-country journey on a round of visits that will take us nearly 200 miles before we reach home. We have some five tons of pemmican, as our first house will be fifty miles distant, and that over rough country, where we might expect to spend a night on the way at the best.

There is, of course, no road or even track, and we shall steer by compass and a rude sketch of the marshes and ponds that in company with a couple of trappers we have made of the path. Our only troubles are the belts of woods through which one cannot drive dog teams without walking ahead with an axe to clear away some of the obstructing trunks and bushes which tangle our paces inextricably. Our last journey was sixty miles to this place. We did the distance in one day.

Crossing the ice here also this trip we had one unique experience. We drove right up on to a large iceberg, and through the noble valley that traversed its centre. The sides of deep blue and green ice rose to over 200 feet in lofty pinnacles. And as the bright sun shone out and rendered transparent the clearer and the inner portions, it seemed from the valley more like being inside a fairy palace than off in the straits of Belle Isle on the back of a hoary visitor from northern Greenland.—Dr. W. F. Grenfell in the Boston Transcript.

Get Out of the Valley.

Get out of the Valley of Desolation. It's only a step to the Hills of Joy, where the stars are shining, and the morning breaks in splendor to the music of the trumpets of God, admonishes the Atlanta Constitution.

For Your Health.

If you are tired and fagged, drink a glass of milk just before you get in bed, rich milk, with its own cream on it. And also a simple tonic is a tablespoonful of olive oil three times a day, just after the meals; this nourishes the blood, gives a fresh color to the complexion and feeds the nerves, says the Portland Evening Express. Also one ounce of beef juice a day, which is a wineglassful, is better than taking drugs, and if you feel muscular pains around your lungs take cod liver oil three times a day.

Errors About the White House.

To the Editor:

I noticed somewhere recently—I would not say positively that it was in your columns—an article on the White House which contained several mis-statements.

In the first place it was stated the White House was first occupied in 1809, and that its first occupant was President Madison. The fact is, its first occupant was President Adams, who took up his residence there in 1800.

The original mansion was begun in 1792. In 1814 it was burned by the British and rebuilt in 1818.

Another of the errors in the article referred to was the statement that ready-prepared paint is used on the White House to make it beautifully white.

I noticed this especially because I have used considerable paint myself, and wondered that "canned" paint should be used on such an important building, when all painters know that pure white lead and linseed oil make the best paint.

It so happened also that I knew white lead and linseed oil — not ready-mixed paint—were used on the White House, because I had just read a booklet published by a firm of ready-mixed paint manufacturers, who also manufacture pure white lead. In that book the manufacturers admitted that for the White House nothing but "the best and purest of paint could be used," and said that their pure white lead had been selected.

Above all people those who attempt to write on historical subjects should give us facts, even if it is only a date or a statement about wood, or brick, or paint, or other building material. Yours for truth,

L.

The Perfect Lover.

Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, the famous woman's rights leader, said of an untactful motion at a woman's club:

"This motion, in its delicacy, reminds me of a Ripon man.

"The man got married, and after he had been married several years his wife said to him one night:

"'You do not speak as affectionately to me as you used to, Hal. I fear you have ceased to love me.'

"'Ceased to love you!' growled the man. 'There you go again. Ceased to love you! Why, I love you more than life itself. Now shut up and let me read the paper.'"—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Our South American Trade.

Consul Albert W. Swaim of Southampton, furnishes a summary of a British trade report on the exports of Europe and the United States to South America. It shows a percentage increase in the 1900-1904 period over 1885-1889 of 4.6 percent for Great Britain and 46.3 percent for the United States. Complete details of this trade were given in Special Agent Hutchinson's reports.

Eruption Broke Out in Spots All Over Body—Cured at Expense of Only $1.25—Thanks Cuticura Remedies.

"The Cuticura Remedies cured me of my skin disease, and I am very thankful to you. My trouble was eruption of the skin, which broke out in spots all over my body, and caused a continual itching, which nearly drove me wild at times. I got medicine of a doctor, but it did not cure me, and when I saw in a paper your ad., I sent to you for the Cuticura book and I studied my case in it. I then went to the drug store and bought one cake of Cuticura Soap, one box of Cuticura Ointment and one vial of Cuticura Pills. From the first application I received relief. I used the first set and two extra cakes of Cuticura Soap, and was completely cured. I had suffered for two years, and I again thank Cuticura for my cure. Claude N. Johnson, Maple Grove Farm, R. F. Poor Honey Crop in Texas.

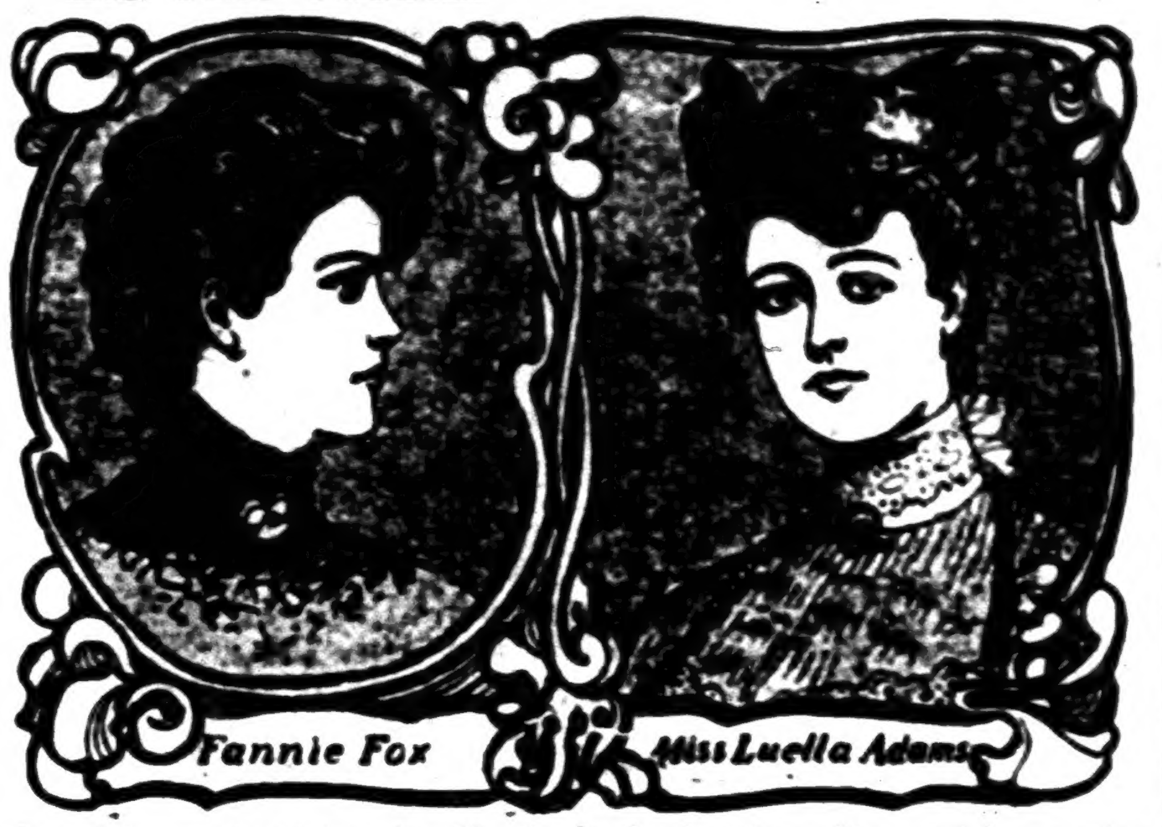
The honey crop in Uvalde county is almost a complete failure this spring, and some apiarists who have hitherto shipped 400 or 500 cases will hardly get more than 20 or 25 cases at best. The long siege of rainy weather just when the catclaw and guajilla were in bloom caused the failure. However, there will be considerable honey made from the mesquite blossoms, but this is of inferior quality. There can be no complaint on other crops. The corn crop will be immense, and people are now enjoying an abundance of roasting ears, squash, beans, potatoes, beets and other truck. A big hay crop has been harvested. Cotton looks exceedingly well. Many hundred fat cattle have been shipped, as well as fat goats, to market.—Austin (Tex.) Tribune.

Tumors Conquered Without Operations

Unqualified Success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in Cases of Mrs. Fox and Miss Adams.



One of the greatest triumphs of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the conquering of woman's dread enemy, Tumor.

So-called "wandering pains" may come from its early stages, or the presence of danger may be made manifest by excessive monthly periods accompanied by unusual pain extending from the abdomen through the groin and thighs.

If you have mysterious pains, if there are indications of inflammation, ulceration or displacement, don't wait for time to confirm your fears and go through the horrors of a hospital operation; secure Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once and begin its use and write Mrs. Pinkham of Lynn, Mass., for advice.

Read these strong letters from grateful women who have been cured:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:— (First Letter.)

"In looking over your book I see that your medicine cures Tumors. I have been to a doctor and he tells me I have a tumor. I will be more than grateful if you can help me, as I do so dread an operation."—Fannie D. Fox, Bradford, Pa.

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:— (Second Letter.)

"I take the liberty to congratulate you on the success I have had with your wonderful medicine.

"Eighteen months ago my periods stopped. Shortly after I felt so badly I submitted to a thorough examination by a physician, and was told that I had a tumor and would have to undergo an operation.

"I soon after read one of your advertisements and decided to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. After taking five bottles as directed, the tumor is entirely gone. I have again been examined by the physician and he says I have no signs of a tumor now. It has also brought my periods around once more; and I am entirely well. I shall never be without a bottle of Lydia Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the house."—Fannie D. Fox, Bradford, Pa.

Another Case of Tumor Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"About three years ago I had intense pain in my stomach, with cramps and raging headaches. The doctor prescribed for me, but finding that I did not get any better he examined me and, to my surprise, declared I had a tumor.

"I felt sure that it meant my death warrant, and was very disheartened. I spent hundreds of dollars in doctoring, but the tumor kept growing, till the doctor said that nothing but an operation would save me. Fortunately I corresponded with my aunt in one of the New England States, who advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before submitting to an operation, and I at once started taking a regular treatment, finding to my great relief that my general health began to improve, and after three months I noticed that the tumor had reduced in size. I kept on taking the Compound, and in ten months it had entirely disappeared without an operation, and using no medicine but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and words fail to express how grateful I am for the good it has done me."—Miss Luella Adams, Colonnade Hotel, Seattle, Wash.

Such unquestionable testimony proves the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and should give confidence and hope to every sick woman.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all ailing women to write to her at Lynn, Mass., for advice.

Mr. R. H. Walker, Secretary Texas State Pharmaceutical Association, Gonzales, Texas.

Dear Sir: Herewith I beg to hand you certificate of analysis of the Oxidine you submitted a few days since.

I trust this will be duly received and found entirely satisfactory. I have kept you waiting for a little while, but I appreciate the responsibility which you have seen fit to place upon me; for that reason I have taken my time to be certain and accurate about my results.

If I can serve you in the future please advise me. Thanking you, I beg to remain,

Yours very truly,

Pen Sketch of Darwin.

The recent visit of Sir George Darwin to this city recalls Haeckel's description of the English scientist's distinguished father, given after his first meeting with him:

"Darwin had a tall and venerable appearance with the broad shoulders of an Atlas that bore a world of thought. The tender and friendly eyes were overshadowded by the great roof of the prominent brows. The gentle mouth was framed in a long, silvery white beard. The noble expression of the whole face, the easy and soft voice, the slow and careful pronunciation, the natural and simple tenor of his conversation, took my heart by storm in the first hour that we talked. I seemed to have before me a venerable sage of ancient Greece, a Socrates or an Aristotle.'"

Darwin seemed equally pleased with his fiery pupil.

AN UNUSUAL OPPORTUNITY.

Florence Drug Co. Will Pay Back Your Money if Pepsikola Fails to Cure Your Indigestion.

"Never in the history of this store," remarked one of the above druggists to an interested customer, "has there been so great a demand for a new remedy as there is just now for Pepsikola Tablets. Clanton people are coming in every day inquiring if it really is true that we sell Pepsikola with the understanding that it will cure dyspepsia or pay back the money. "Not one person in fifty has asked for their money, and it may surprise you to know that at least a dozen within the last ten days have been in to tell us how much they have been relieved and how glad they are to know at last there is a remedy that really will cure indigestion and dyspepsia." Pepsikola braces up and tones every nerve and fibre, helps digest the food, puts new life into the digestion, improves the appetite, cures coated tongue, dizzy spells and sour stomach.

Try it for ten days, and if you don't see a big improvement step in and tell Florence Drug co., and they will hand back your quarter cheerfully and without argument.

Sour Stomach

No appetite, loss of strength, nervousness, headache, constipation, bad breath, general debility, sour risings, and catarrh of the stomach are all due to indigestion. Kodol cures indigestion. This new discovery represents the natural juices of digestion as they exist in a healthy stomach, combined with the greatest known tonic and reconstructive properties. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure does not only cure indigestion and dyspepsia, but this famous remedy cures all stomach troubles by cleansing, purifying, sweetening and strengthening the mucous membranes lining the stomach.

Mr. S. S. Ball, of Ravenswood, W. Va., says: "I was troubled with sour stomach for twenty years. Kodol cured me and we are now using it in milk for baby."

The following communication is published by request; it was sent to the Union, but publication declined unless it was paid for.

Thorsby, Ala., Aug 14, 1906
To the Editor of "The Union,"
Clanton, Ala.

Dear Sir:—

Prompted by an article in the last number of your paper, I kindly ask you to publish the following:

The article referred to is that signed "The Ghost" and giving a kind of reference of among other things to the difficulty between Mr. J. F. Peterson and Prof. Chas. Felietz

My reason for writing this little article is a three fold one: First: My name was mentioned in the article referred to as if I had taken quite a prominent part in the affair, which, however, was not the case, where I have to decline the honor of prominency, for truth's sake, simply. Secondly: I feel it my duty towards the public, towards the truth and towards myself to write. Thirdly: Many persons have asked me for the truth in the case and to publish it, wherefore I think it better to state it publickly and in that manner inform all who may be interested.

Furthermore, I want it strictly understood that I will have nothing to say or do with or about the other things referred to by "The Ghost" in said article(things which should have happenened year before I came here, as I eufer from the article itself) partly because I cannot Judge of those from personal knowledge and partly because I have no desire to dig up dead carcasses. Also I want it clearly understood that I take no side and defend none, leaving that to those concerned.

To my oponion "The Ghost" has been rather too ghostly in his apprehensions and presentations of the facts involved, i. e., he is prejudiced in his presentation, not giving due justice to both sides in the controversy.

It is true, that Prof. Felietz is about sixty five years of age. it is true, that he, the evening in question was reading his Bible or at least had that book open before him it is true, that Mr. Peterson, after being invited, entered his room, it is true, that some loud talking occured, but it is not proven to be true, that Mr Peterson assaulted Prof. Felietz in his room and it is absolutely false and untrue, that Rev. Hartelius intered his room or came in there "to seperate" the combatants, which as far as I understand is the only construction and meaning that can be put on Mr Ghost's wording of the matter, wherefore I once more have to decline the honor of being a hero in "a would be murder case"

As a simple matter of fact, and as I told on the witness stand, I did not consider the cry of "help! help! murder! murder!" serious enough even to justify me to leave my chair and walk over to the room of the Professor "to seperate them."

Another gentleman was lying not twentyfeet away from "the scene of action" on the porch nearly directly under the window and was not even aroused from his sleep by the cries for help, and that although the windows and probably also the doors were open just to said porch. It might be, however, that ears more acute in hearing and more open to scandals than said gentleman's were, have heard even more than what happened at quite a distance. If however, Mr. Peterson did assault Prof. Felietz in his room, as "The Ghost" without reserve tells us, why does he not also state as a fact, that Prof. Felietz first insulted and assaulted Mr Peterson with impudent talk and by throwing his old shoe at his face?

As a general principal governing all cases, not only this one in question I like to ask: Would not common justice require of a person, who presents a case to the pubic for their judgement, that he does it in a fair and unbiased way and not influenced by his own feelings, instead of trying to mislead public sentiment for reasons best known by himself.

If "The Ghost" always presents things the same way as now, do not wonder if people's opinion of "The Ghost" and his facts will be rather unsettled, and that even when he knows whereof he speaks, because if he does know and still presents facts as has been done in this case, he certainly cannot command our trust.

I am very sorry to have been mixed up in this matter by circumstances, of which I was not master, but since I was implicated therein, I feel it, as I said before, my duty to correct misleading presentations, and wish to call the public's attention as well as that of "The Ghost" to the fact, that it is not only what we say or do, but also how we say and do things that should be presented if we love the truth and its victory. Respectfully,

H. F. H. HARTELIUS

MAKE MONEY.

Here is an interesting study: Make out a list of all the people you know, and estimate the amount of money each one earns in a year. Total it up. The amount will be surprisingly large. Now, of all those people, only the few who SAVE SOMETHING really MAKE anything at all. Simply earning money isn't making it; what slips through the earner's fingers is finally "made" by somebody else. Don't forget to count yourself in on the list, and if you are not "making" money, begin now to save with us. One dollar will open your bank account.

COTTON IS KING.

"Cotton is king in the export record of the United States for the fiscal year just ended."

This is the introductory sentence of a statement just issued by the department of commerce and labor.

Continuing, the statement says: "The total value of raw cotton exported for the first time crossed the $400,000,000 line, and exceeded by far the value of any other article of merchandise sent out of the country. The exports of breadstuffs of all kinds aggregated but $186,000,000, those of provisions but $211,000,000, ann those of iron and those of iron and steel manufactures but $101,000,000.

"The value of cotton exported has during the last five years increased very rapidly. It was not until 1901 that it crossed the $300,000,000 line, and in a short five years period it has grown to more than $400,000,000, or an increase of 33 per cent.

Shiloh.

Dear Editor—Please grant me a small space in your valuable paper to cheer up old Shiloh, as it seems that no one else won't. Health of this community is very good.

Most of the people are now beginning to gather their crops; corn is very good, but cotton is nothing extra, there is plenty of weed, but not much cotton.

Our Sabbath school is not progressing as well as we would like for it to, it seems that most of the people think that they have something more interesting to do than to go to Sabbath school, though I think a Sabbath school is the beauty of a community where it is carried out right. I sure do like to go to Sabbath school. Now, we that have been going so regular, let us keep going and take good lessons with us and recite them when we get there; some of our scholars fail to come to the class sometime, though I hope they will take more interest in the future than they have ever taken in the the past. If we all would keep right and keep moving, work for each other's good and strive to get higher, I am sure we would have a much better school than we have. So let us do that. Our singing at the school house Sunday evening was all O. K We were glad to have a crowd of good singers from Enterprise with us. Meeting has changed on Saturday from 3 p m. to 11 a.m. Best wishes to the Banner and its many readers.

Pharmacists to Meet.

Indianapolis.—The fifty-fifth annual convention of the American Pharmaceutical Association began Tuesday and will continue all week. The headquarters were established at the Claypool hotel, where the sessions will be held. Four hundred delegates representing all the states are expected. Many of them have arrived.

It is stated that the pure food and pure drug laws will cause an unusual amount of work for the convention. Plans for securing uniform pharmaceutical laws in the several states will be discussed, as well as the new pharmacopea with its formulas, standards for drugs, recipes and strength compounds.

Buried Friend Under Sidewalk.

Chicago.—Robert Gordon, 16 years old, confessed that he struck Joseph Reed, 8 years old, with a brick, stunning him, and then buried him alive beneath a sidewalk in front of his father's home, 2877 Archer avenue. The boy's body was found where Gordon said he had buried it and Gordon was arrested. The absence of the Reed boy was noticed and search was begun for him. Gordon led the elder Reed through the neighborhood for several hours, and about 10 o'clock at night took him to where the body was buried, and assisted in digging it up. When taken to a police station Gordon confessed that he enticed the boy to the basement of the Reed home and mistreated him. When he attempted to escape he struck him on the head with the brick. He then buried him alive under the sidewalk.

Another Line to the Gulf.

Atlanta.—The Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic Railroad Company, which is just now pushing work on its line from Brunswick, Ga., to Birmingham, Ala., it was learned on good authority, will in the near future extend its line on from the Alabama metropolis to New Orleans.

While the officials of the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic refused to discuss the New Orleans extension, it was learned that a corps of surveyors is already in the field looking into this project, and a report will be made to the board of directors upon the return to the city of President Henry M. Atkinson, who is now in the east. This will be within a month, or perhaps less time.

It has been submitted for some time that the Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic would take up this matter of a New Orleans extension, but it did not become definitely known until later. It is stated that the proposed line which will be backed by plenty of eastern capital, and which is encouraged by the early construction of the Panama canal, will not parallel the Louisville and Nashville or any other road, but will form an entirely new trunk line through from Brunswick and from Atlanta to the Crescent City.

Receipts and Expenditures.

Washington, D. C.—The monthly statement of the government receipts and expenditures shows that for the month of August, 1906, the total receipts were $..66,007,596 and the expenditures $47,848,449, leaving a surplus for the month of $8,155,147. For the month of August, 1905, there was a deficit of $4,660,061. The receipts for August, 1906, were: Customs, $29,012,059, increase over August, 1905, nearly $3,000,000; internal revenue, $21,853,180, increase $2,300,000; miscellaneous, $5,142,355, increase $3,990,000. The expenditures for the month show a decrease, as compared with August, 1905, of $4,302,044. The principal item in the decrease was $2,758,600 in the expenditures on account of the navy.

Jesuits Meet.

Rome.—The congregation of Jesuits assembled here to elect a general of the society in succession to the late Father Louis Martin. Vicar Freddi delivered an eulogy of Father Martin. The deceased general's will was read and also the minutes of the meetings held April 19, of the five assistants of Father Martin and other Jesuit authorities in Rome, the day after the general's death, when, according to Father Martin's desire, Father Freddi assumed the vicarship.

The recommendations left by Father Martin concerning the direction and plans of the society were read at this meeting and Father Freddi presented the report of his work as vicar.

For a Headache.

One of the quickest ways known of dispelling a headache is to give some of the muscles—those of the legs, for instance—a little hard, sharp work to do. The reason is obvious. Muscular exertion flushes the parts engaged in it, and so depletes the brain. When your head aches take a stiff walk, or a short bicycle ride.

Claim Credit for Killing.

Moscow.—The social revolutionists have issued a proclamation, in which they claim credit for the murder of General Min, but denied responsibility of the attempt on the life of Premier Stolypin.

ALABAMA STATE EVENTS.

Items of Interest Gathered as They Transpire Over the Entire State.

PLURALITIES INDEFINITE.

Tyson Still in the Lead—Apparently Will Be Nominated Over Justice Weakley.

The returns of the Democratic primary are still lacking in definiteness as to majorities and pluralities.

The ticket known to be nominated is as follows:

For Governor—B. B. Comer, of Jefferson.

For Lieutenant-Governor—Henry L. Gray, of Jefferson.

For Secretary of State—Frank N. Julian, of Colbert.

For Auditor—W. W. Brandon, of Tuscaloosa.

For United States Senators—John T. Morgan, of Dallas, and Edmund W. Pettus, of Dallas.

For Alternate United States Senators—John H. Bankhead, of Fayette, and Joseph F. Johnston, of Jefferson.

For Superintendent of Education—Harry C. Gunnels.

For Attorney-General, Alex Garber had no opposition.

For Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, John R. Tyson, of Montgomery, apparently will have a majority in the convention over Samual D. Weakley, of Jefferson, the present incumbent.

For Associate Justice of the Supreme Court, Mr. Dowdell seems to have received sufficient votes to assure his renomination, while T. C. McClellan, of is in the lead for the second place.

Mr. Wilkinson leads in the race for Commissioner of Agriculture.

J. G. Harris and Charley Henderson are, perhaps, nominated for Associate Railroad Commissioners.

Met Death in Cell.

Birmingham.—J. L. Mitchell, a well known contractor in the employ of the Sloss-Sheffield Steel and Iron Company at the Bessie mines, in the western part of Jefferson county, was found dead in the city prison and an investigation revealed the fact that his neck was broken. It is believed that he tumbled off the bunk in his cell to the hard floor and that his neck was broken in the fall.

The remains were turned over to the coroner, who made an investigation into the case. The man's wife was telegraphed to and came to Birmingham and made arrangements to ship the body out into the county for interment.

It seems that Mitchell came into the city Friday with his four little children, the eldest being fourteen years of age. It is stated that he began drinking Saturday. He sent his children back to Bessie mines and he remained in the city. It is further alleged that he continued drinking and was arrested in one of the public parks on a charge of intoxication. He was locked in a cell and the next morning was found dead.

The dead man was about 45 years of age and was highly respected by the company in whose employ he was. A rumor prevailed that he had been beaten to death by an officer, but there are no bruises about the man's head. The physician summoned announced that death was caused by a broken neck.

Solicitor Sawtelle Resigns.

Florence, Ala.—Solicitor W. H. Sawtelle, of the Eleventh judicial circuit, has tendered his resignation to Judge Nathan, and Hon. R. T. Simpson, Jr., of Florence, is a candidate for the position. Mr. Simpson is the son of Justice R. T. Simpson, of the supreme court of Alabama, and is a lawyer of recognized ability.

Labor Day Barbecue.

Decatur, Ala.—Labor Day was observed here by a grand barbecue given by the Elks and a dance at night at the pavilion of the North Alabama Traction Company, in South Decatur. Many of the manufacturing plants and shops were closed in honor of the day.

To Nullify Certificate.

Gadsden.—The Jefferson County Savings Bank, of Birmingham, has filed a bill in the chancery court here against the First National Bank, of Attalla, L. M. Dyke, president, and Thomas M. Horton, receiver of the institution. The suit was instituted to nullify a certificate of deposit to the of L. M. Dyke to the amount of $5,000. $5,000, the money being on deposit in the Birmingham bank. The $5,000 was a loan negotiated by L. M. Dyke, and was secured by stock of the National Bank of Attalla. Since the loan was made the bank has been closed by a national bank examiner.

Rosewater Dead.

Omaha, Neb.—Edward Rosewater, proprietor and editor of the Omaha Bee and prominently identified with the political, financial and business affairs of Omaha and the state of Nebraska for forty years, was found dead in district court room No. 6 on the third floor of the Bee building. Mr. Rosewater had evidently sat down on a bench in the court room and fell asleep and died of heart failure.

Big Increase in Tax Assessments.

Montgomery, Ala.—Indications so far are that the increase in the tax values of the state for the year 1906 over 1905 will go beyond $20,000,000. Reports to the state auditor show this to be so in the counties that have finished their abstracts. Seventeen counties reporting up to this time show an increase over last year of $10,868,470, an average increase for each county of more than $625,000. The following are the counties:

Autauga, $3,431,550; increase, $12,000.

Butler, $4,308,600; increase, $598,100

Calhoun, $10,654,500; increase, $1,323,327.

Cherokee, $3,067,900; increase, $234,900.

Choctaw, $2,577,500; increase, $604,700.

Dallas, $10,614,300; increase, $268,300.

Escambia, $4,691,250; increase, $354,750.

Fayette, $2,210,400; increase, $729,200.

Henry, $2,099,000; increase, $315,750.

Jefferson, $57,870,000; increase, $4,481,100.

Lawrence, $2,450,600; increase, $208,100.

Lee, $5,567,500; increase, $597,500.

Macon, $3,690,000; increase, $2,298,200.

Madison, $8,258,800; increase $53,800.

Perry, $4,050,500; increase, $421,603.

Pickens, $2,204,500; increase, $156,500.

Talladega, $8,236,800; increase, $636,000.

Total increase, $10,868,470.

First Bale.

Gadsden, Ala.—Irwin Hale, of Phillips beat, brought to Gadsden the first bale of cotton early on Thursday morning gathered from this season's crop. It is not only the first in Gadsden, but the first in North Alabama and the first in the congressional district.

Goes to Seagirt.

Anniston, Ala.—Maj. D. Houston Smith, of the Oxford Rifles, left for Seagirt, N. J., where he will compete with the Alabama team of sharpshooters and expert marksmen in the annual contests here there for the championship of the country.

Three Killed by Lightning.

Troy, Ala.—Newt Graves, a prominent resident of Brundidge, this county, and his two grown sons, John and Bascom Graves, were instantly killed by lightning. The three had sought refuge from a storm in a house they were roofing, and while under shelter lightning struck the house. The other men were seriously, but not fatally, injured by the same stroke.

Another Well Is Begun.

Huntsville, Ala.—The New York-Alabama Oil Company has begun drilling another well in West Huntsville, a quarter of a mile from the gas well that was brought in three weeks ago. The new well is in a depression, and experts believe either an abundance of natural gas or oil in paying quantities will be found.

Fire at Tavern Hotel.

Decatur, Ala.—The Tavern Hotel, in New Decatur, caught fire from the kitchen stove. The fire company's prompt response saved the building. The damage will be slight.

Commits Suicide With Carbolic Acid.

Birmingham, Ala.—Mrs. Charles Hoick, 50 years old, committed suicide at her home at Boyles Friday night by taking carbolic acid. She swallowed the poison about 8 o'clock, then told her husband what she had done and threw the empty bottle out of the door. She died two hours later, begging the doctor who had been called in to do nothing for her, as she did not want to live. Her despondency is said to have been caused by poor health.

Wreck in Yards.

Union Springs, Ala.—As the passenger train on the Central of Georgia came into the yards here it had a head-end collision with a freight train that was going out. The wreck was caused by an open switch. The engineers and firemen of both trains jumped and thus escaped injury. Major Wright was the only passenger injured, but all were considerably shaken up.

No Session Monday.

Chicago, Ill.—There was no session of the board of trade Monday, it being Labor Day.

Injured by Explosion.

Midland, Mich.—Elmer Gillman was killed and several other workmen were injured by an explosion which wrecked the plant of the Midland Chemical Company, chloroform manufacturers. The explosion released quantities of chloroform, the fumes of which filled the air and made the rescue of the injured workmen a perilous feat, though they were sixty-five feet from the plant.

CUBAN WAR

Neither Side Can Whip the Other. Insurrection Growing Constantly.

MAY EVEN TAKE HAVANA.

Ardent Hope Is Expressed That Uncle Sam Will Exercise Prerogatives of Platt Amendment.

Havana.—"Neither side can whip the other," is the concise statement now heard everywhere in Havana, and it also may be fairly construed to be the growing conviction of thoughtful persons throughout the island.

In Havana at least this conviction has led among all unprejudiced persons to expressions of an ardent hope that the prerogative of the Platt amendment will soon be utilized by the United States for the purpose of effectually putting an end to a condition that everybody believes is otherwise bound to grow more and more intolerable.

Nobody appears to believe that the insurgents will take Havana, although this is not regarded as impossible, especially when it is considered that cooperation in such a movement assuredly would come from within. Everybody concedes that the government troops can continue their record of victories in almost all open fights with insurgents, but how the government with the forces now at its command and in view of the small number of enlistments can ever prevail against its enemies, who fight in the same old method of guerrila warefare, is a conundrum which nobody pretends to solve.

That the insurrection is growing constantly is undeniably evidenced every day, and the decree of pardon recently extended by the government has brought no appreciable change in the situation. One of the few Americans who joined the insurgent ranks came to Havana. He has been a farmer in Cuba for several years past, and presumably is a reliable source of information. He said that the 15,000 insurgents now south of Artemisa scattered parties shortly will concentrate with others from the vicinitty of Guanajay and holding the entire width of eastern Pinar del Rio province. They will thus control the situation far better than did the Spanish troops in the days of the famous trocha, and at precisely the same points.

The insurgents already have taken Cabanas and Bahaia Honda, on the north coast of Pinar del Rio province, and according to conservative statements have easily 75 per cent of the people of this district with them.

Will Extend Limits. Colonel King Figures.

New York.—In his annual report for the season of 1905 Col. William V. King, superintendent of the New York Cotton Exchange, figures the crop at 11,233,847 bales, as compared with 13,654,029 in 1904-5, divided as follows:

	1905-06.	1904-05.
Receipts at ports.	8,005,295	10,295,445
Overland to northern mills and Canada	1,003,190	1,132,000
Southern mill takings (less taken from p'ts.	2,225,572	2,225,978
Making a total of	11,233,847	13,654,027

The final outturn of this season's crop is 11,233,847 bales.

Wiped Out by Flood.

Guanajuto, Mex.—Reliable reports reaching here are to the effect that the village of Manuel Doblado, in this state, has almost been wiped out by the floods resulting from the torrential rains. More than twenty houses have collapsed, but it is said that the loss of life has been comparatively small.

Only one man is reported killed, struck by falling building material. A considerable loss to stock is reported.

Nashville, Tenn.—By an act of the last legislature Nashville was given the right to annex certain suburbs. This act went into effect September 1, and Nashville now has an estimated population of 160,000. Four new wards are added to the city.

Stepped in Front of Train.

Quitman, Ga.—James Gray, colored, was struck by the east-bound passenger train on the Atlantic Coast Line and thrown a considerable distance, receiving serious but not fatal injuries. A freight was in the yards and Gray stepped off one track onto the main line in front of the passenger.

Mexican Statesman Dead.

Mexico City.—Genaro Raigosa, a distinguished lawyer and statesman, is dead at the age of 59 years. He was often employed by the government in important treaty negotiations, and in 1890 went to London, where he negotiated a loan of six million pounds sterling. He was chosen president of the second Pan-American congress

BLOODY BATTLE

State Constabulary Have Fight With Foreign Desperadoes.

BLACK HAND IS IMPLICATED.

Murderers Are Surrounded in a House Near Punxsutawney, Pa. Town Much Excited.

Punxsutawney, Pa.—In a bloody battle between foreigners and the twenty-one members of Troop D, state constabulary, in which fully 500 shots were fired, two troopers were killed and one fatally wounded, while three other persons received bullet wounds.

The trouble began late in the evening, when Salvatore Waltzoch, said to be one of the most desperate members of the Black Hand, started a fight with a countryman. When Sergeant Logan placed Waltzoch under arrest the latter invited him into the boarding house to prove his good character. Logan had scarcely passed the door when one of three Italians in the house made a lunge at him with a stiletto. Logan retreated, but before got fifteen feet from the building an Italian opened fire on him. Logan returned the fire and the two men emptied their weapons at each other. Logan got one buckshot wound in the foot and the desperado was seen to fall back into the house perhaps fatally wounded. Logan then telephoned to the barracks at this place and a detachment of five privates was detailed to go to his assistance.

Private John Henry immediately started for the house, but was shot down. Chambers and Mullenfi in attempting the rescue of their companion, were both shot before they reached him. A telephone call was then sent for the entire force, and fifteen additional troopers were hurried to the scene. When the second detachment arrived, and while twelve of the constabulary kept firing into the windows and front doors, six policemen made a rush for the side door, which they battered in. Three of the officers, Zehringer, Gross and Cummins, dashed up the stairs, but were confronted by three of the Italians, who opened fire. Zehringer fell at the first volley, but the two other men escaped.

Fifteen troopers and several policemen, together with many citizens, all heavily armed, are on guard. Sixteen Italians board in the besieged house, but it is not known how many are inside or the number implicated in the shooting.

The position of the watchers is a perilous one, as there are treacherous members of the Black Hand in and about Florence.

The policemen have riddled with bullets the house where the desperadoes are lodged, but it is not known with what result.

Their fire has been returned, but without any regard for aiming the guns, as anything seen moving outside the building is at once the target of a volley of shots from the watchers.

Comptroller's Monthly Statement.

Washington, D. C.—The monthly statement of the comptroller of the currency shows that at the close of business August 31, 1906, the total circulation of national bank notes was $569,852,303, an increase for the year of $57,631,936 and an increase for the month of $8,371,259. The amount of circulation based on United States bonds was $524,439,160, an increase for the year of $45,652,005 and an increase for the month of $7,865,761. The amount of circulation secured by lawful money was $45,413,143, an increase for the year of $11,978,941 and an increase for the month of $505,495. The amount of bonds on deposit to secure circulating notes was $526,944,030, and to secure public deposits $109,428,625.

Reyes Is Implicated.

Monterey, Mexico.—An article was recently published in an American periodical to which the Mexican as well as many of the foreign residents of this country have taken exception, alleging that gross misstatements and misrepresentations have been made. The article in purport charges that no Mexican who visits the United States returns without being thoroughly imbued with the idea that the American government is desirous of invading Mexico and that the internal feeling in Mexico is such that a revolution is likely to result in the near future, coupling the name of General Reyes therewith.

The article has inspired Governor Reyes, of the state of Neuvo Leon, to issue an emphatic denial.

Honolulu.—Efforts to pull the transport Sheridan off the rocks have been abandoned and it is now believed the vessel will be a total loss. It is reported that there is now water in the vessel above the fire rooms. The transport appears to be pierced amidships by the rock on which she hangs. Inter-island steamers are now removing the cargo from the Sheridan's hold. It is planned to anchor the Sheridan and cable for further assistance.

Sea Island Cotton

Valdosta, Ga.—Before their annual session here Island Cotton Growers of Florida adopted a resolution for a revenue raising the Egyptian cotton. A committee ing J. O. Varnadoe, of T. J. "Puerto" has three famous saloons which have been known to sailors of nations for over fifty years. They are called the "Foretop," "Maintop," and "Mizzentop," respectively, and are still frequented by the crews of sailing ships in the harbor. Valparaiso is one of the few remaining ports where sailing ships can be seen in any numbers. The majority of them are engaged in the nitrate carrying trade.

The town is situated in what seismologists term the "earthquake belt," and has always been subject to shakes more or less severe. Several shocks have been felt in Chile this year, and have caused considerable alarm to the inhabitants. At one town, Rancagua, there were thirty distinct shocks on the night of March 27, and a violent shock was felt at Arica, one of the seaport towns, on May 5. Prolonged and severe shocks were experienced at Valdivia April 24.

There is about $60,000,000 of foreign capital, mostly German and British, invested in various industries in Chile. A few years ago the capital was principally British, but now the Germans predominate. The Valparaiso electric street railway system was constructed by a German company, but it is now owned by a local concern.

About 20,000 persons are employed in Chile by British companies in the extraction and preparation of nitrate of soda for export. The late Colonel North, who was called the "Nitrate King" in England, was one of the first to open up the nitrate trade in Chile, and made several million dollars by it.

The Chilean Government owns and operates the railroads, which are being extended in all directions. The most important line in course of construction is the Trans-Andean Railroad, which will, when completed, enable persons to travel from Valparaiso passengers to travel from Valparaiso to Buenos Ayres in forty-eight hours and bring Chile two weeks nearer to Europe. It is expected that the line will be opened toward the end of 1908. Another railway is being built from the Peruvian frontier to the Straits of Magellan, with branch lines to coast ports, mining districts, and agricultural centres.

Chile has been visited by severe earthquakes about every sixty years. In the last severe earthquake, in 1835, the Isle of Santa Maria was uplifted in three different localities, eight, nine and ten feet, but all this land subsided a few weeks afterward. At the same time two great waves rolled over the town of Talcahuano.

Valparaiso's chief manufactures are cotton goods, machinery and iron goods. Much mineral water is bottled there, while the sugar refineries and the brewing and distilling interests are large. From the city are exported nitrate, in which millions are invested, grain, wool, leather, guano, saltpetre and copper, although this mineral has not been developed to its fullest extent.

Valparaiso suffered a disastrous earthquake in 1855, it was bombarded by the Spanish in 1866 and suffered from a terrific tidal wave on June 30, 1899, which wrecked the railroad and did a great deal of damage in other directions.

Chile threw off the yoke of Spain in the early part of the nineteenth century. It consists of twenty-four provinces and territories and contains 290,829 square miles.

President Roosevelt Converted to the New-Style Spelling

List of 300 Words That Hereafter in All Messages and Documents From the White House Will Be Printed According to the Recommendation of the Matthews Committee.

President Roosevelt announced his conversion to the spelling reform movement. He has issued orders to Public Printer Stillings that all messages from the President and all other documents coming from the White House shall be printed in accordance with the recommendations of the spelling reform committee headed by Professor Brander Matthews, of Columbia, and backed by Andrew Carnegie.

Spelling reform had its greatest impetus when Andrew Carnegie made an offer to finance it. For many years professors and others have been laboring to have the public accept reforms in the spelling of certain words. The public, while admitting that the existing spelling is a philological monstrosity, refused to take kindly to the suggested changes.

When Andrew Carnegie announced himself as a convert to the reform the matter was discussed more than at any time within the past 100 years. Mark Twain promised to take it up after Mr. Carnegie had announced his conversion and had agreed to finance the organization of reformers calling themselves the Simplified Spelling Board, of which Brander Matthews is the president of the Executive Board.

This board announced at the beginning that it did not propose any radical or revolutionary scheme of reform, but simply wanted to make easy the spelling of certain words. It selected 300 words which it asked the public to accept.

Following is the list of 300 words already given out by the Simplified Spelling Board in which changes are proposed:

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT on Monday in Long Island sonnd reviewed the most magnificent fleet ever assembled under the American flag. Forty-five of the most splendid vessels of the navy were passed in review amid the booming of cannon and the sheers of the spectators.

THE welcome home of William Jennings Bryan at New York upon his return from a trip around the world was a flattering tribute to his popularity, and would seem to assure his nomination for the presidency for the third time—a distinction no other man has achieved.

THERE is certainly room for improvement as regards election returns. With a primary held on Monday, the returns should be made to the county authorities by Wednesday at the latest, and should be consolidated by the State Board not later than Friday—four days after the election. In days of old there may have been a reason for delaying the returns; but in these piping times of peace there is no reason whatsoever. It will be Friday of this week before the official count of the primary is made, eleven days—just seven days too much.

CUBA is indulging in a revolution, and President Palma has announced the intention of the government to crush the insurrection. Possibly Uncle Sam will have to take a hand in the game.

How small the world is! Paul O. Stensland, the absconding president of the Chicago bank, has been arrested at Tangiers, Morrocco, doubtless thinging he was secure from arrest.

Now that the primary election is over, politicians and others interested in politics are settling down to a rest. The State officers are returning to the Capitol whence they went last week to their respective homes to vote, and affairs at the old State House are resuming their normal trend. Except for the nomination of a chief justice and two associate justices of the supreme court, the contests are over, and these nominations will be made in the State convention which meets on September 10.

The election of Comer was not in itself a surprise to most people, as even the warmest Cunningham supporters were willing to concede the chances favored the Avondale man. The size of the majority he rolled up was unexpected to them, and, for that matter, to the conservative Comerites themselves. The most surprising features of the whole contest has been the race of Chief Justice Weakley to succeed himself as Dean of the supreme court. Until a short time before the election it seemed that Tyson had everything his own way. Many predicted that the Birmingham man would be humiliated, but the result has shown anything but humiliation. Until the third day after the returns began to come in, neither candidate could lay positive claim to a majority of the convention delegates.

Another surprising feature of the contests was the strong raid made by Congressman Bankhead for Alternate Senator. After his defeat by Hobson several months ago for the nomination to succeed himself, in the House of Representatives, the unusual popularity of the vote in the present primary was unexpected. The truth of the matter is, however, that the veteran statesman has many admirers through out the State.

FROM Mr. GULLEDGE

Verbena, Sept. 3. 1906.

Mr. J. O. Middleton, Clanton, Ala.

Dear Sir:—Instead of setting forth in your letter of last week, published in the Banner and in the Union, your platform, as requested by me, you have adopted it seems, as your platform, personal abuse of me.

In the outset of the campaign, I assured you and the public at large, that the campaign would be conducted upon a high plane, without abuse of my opponent, and which I have lived strictly up to, I leave it to the public whether you have maintained a like course.

I do not believe the people will stand for any such method of campaign as you have adopted.

I propose to meet you on the stump and present this issue squarely and fairly, face to face with my people. Respectfully.

F. A. GULLEDGE.

Energy, Sept. 1

Editor Banner—I ask for the first time a small space in a newspaper. I notice Mr. Middleton is troubled about Mr. Gulledge's connection with the post office at Verbena, and the way he got it. The fact is he never asked for the appointment, except to sign the formal application sent him. I was a patron of the office before, during and since his service as postmaster, and a close neighbor of Mr. Gulledge, and know whereof I write. Mr. Gulledge often expressed regret over the young lady's losing the office. In fact, he allowed her to hold the office after he held his commission, and at time he gave the office up, if it had been left to a question of merit and endorsement, Mr. G. could have gotten a large majority of his patrons on his petition to retain him as the postmaster. I want to say further to Mr. Middleton and the Verbena Kid that Mr. Gulledge's closest political friends are those who have dealt with him ever since he went into business.

I want to say also that he has furnished more poor people homes at fair prices on long time than any man I know of. Don't guess Mr. Middleton or the Kid charges any thing for what they do.

Obituary

On Sunday evening September 2nd, the angel of death visited the home of Mr. C. N. Dennis near Bethel church, and wafted the loving spirit of his only daughter, Mrs. Lula Gray, into the realms of eternal glory. Mrs. Gray, wife of Mr. W. J. Gray, was quite young to depart this life, yet God surely had a purpose in calling her and He doeth all things well.

Her age was about 22 years, her spotless character and good examples were worthy to be copied by anyone. Her face always bore a good expression and a loving smile which seemed to scatter sunshine among her many associates. All who knew her seemed to love her.

She joined the Missionary Baptist church about five years previous to her death, and lived a consistent member of the same until death God in his goodness saw fit to afflict her several years ago, but she bore her afflictions with patience, always saying, that she was willing to be submissive to the will of God.

Several days before her death, she realized that she had to go, saying that she feared nothing and asking her husband to not weep that she was prepared.

On Monday evening September 3rd. the funeral services took place at Chestnut Creek church conducted by Rev. I. Bice, after which the remains were enterred there to await the great resurrection.

Dear friends, we know not many consoling words to speak to you who are grief stricken, but her submissive spirit, dying testimony and the lovely smile of her face in death gives us great evidence, and really makes us know that she has only crossed over deaths dark river to eternal rest.

She has gone to eternal glory
Where no tears bedim the eye,
But oh the thought that we shall meet her
In the land of bye and bye.

Before marriage every man has a theory about managing a wife; but after marriage it's a condition and not a theory that confronts him.

TO THE PATRONS OF CLANTON ACADEMY.

The time for the opening of school, Sept. 10, is almost here, and those who are interested should be thinking about the importance of being ready for the beginning, and should make their arrangements accordingly.

We desire earnestly that our school be as nearly as possible a complete success, and all that we as teachers can do to accomplish this end will be done. But our efforts alone are not sufficient. A hearty co-operation on the part of each patron is necessary, and we hope to be thus aided in the important work in which we are about to engage.

All the children that expect to attend school this session should enter the first day, as that is the time to classify them, and they can best be assisted then. They should also attend as regularly as they can, that the chain of their work may be stronger having in it as few breaks as possible. In order that this may be done, parents and other members of the family may have to make some sacrifices; but, if need be, let them come, for "without a sacrifice there is no reward." Let whatever happen that will but give the dear children all that you can of this golden opportunity that is now passing and will soon be gone.

Our object is to keep the pupils working within the limits of their capacity, and at the same time to give them all they are able to do thoroughly. "Not how much, but how well," is our motto, and we expect to keep it before the entire school as a guide.

Knowledge alone is not sufficient, a fact of which we all ought to be fully aware. We hope to excite in our pupils a desire for knowledge, and also a self-activity to strive to obtain it. Then it is ours to give this self-activity proper guidance, that the children may obtain that knowledge which they are seeking, also a power, without which no one is fully prepared to meet the realities of life. Education is power, and in our efforts to educate we shall endeavor to develop in our pupils those powers which will make them wiser and happier and better, and abler to serve themselves, their country and their God.

What nobler work than this to do; and how willing it does seem that our patrons ought to be to speak a word of cheer and to lend a helping hand.

All pupils are requested to be present by eight o'clock on the day of the opening and also bring with them the books they used last session.

L. J. THOMPSON,
Principal.

An Ounce of Prevention

is worth a pound of cure. There are many poor sufferers, Consumptives who are hopeless of getting well who, if they had taken care of them selves, would now be well. A cough is the foundation of consumption. Ballard's Horehound Syrup will cure that cough. Mrs S—, Great Falls, Montana, writes: I have used Ballard's Horehound Syrup in my family for years—my children never suffer with coughs. Upchurch Drug co.

The Better Way

The tissues of the throat are inflamed and irritated; you cough, and there is more irritation—more coughing. You take a cough mixture and it eases the irritation—for a while. You take and it cures the cold. That's what is necessary. It soothes the throat because it reduces the irritation; cures the cold because it drives out the inflammation; builds up the weakened tissues because it nourishes them back to their natural strength. That's how Scott's Emulsion deals with a sore throat, a cough, a cold, or bronchitis.

Letter to J. R. Broadhead & Son.
Clanton, Ala.

Dear Sirs: How did you get your business? We'll tell you how we got ours. You sell shoes, we make paint; perhaps we can do a good turn to ourselves, you and we, by swapping experiences.

We began 152 years ago in a little shop a few minutes walk from where we are now; a great many things have happened, we don't remember them all. We made as good paint as we could and learned to make better. We are the oldest now; we don't know whether we had any teacher or not; it's so long ago; if we had, he's gone and forgotten. We should have been forgotten, if we hadn't made good paint and friends.

You buy your shoes; you have an advantage in that; if you make a mistake, you can stop it quick; if you make a hit, you can push it quick. We've had to go slow; it's hard to pick out one's own mistakes, and nothing but fun to correct the mistakes of others.

You know where to go for leather that keeps its shape, feels good, looks new and wears a long time. What a comfort it is to be comfortable from making one's customers comfortable!

We also have a unique advantage—unique, you know, means that nobody has anything like it. We make a strong paint that takes less gallons, saves half the cost of painting your house, and it's like that leather of yours for wear. It is all paint and the strongest of paint. Paint is usually adulterated and weak.

We're very old, but we make young paint! one gallon is better than two, if it has the stuff in it.

NOTICE

To the Churches of the Chilton County Association—Greeting:

I have sent blank associational letters to the clerks of all the churches af this Association except two, viz: Pleasant Hill and Thorsby, not knowing the names of the clerks, I could not send the letters. If the clerks will write me. I will gladly send them. The Association meets at Pilgrim's Rest, near Pietcher on M & O. Oct. 17 and 18. I earnestly hope that the churches will use the blanks, send up a full quota of messengers and endeavor to do all they can for the great work fostered by our denomination.

A REMARKABLE SKIN BEAUTIFIER.

Health, Beauty and a Clear, Complexion Through Laxakola Tonic Tablets.

"In all the years we have been in business," say Florence Drug co., "we do not recall ever selling anything that has aroused so much interest among our lady customers, and not a day passes but we hear of some one greatly benifitted through using Laxakola Tonic Tablets," Clanton ladies who have been troubled with pimples, blotches, moth spots and other skin affections, now pride themselves on the fresh, healthy complexion obtained through using this mild tonic laxative.

"And it is not surprising. They are different from anything you ever heard of." Laxative Tonic Tablets are a perfect combination of dandelion, cascarin and other laxative remedies known, to have a peculiar and beneficial influence on the skin They open the pores, enrich the blood, stimulate the liver, freshen the skin, and cure chronic constipation by toning up the intestines and encouraging the natural action of the bowels. Once tried they inspire perfect confidence and Florence Drug Co. return your quarter if you are disapointed.

HERBINE

The Popular Liver Medicine Will Keep You Well

A GUARANTEED CURE for all diseases produced by TORPID LIVER and IMPURE BLOOD. Do not fill your system with Arsenic, Calomel and Quinine. They act as rank poisons which vitiate the blood, debilitate the system, and leave a trail of bad symptoms which require years to obliterate. HERBINE is purely vegetable and contains no mineral or narcotic poisons, is absolutely harmless and is the simple remedy of nature. It carries off all poison in the system and leaves no injurious effects.

CURED BY HERBINE AFTER OTHER REMEDIES FAILED

Mr. L. A. Hicks, Iredell, Texas, says: "I was sick in bed for eight months with liver trouble, the doctor seemed to do me no good. I was told to try Herbine, and it cured me in a short time. I cannot recommend this wonderful medicine too highly."

An Old Maid's Tragedy

By A. St. John Adcock.

I.

HAVING had the whole day in which to reflect and prepare herself, Miss Gurney had got her feelings so well under control that she was able to hand the photograph to Hester across the tea table and say without a tremor in her voice, "I picked this up on the floor, Hester, after you were gone this morning."

The girl took it from her eagerly; she had been in trouble about it all day, wondering where she had lost it, and, in a flutter of relief and embarrassment, slipped it into her pocket now without a word; but Miss Gurney noticed that her cheeks blushed, and then a rosier red surged back and overflowed them.

The silence between them became too strained not to be broken.

"You did not tell me, Hester, that you knew——" Miss Gurney hesitated. "Is he—a friend of yours, dear?"

"Yes, aunt."

"How long have you known him?"

"Not very long. Not more than three months."

This explained to Miss Gurney the change it had puzzled her to observe in Hester lately; her placid, subdued habit of mind had seemed altogether disturbed, so that sometimes she sang for very happiness, with a strange, new light in her eyes, and sometimes she was saddened and preoccupied with pensive dreamings.

"I hope, Hester," Miss Gurney forced herself to say in her prim, decisive fashion, "there has been no—no talk of love betwixt you and this gentleman."

Hester flashed an answering glance on her and looked down, without speaking, but the answer was so clear to Miss Gurney as if it had been put into actual words.

"My dear," she went on, striving against her increasing agitation, "I am very, very sorry. I wish it had been any other man——."

"But, aunt," Hester interrupted, astonished, "you do not know him!"

"I know," Miss Gurney faltered—"I knew a man so like him—so exactly like him, that the moment I saw his photograph I was afraid for you, dear. It is impossible for that man to bring you anything but misery. Hard, and false, and cruel——."

"Oh, but, aunt," cried Hester, tearfully indignant, "he is not! If you knew him you could never say that again."

"But why have you never told me about him?"

"I have been wanting to." Hester flushed again with a pretty shyness that appealed irresistibly to all the tenderness and affection of the gentle, little old lady's nature. "I meant to, aunt, but I—I did not quite know how to. I meant to show you his photograph—he only gave it to me yesterday—and tell you then."

"And of course"—Miss Gurney assumed a severity of manner she found it difficult to maintain—"he tells you that he loves you?"

"He has asked me to marry him, aunt."

"And you fancy that you love him?"

With this question and her earnest, passionate reply, Hester broke down utterly. She flung herself on her knees, and, covering her face with her hands, laid it in Miss Gurney's lap, and sobbed all her heart out thus, as she had done years ago when it had been laden with more childish griefs.

Miss Gurney herself was scarcely less agitated.

"There, dearie, you mustn't cry so. I did not mean to be unkind," she said, her eyes dimmed and her thin hands shaking as she passed them caressingly over the fair, bowed head. "But I have seen more of the world than you have, dear, and—I have never told you yet—the man I loved spoilt my life, and made me the poor, broken-spirited creature I am; and this portrait is so like what he used to be—so exactly like, that ever since I saw it I have been dreading—oh, I don't know what! I believe I could kill him, Hester, if I thought he would cause you half the suffering I have endured through his——. But there, it is too late for me to say anything now. If you love him, I know whatever I can say would make no difference." She added presently, in the calm, even tones that were habitual to her: "You have not told me his name, Hester. What is his name?"

She had to wait and ask a second time before Hester had regained sufficient composure to reply.

"Richard Harwood," Miss Gurney repeated mechanically, nodding thoughtfully, as if she had only been confirmed in what she knew already. "And where does he live?"

Hester mentioned an address at Kensington.

"He is a gentleman—and rich?" pursued Miss Gurney.

"Yes; his father is rich."

"And does he know how poor we are?"

"Oh, yes, aunt; he knows I am working for my living."

"How was it you first happened to meet him?"

"He is distantly related to Madame Faber." Madame Faber was the fashionable milliner at whose large establishment in Oxford Street Hester had been engaged these last twelve months or more. "He came in one day with some message from his sister, I think, and he has called once or twice since, and then—he met me as I was coming home, and walked with me, and——"

"And he has happened to meet you more than once?" Miss Gurney smiled, but became serious again. "You should have told me, dear, and have brought him to see me. Why didn't you? You were not ashamed of his seeing what a poor sort of home we lived in?"

"Oh, no, no, aunt!" Hester protested. "He would have come—I would have brought him, but I wanted to tell you about him first."

And she told her about him now, and it was all only that she loved him, and she loved him more than all the world, and she had promised to be his wife, but——

There was bound to be a "but;" it was what Miss Gurney had been listening for.

"But it will not be for a long while, because he is going away——"

"Going away, child! Why? Where to?"

"He has spoken to his father about me," said Hester, her lips quivering, "and he refuses to see me, and threatens to turn Richard into the street if he will not give me up."

"They are rich, you see, dear," murmured Miss Gurney, bitterly, "and we are poor. Probably his mother——"

"She has been dead several years."

"Then it is his father. He probably intends his son to marry money, or social influence——"

"But Richard won't. He says he will never marry any one but me. If I will wait for him."

"Why is he going away?"

"His father is sending him to manage a large branch of his business in Ceylon. He is to be out there three years—perhaps longer. His father is only sending him, he says, so as to separate him from me, and he can't refuse to go without ruining his prospects, and for my sake he does not want to do that. I don't care whether he is rich or poor, but Richard says if his father turns him adrift he would have nothing—and so it is best to wait, because he will never change, and I shall never change. And so he is going away at the end of this week. I can't bear him to go. I might never see him again; but if he lives, he will come back to me."

She said it half defiantly, half despairingly, and laid her head on Miss Gurney's lap aagin to hide her tears.

For fully ten minutes neither of them spoke; then, rousing herself with a heavy sigh, Miss Gurney said, hesitatingly:

"I might do something. I don't know what I can do—but bring him home with you to-morrow evening, and let me see him, dear. If he is all you think he is—but let me see him for myself. Bring him with you to-morrow evening."

II.

And the following evening, when Richard Harwood came, Miss Gurney was easily converted to Hester's opinion of him. His frank, honest eyes, his unaffected simplicity of speech and manner, his diffidence, his shy adoration of Hester, his unconcealable love of her—all conspired to win Miss Gurney's confidence and approval, and won them in spite of herself.

Again and again, while he was there, and after he was gone, she owned, grudgingly at first, but with a growing satisfaction, that he realized her girlhood's ideal of the man she had loved years ago, and was not, as she had feared, a reincarnation of that man as she saw him now in the light of bitter remembrances—cruel, heartless, faithless.

She lay awake, that night living through again in thought the long past happiness and misery that the sight of Richard Harwood had brought back upon her with renewed intensity. She had loved, and was to have married, but seemed predestined to misfortune. First it was her mother's death that postponed the marriage; then, a year later, her father's; and her father dying bankrupt, the man she loved had ultimately yielded to the wishes of his family and broken his engagement with her, through her blind love of him, and could leave her to bear alone a shame whose memory was not buried in that little grave in the far off country churchyard, but lived to haunt her yet, and sear her very soul as often as it returned to her. She had never seen the man since, or written to him; she was too proud to ask anything of his pity, and all the love she had felt for him had died within her.

She left her old home and came to earn her living in London among people who knew nothing of her history. Being clever with her needle, she was soon able to support herself in reasonable comfort, but the hard work and the solitary, loveless life were fast aging and hardening and embittering her, when Hester came with her childish needs and sympathies to melt the frost that had gathered about her heart and reconcile her to humanity and make the world habitable again.

Hester was the orphaned child of Miss Gurney's younger sister, and it was not strange that the two, each left desolate, should grow to be all in all to each other. If Miss Gurney's love was the deeper, the more self-sacrificing, that was not strange either. She was no longer young, and had not hoped that her forlorn heart hunger would ever be satisfied, but Hester had come and satisfied it. It was enough for her now that there was one living creature whom she could love and who loved her, and her love for Hester was such that to insure her happiness she would gladly have endured rebuffs and humiliations that she would sooner have died than have submitted to for any advantage to herself.

No self-interest could have annihilated her pride and urged her to such lengths as she went unhesitatingly for Hester's sake.

She rose the morning after Richard Harwood's visit with a great resolve already fixed in her mind. She dared not reflect too much upon it or upon all its fulfillment must mean to her, for fear her courage should fail her; but early in the evening she traveled westward, and for the first time, realized her intention to the utmost, and was alarmed at her own temerity when she found herself knocking at the door of the stately house in Kensington.

If her knock had not been heard she felt she would not have dared to repeat it; but it was heard, and a supercilious footman presently opened the door.

"Is Mr. Harwood at home?" she asked, shrinkingly.

The man eyed her dubiously; she made a rather shabby, quite insignificant little figure standing there on the doorstep.

"Well—yes—he's at home. What might you want him for?"

His lofty condescension roused her to resentment, and so stiffened her drooping pride and at once restored her self-control.

"Will you tell Mr. Harwood, my man, that Miss Gurney wishes to see him? Say Miss Gurney, formerly of Barndene, please."

He sullenly obeyed, and after an interval, returned to her in the hall with a perplexed expression darkening his countenance.

"Mr. Harwood will see you. This way, please."

She followed him into a spacious, elegantly appointed drawing room, and sat down there, feeling curiously out of place and bewildered.

And a minute later a gray, elderly gentleman entered and advanced toward her. Altered as he was she knew him, and was aware that he recognized her as readily. He offered her his hand with an obvious embarrassment, but she bowed distantly without appearing to notice it.

"I am pleased to see you, Miss Gurney," he began lamely, and then sat down and looked at her, and seemed waiting for her to speak.

But she could not trust herself yet; her heart was fluttering suffocatingly, and she felt that if she attempted to answer him she was so unnerved she must burst into tears, and the very thought of thus humbling herself in his presence helped to strengthen her.

"It is a very long while," he made an effort, and resumed inanely, "since we saw each other, Miss Gurney."

"A very long while!" His halting words had an unintentional sting in them, and all at once she had flung her weakness from her. "I would not have troubled you now on my own account——"

"Please don't say that." She was vaguely conscious of a wistful eagerness in his tone. "If there is anything I can do for you——"

"There is nothing you can do for me," she said, with quiet decision. "You should know me better than to think I would ask any, even the smallest, favor of you for myself."

He quailed under her indignant glance, and threw out his hands with a gesture of despair.

"Forgive me. I know what you say is true," he returned sadly. "You must not think, Ruth," the name rose involuntarily to his lips, "that I have forgiven myself, or forgotten, or that I have been altogether happy. I know I wronged you—terribly—and the memory of it has come between me and happiness more and more as I have grown older and had time to think. I have been punished——"

"And I!" she interposed harshly. "But I did not come to talk of what is past mending. You did me a great wrong, and I never dreamt till yesterday of seeing you again, or that there was any way in which I might be brought to forgive you——"

"And is there? Tell me what it is," he cried. "I would give a great deal to make some reparation for what I have done. I am not the reckless, selfish fool I was in those days."

He was strongly moved, but not more so than was Miss Gurney herself; it was as much as she could do to steady her voice and keep her emotion hidden from him.

"Your son is engaged to my niece—my dead sister's child. I did not know anything of it until two days ago," she said, gathering confidence as she proceeded, and speaking with a detached air as if what she discussed did not concern herself personally. "You have forbidden your son to see her again, and are sending him away with some idea of parting them for ever. She is everything to me now. I care more for her happiness than my own. If I had not loved her so, my pride would never have allowed me to come to you. I came only to save her from such a life as mine has been. I couldn't think, if you knew, that you would break her heart as you have broken mine."

She stopped abruptly, and he gazed at her with a sort of terror in his eyes.

"I did not know who she was," he said huskily.

"I came to tell you."

He sat looking at her, stricken dumb, for even in his most repentant moments he had not thought the consequences of his sin could spread a blight so far reaching and so irreparable; he sat looking at her, and read in her thin, white hair and in her worn, furrowed features the piteous story of what her life had been since he had seen her last. He had no words for his shame and his remorse, and in some subtle fashion the poignancy of his emotion communicated itself to her. She would not trust herself to look at him or address him again, and though he twice made as if he would speak, each time his voice broke like a sob in his throat and he fell silent.

The tension was becoming so painful that it was an ineffable relief to both of them when a knock sounded on the door, and the footman entered apologetically.

"Beg pardon, sir," he said. "Carrier at the gate, sir, for Mr. Richard's boxes. They're all corded in his room, but he isn't home yet, and hasn't labelled which he wants for use during the voyage, and I thought p'h'ps you'd know, sir——"

"It won't matter, James," cried Mr. Harwood, himself again instantly in face of this dignified domestic. "You can tell the carrier there are no boxes to be taken now. Mr. Richard has altered his arrangements—he will not be going."—The King.

WORDS OF WISDOM.

Everybody would want to be poor if it was a scandal.

Unless a man is abused a lot he never amounts to much.

Being engaged is almost as profitable as betting on the races.

There is mighty little money in spending it to show you have it.

You can make a good citizen out of a politician by having him die.

A man has a lot of fun being a pessimist if he is rich and healthy and happy.

A woman's shirt waist would be terribly immodest if it were a bathing suit.

The only woman a man seems to be ashamed to make love to in public is his wife.

The only people who get very much fun out of saving money are their heirs.

The college graduates who delivered addresses on how to succeed are now trying to.

There is hardly anybody who doesn't like to think he's a martyr unless it really hurts.

If a girl's waist isn't to squeeze it's mighty funny why it was made such a good fit to a man's arm.

If a woman can't find anything else to be miserable about she can always get up a fit of jealousy.

A woman calls it a breach of etiquette for you not to pretend you think her hair curls naturally.

The longer a man waits for his rich uncle to die the surer he is not to get anything when it happens.

What a woman likes about being sick abed is she can imagine how the flowers would look if she should die.

When a girl goes to a theatre with a man and likes everything about the play it's a sign he wasn't her brother.

The fun about betting on horse races is if you lose you don't have to tell anybody and if you win you brag about it.

Any woman is perfectly satisfied to have one husband, but mighty few girls are content with one engagement.—Reflections of a Bachelor, in the New York Press.

Our Little Brothers the Birds.

We came presently to another department, and here the angel hid his face and was silent, for the counter was covered with the stiff limbs and torn clothing of his little brothers the birds. There was a notice above the door: "Five hundred genuine ospreys much below cost to clear."

He said, "Do all women, then, love murder in July?"

I answered, "You are quite mistaken. We are very kind hearted and cannot bear to cause suffering, but we owe it as a duty to society to make ourselves as pretty as we can."

The angel was almost amused.

"That is really a very curious illusion!" he remarked. "How can the decaying body of a mutilated osprey add to the beauty of even the visual world?"—Evelyn Underhill, in London Outlook.

Found Cannon Ball of 1634.

A cannon ball which had lain buried since 1634 was yesterday recovered from a field on the farm of Mr. Hampson, of Acton, Nantwich. The ancient town of Nantwich played a considerable part in the civil war, as the headquarters in Cheshire of the Parliamentry Generals Fairfax and Brereton, and much fighting took place at Acton, where during a portion of the siege of Nantwich the royalist forces were located. On some of the masonry of both Acton and Nantwich churches there are still visible marks caused by cannon shot.

THE PULPIT.

A BRILLIANT SUNDAY SERMON BY REV. EDWARD LAWRENCE HUNT

Subject: "That They Might Have Life."

Washington, D. C.—The Rev. Edward Lawrence Hunt, on Sunday preached the following brilliant sermon from the text: "I came that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly."—John 10:10.

Jesus' object was to give men life. His church preaches this through her chief sacrament: "My flesh I give for the life of the world."

"Oh, the wild joys of living! * * * The hunt of the bear"—are these the President's holiday words or Browning's? Even that life is the gift of God through Jesus Christ, "without whom was not anything made that was made."

Physical life is good. There is something better. The "high man" who "would not discount life, as fools do," who would "not live thus, but know" is "still loftier than the world suspects." There is something higher still. "To know" is not eternal life, but to know God—and the gift of God is eternal life, through Jesus Christ. "This is life eternal, that they might know Thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom Thou hast sent."

To give man that life, Jesus must come. "I came that they might have life." Why could not the living Creator give that life by His mere word?

First, because death had passed upon all men, for all sinned. The God of Law, who breathed into man's nostrils the breath of life, when man became a living soul, ordained the law, "The soul that sinneth, it shall die"; or, to put the same truth in other words: The God of Love warned man that "the wages of sin is death." Man scorned love's warning and sinned. Then felt within him that sin is a fatal disease. So came Jesus to put away sin by His death, that as sin reigned unto death, even so might grace reign through righteousness, unto eternal life through Jesus Christ.

"Grace" means He died for our sins that we, set free from sin, made alive unto God, might live. He came, then, to free us from that death which means separation from the living God; to reconcile us to God in one only way, by death, so that here on earth we might live with God. And, further, He came to free us from the fear of that death which is the blowing out of the candle. By rising from the dead, and so bringing life and immortality to light by His Gospel, He inspires the hope of immortality. Hence we do not

Stretch lame hands of faith and grope,
And faintly trust the larger hope, but we lay strong hold on the hope set before us, as an anchor of the soul, sure and steadfast, entering into that within the veil.

This eternal life must be laid hold of by man, "I came that they might," not must. Man gets it by faith: "He that liveth and believeth on Me shall never die." It is "whosoever believeth" that "need not perish, but have eternal life."

Remember eternal life is not mere duration. Jesus is the quality. How, not how long, we live; and because of quality, endurance: "No one is able to snatch them out of My Father's hand." To know God, to share His life, to walk in love with Him until God is tired of you, means to live with Him forever.

Second, He came because man must have a teacher and an example of the best life. "If when we were enemies we were reconciled to God by the death of His Son, much more, being reconciled, we shall be saved by His life."

Jesus' life is the hope of the race. One man has lived in the fullest healthy exercise of all his powers—no man need despair. The ideal has been realized. He has also given us the secret of success. It is willing surrender to God. It is to learn God's purposes and with loving sympathy work them out with Him. This involves first and always the destruction of selfishness. It means we must follow Christ. And "If any man will come after Me, let him deny himself and take up his cross. For he that will gain his life shall lose it: but he that will lose his life for My sake shall find it."

Except a corn of wheat shall fall into the ground and die, it abideth by itself alone. But if it die it shall live abundantly. What a pitiable time the mean, selfish man must have to abide alone here on earth with the grasping fellow even he himself despises. And if at last, in disgust at himself, he should follow the example of a Judas (whose association with Jesus gave him at least enough conception of a true manhood to be enough disgusted with himself to kill himself)—then? Then he must keep on "abiding by himself alone," forever with a murderer, alone.

Judas—Jesus! Grasping—giving! Which will you follow?

If you would live you must first wish for it. One object of Jesus' life was to awaken your desire for the fullest life. Contrast, then, your life with His, with the life of the best character you know, with the man you hoped in your youth's best dreams you might some day be.

Note the appalling railroad wreck of the past week. Read its allegory. See two pictures—the freight car loaded with blessing; two cars with dynamite with power for good; the passenger train with its freight of souls. What thrill of the music industry in the song of the whizzing wheels and the whishshsh of the greeting as the two iron steeds of strength and speed, fed with black bread from the heart of the earth, rush past, each on its own track! Few sights are beautiful.

But look again. Some freight cars leave their track, fall across the other's track—and woe!—the sickening, sightless horror of the wreck; the groans of the dying, the ghastly dead unknown.

It's the lesson of our life, with its trains of body and spirit—on their God-laid tracks fraught with blessing. Earth has no picture more beautiful than man, all his powers in fullest play in harmony, soul helping flesh as flesh helps and look again. The lusts of the throw both from their tracks.

Hell has no picture more Oh, man, wrecked by self Jesus came to redeem you you again on the right track throw open the tracks of to you. Watch His life on transcendent glory and follow The trains are running on the sylvania system to-day and even safer.

Third.—Jesus came because by Himself becoming the humanity could God's life man's in a way to sustain and velop a free manhood. Only by infusion of Christ's life can man follow Him and grow "I am the vine, ye are the "Except ye eat the flesh of of Man and drink His blood no life in you." "I am the bread, the bread of God cometh down from Heaven giveth life unto the world."

A shallow infidel with flippancy called this the "cannibalism of church." This is not a church tion. It is as practical as the of the doctor on which your depends. It is more vital cares little about our formal He cares much about our daily duct. He cares most about our motives, our inmost life. The superficial thought must any man that we can have save from the God in whom we and move and have our being; furthermore, that we must His life through the channels of own appointing. His channel is the Son of Man. "If ye abide Me and My words abide in you shall ask what ye will of life shall be yours. If any man in Me, he will be a withered and be burned. If you live in God will break forth into glory abundant fruit in your life. joy will be full, your peace turbed, a puzzle to men in the of trouble, your strength strength of God."

Richard Mansfield's most thr sentence is, "when as the prince prived of a natural childhood youth, with the vehement of a mighty stream which bursts the dam which had long strained its natural flow, he his fellow students: "We are and we're going to live." This ger and thrust for life, abundant Jesus approves. Even to those in their eager infatuation choose "the way that seemeth unto a man, but whose end is Jesus speaks: "I came that might have life. He that to Me shall never hunger, and that believeth in Me shall thirst." Come to Jesus, and youth will have all your eye heart can crave.

Oh, man about to turn away convinced, take a few Sabbath to see the life He lived, and may live with Him—to imagine face and bear the accents of Prince of Life when He said to contemporaries in Palestine says to His contemporaries in ica to-day: "You will not come Me that you might have life."

Faithful Stewardship.

One of the plainest duties of ardship is that we bring and deliberate consideration upon our administration of world's goods. We are not stewards if we spend according our own whim and fancy, "charity" depend, as it so often on little better than accident or

We are stewards in regard we spend on ourselves and our lies, as well as in what we spend purposes beyond ourselves; sonal and domestic expenditure savings and our gifts, and the tion between them should all pass under the inspection of erate conscience. If that were thoroughly understood and by us, we should be very people, and there would be ferent results from many that is made to us. Stewardship means deliberation, and consideration, and conscientious posal and administration fund that is not mine, but is my hand.—The Rev. Alexan Laren.

The Livery of Christ.

If you wear the livery of you will find Him so meek and of heart that you will find your souls. He is the most naminous of captains. There was His like among the princes. He is always to be the thickest part of the battle the wind blows cold He always the bleak side of the hill. The test end of the Cross lies shoulders. If He bids us carry den, He carries it also.

His service is life, peace, that you would enter on it God help you to enlist under ner of Jesus Christ.—Last the Rev. C. H. Spurgeon.

What Prayer Gives.

Prayer gives serenity, peace, trust, after the anxi expectancy, the exultations of the agonies of sorrow and ment. What is prayer, make us thus tranquil and thus calm and trustful? prayer, that it purifies and helps us to live worthily fully? It is an irrepressible want seeking supplies from Infinite Fulness. It is aspiration ing along the craggy pathway Fountain of all joys and George Simmons.

The Spirit-Filled Life.

The Spirit-filled life is self. When Christ comes in out. The two are When Jesus begins to thrones selfishness and there is to be a new life be an utter surrender of with all its ways. The God in a person's heart a character of unselfish vice. It is impossible for dwell in a selfish heart would he to share an idol's Ram's Horn.

HEALTHY OLD AGE

TEN THE BEST PART OF LIFE

for Women Passing Through Change of Life

Providence has allotted us each at seventy years in which to fulfill mission in life, and it is generally own fault if we die prematurely.

Mrs Mary Koehne

Nervous exhaustion invites disease. statement is the positive truth. When everything becomes a burden you cannot walk a few blocks without excessive fatigue, and you break into perspiration easily, and your flushes, and you grow excited and shaky at the least provocation, and cannot bear to be crossed in anything, you are in danger; your nerves given out; you need building up once! To build up woman's nervous system and during the period of change of life we know of no better medicine than Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Here is an illustration. Mrs. Mary L. Koehne, 371 field Avenue, Chicago, Ill., writes: "I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for years in my family and it disappoints; so when I felt that I was the change of life I commenced treatment with it. I took in all about six bottles it did me a great deal of good. It stopped dizzy spells, pains in my back and the aches with which I had suffered for before taking the Compound. I feel it had not been for this great medicine women that I should not have been alive day. It is splendid for women, old or young. will surely cure all female disorders."

Mrs. Pinkham, daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., invites all sick and ailing women to write for advice. Her great experience at their service, free of cost.

Blue Jay's Nest in a Mail Box.

A novel nesting place is that of a lucky bluejay, who in spite of discouraging obstacles, has succeeded in building her nest and raising her young in a certain mail box on the F. D. route between Bowdoinham and Richmond. Three times did the carriers drive her away during the earlier stages of nest building, but she returned with such persistence that finally it was decided to let her alone and see what she would do. Gaining access to the box through the broken cover, she soon showed them that her nest was to be in this unusual spot. In one corner, as far as possible from the mail, she continued her building operations, minding not at all the frequent visits of the carrier and owner of the box. With persevering energy she kept on, and when the little birds came they were apparently as undisturbed as the mother in their strange home among the letters.—Lewiston (Me.) Journal.

Bargain Sale in Monuments.

That all "reduction sales" do not noticeably affect the stock on hand was made plain to a man who paid a visit to his native town after an interval of 18 months. On the former visit he had noticed a big canvas sign stretched across the shop front of the local marble works bearing the announcement that a reduction sale of all the monuments on hand was going on.

The stock consisted, so far as he could discover, of four memorial stones, one of granite and three of white marble. When he struck the town again last week he saw that the "sale" was still going on, for the sign, badly faded, was still in place, and the same four monuments were on view in the yard in front of the shop.—New York Press.

GOOD AND HARD

Results of Excessive Coffee Drinking.

It is remarkable what suffering some persons put up with just to satisfy an appetite for something.

A Mich. woman says: "I had been using coffee since I was old enough to have a cup of my own at the table, and from it I have suffered agony hundreds of times in the years past.

"My trouble first began in the form of bilious colic, coming on every few weeks and almost ending my life. every attack for 8 years I suffered in this way. I used to pray for death to relieve me from my suffering. I had also attacks of sick headache, and began to suffer from catarrh of the stomach, and of course dyspepsia.

"For about a year I lived on crackers and water. Believing that coffee was the cause of all this suffering, finally quit it and began to use Postum Food Coffee. It agreed with my stomach, my troubles have left me and I am fast gaining my health under its use.

"No wonder I condemn coffee and No one could be in a much more pitiful condition than I was from the use of coffee. Some doctors pronounced it cancer, others ulceration, none gave me any relief. But since I stopped coffee and began Postum I am getting well so fast I can heartily recommend it for all who suffer as I did." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

HEALTHY OLD AGE

VEN THE BEST PART OF LIFE

s for Women Passing Through Change of Life

Providence has allotted us each at seventy years in which to fulfill mission in life, and it is generally own fault if we die prematurely.

Mrs Mary Koehne

Nervous exhaustion invites disease. This statement is the positive truth. When everything becomes a burden and you cannot walk a few blocks without excessive fatigue, and you break into perspiration easily, and your flushes, and you grow excited and irritable at the least provocation, and cannot bear to be crossed in anything, you are in danger; your nerves have given out; you need building up at once! To build up woman's nervous system and during the period of change of life we know of no better medicine than Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Here is an illustration. Mrs. Mary L. Koehne, 371 field Avenue, Chicago, Ill., writes:

"I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for years in my family and it never disappoints; so when I felt that I was nearing the change of life I commenced treatment with it. I took in all about six bottles and it did me a great deal of good. It stopped my dizzy spells, pains in my back and the headaches with which I had suffered for months before taking the Compound. I feel that if it had not been for this great medicine for women that I should not have been alive to-day. It is splendid for women old or young, and will surely cure all female disorders."

Mrs. Pinkham, daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., invites all sick and ailing women to write her for advice. Her great experience is at their service, free of cost.

Blue Jay's Nest in a Mail Box.

A novel nesting place is that of a plucky bluejay, who in spite of discouraging obstacles, has succeeded in building her nest and raising her young in a certain mail box on the R. F. D. route between Bowdoinham and Richmond. Three times did the carriers drive her away during the earlier stages of nest building, but she returned with such persistence that finally it was decided to let her alone and see what she would do. Gaining access to the box through the open cover, she soon showed them her nest was to be in this unusual spot. In one corner, as far as possible from the mail, she continued her building operations, minding not at all the frequent visits of the carrier and owner of the box. With unwavering energy she kept on, and when the little birds came they were apparently as undisturbed as the in their strange home among the letters.—Lewiston (Me.) Journal.

Bargain Sale in Monuments.

That all "reduction sales" do not invariably affect the stock on hand was made plain to a man who paid a visit to his native town after an interval of 18 months. On the former visit he had noticed a big canvas stretched across the shop front of the local marble works bearing the announcement that a reduction of all the monuments on hand was going on.

The stock consisted, so far as he could discover, of four memorial stones, one of granite and three of white marble. When he struck the town again last week he saw that the sale was still going on, for the sign, slightly faded, was still in place, and the same four monuments were on view in the yard in front of the shop.—New York Press.

GOOD AND HARD

Results of Excessive Coffee Drinking.

It is remarkable what suffering some persons put up with just to satisfy an appetite for something.

A Mich. woman says: "I had been a coffee drinker since I was old enough to have a cup of my own at the table, and from it I have suffered agony hundreds of times in the years past.

"My trouble first began in the form of bilious colic, coming on every few weeks and almost ending my life. At every attack for 8 years I suffered in this way. I used to pray for death to relieve me from my suffering. I had also attacks of sick headache, and began to suffer from catarrh of the stomach, and of course general dyspepsia.

"For about a year I lived on crackers and water. Believing that coffee was the cause of all this suffering, I finally quit it and began to use Postum Food Coffee. It agreed with my stomach, my troubles have left me and I am fast gaining my health under its use.

"No wonder I condemn coffee and tea. No one could be in a much more critical condition than I was from the use of coffee. Some doctors pronounced it cancer, others ulceration, but none gave me any relief. But when I stopped coffee and began Postum I am getting well so fast I can heartily recommend it for all who suffer as I did." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville." "There's a reason."

SCIENCE & MECHANICS

Professor Field, of Harvard, cooked a dinner of squid, snails and sand louse that converted sixty biologists to support of those sea products as delicacies.

Oxford street, from the Marble Arch to Tottenham Court Road, London, is to be lighted by means of eighty-one "flame" arc lamps, at an estimated cost of £2500.

An acting model of the human heart, with every detail, has been made by a French physician. The blood can be seen coursing to and from it through artificial arteries.

It has long been known that smokers are not liable to certain diseases. It is now held that this is due to the presence in the tobacco of formaldehyde, one of the strongest of disinfectants.

A report from Antwerp states that never before has the demand been so great from the United States, at any one time, for cement as at the present time. One vessel recently took 6100 tons of cement from Antwerp to San Francisco.

Poisoning from gas inhalation is now added to the recognized dangers of ballooning. The hydrogen—itself non poisonous—is often contaminated with arsenic, selenium and antimony, and fourteen cases of ill effects have been reported to the French Academy of Medicine. In one of the two forms of poisoning death results in two or three days.

In re-enforced concrete the cement is simply an envelope for a skeleton of metal in the form of girders, rods or meshwork. This construction has been mainly confined to engineering works, especially bridges, where the architectural problems are of the simplest. However, the material is said to be capable of artistic treatment, while affording superior protection to structural metal against oxidation and against distortion by fire.

A London physician has taken his life in his hand and declared in favor of what he calls the "silence cure" for nervous women. The doctor is a specialist of renown with a high reputation among society dames. He insists that all that is needed by an exhausted leader of the social swim is to pass an hour or so every day in absolute silence. This will not only soothe nerves, but will cause the lines of worry to leave the face and will impart an expression of peacefulness and beauty. "If nervous women," he says, "can be persuaded to hold their tongues and permit the brain to rest we shall have fewer breakdowns and neuralgia and nervous prostration."

Alcohol in Bread.

"You consume four pints of whisky a year," said the amateur chemist. "Now, don't be angry or shocked. I know that you're a strict teetotaler, but just the same I know that you've absorbed that much alcohol. How? Well, simply by eating bread.

"It has long been known that the fermentation of bread caused the formation of alcohol, but it was supposed that it passed from the dough during the process of baking. Several scientists have proved that bread when ready for eating contains an average of .800 per cent. of alcohol to the loaf. You must remember that in many countries strong liquors are brewed from bread. Kvass, the mild Russian beer, is brewed from brown bread.

"Now, if you eat 400 loaves of bread every year you must perforce have assimilated twenty ounces of alcohol, which equals four pints of rye whisky.

"In ten years," concluded the amateur chemist impressively, "you have eaten 4000 loaves of bread, and in that number of loaves is about 200 ounces of alcohol, or the equivalent of nineteen quarts of whisky. Think of the saturnalia you have been on for the last ten years, and you never knew enough to complain of a big head in the morning."—New York Press.

The Mineral Vegetable.

Asbestos can fairly lay claim to the title of being the most useful of all minerals. It has been called a mineralogical vegetable. It is both fibrous and crystalline, elastic, yet brittle, a floating stone, which can be readily carded, spun and woven into tissue. In Germany it is known as stein-flachs (stone flax), and the miners of Quebec give it quite as expressive a name—pierre coton (cotton stone).

The asbestos mines of Quebec are the most famous in the world, yielding about eighty-five per cent. of the entire output, Italy being the only competing country, and there the industry is declining. Although Charlemange is said to have had a tablecloth of asbestos, which he cleaned by throwing into fire, the material was practically unknown util 1850.

Asbestos is spun into yarns, from which cloth is woven into drop curtains in theatres, clothing for firemen, acid workers and others. It is made into lamp wicks, gloves for stokers and ropes for fire escapes. It is felted into mill board to be used as an insulator in dynamos, as a fireproof lining for floors and in countless other ways.—London Daily Mail.

North Dakota Solves the Adulteration Problem.

North Dakota seems to have found the key to the question, "How shall we protect the people from frauds in manufactured products?" a plan which is applicable to foods, beverages, materials used in the arts, etc. A new law has recently gone into effect designed to make it impossible to deceive people into buying inferior and adulterated paint under the impression that they are getting real paint, viz.: pure white lead and linseed oil.

The North Dakota lawmakers did not attempt to absolutely prohibit the inferior pigments, or mixtures of pigments. They adopted the slogan, "Let the label tell," and then left to the people to buy whichever they wished.

Under this plan, if any one wishes to buy a mixture of rock-dust, ground quartz and other cheap elements which are found in many paints and so-called "white leads," no one can object; for they do it with their eyes open. But if they prefer genuine white lead and linseed oil, they can be sure of getting it, for none but the genuine article can bear a label which says "pure white lead."

In all other States mixtures are often sold as pure white lead which contain little—sometimes no—real white lead.

It would seem that were this same principle applied to food, beverages and all other prepared articles, where deception is practiced upon the buyer, the question would be solved. It would leave us free to buy what we pleased, but would protect us from unwittingly buying what we did not want.

ACTIVITY IN OLD AGE.

Instances From the Church—English Woman Busy at 103.

There never were so many old people alive as today. The Church provides several instances of activity in old age. The aged Dean of St. Paul's is 87 years old, but is frequently present at the services in the Cathedral; Prebendary Hutchinson is one of the oldest of living clergymen in the Church of England, having been ordained deacon as long ago as 1833, and is still able to discharge the duties of his office, though over 90 years old.

Bishop Courtenay is not now in active discharge of the duties of a diocese, having retired from the bishopric of Kingston in 1879. He was born in 1813, and had aspirations toward a barrister's career. But, although he was called to the Chancery bar in 1838, he decided to enter the Church, and was ordained three years later. A great part of his life was spent in Jamaica, where he was archdeacon and Bishop successively. For five years afterward he was chaplain at L'Ermitage.

The oldest free church minister in active work is undoubtedly the Rev. Thomas Lord of Horncastle, who is now in his ninety-ninth year, and is the oldest Congregational minister in the United Kingdom. Mr. Lord has held pastorates at Wollaston, Brigstock, Deddington, Great Bridge and Horncastle, but he retired from active ministry in 1878. He resides at Horncastle and takes a keen interest in local affairs, besides frequently preaching in chapels in the district. Last year, when preaching with remarkable vigor from the text, "Thou art near, O Lord," he mentioned that this service concluded the seventy-first year of his ministry, since his ordination.

I had the pleasure of congratulating personally that wonderful old musician Senor Manual Garcia on his 100th birthday. He is now 101 years old and in very fair health. He taught Jenny Lind, "the Swedish Nightingale," and up to quite recently imparted his special method of voice training to the younger singers of the day. Senor Garcia can still enjoy a game of chess, and likes to have a story read aloud to him. On his 100th birthday the veteran was invested by King Edward with an order at Buckingham Palace and afterward spoke at a commemoration gathering. He was recently an an interested spectator at a game at pelota.

Miss Mary Alexander will be 103 in September. She is one of three sisters who have survived to an advanced age. They belong to a long lived family. Miss Alexander and her two sisters, who are respectively 93 and 89 this year, reside at Reigate and are the daughters of a London banker. The aged sisters are members of the Society of Friends, which has always had a number of men and women of advanced age, its peaceful principles conducing to long life. All the sisters have been total abstainers for over sixty-five years and they were the first to join the Total Abstinence Society when it was started at Stoke Newington, where they resided many years ago. Miss Mary Alexander, the centenarian, is able to knit and read, though she now requires glasses; her two sisters disdain spectacles and are exceedingly busy.

Needs Legal Remedy.

"I am slightly in doubt," said a physician to a lawyer who was ill, "as to whether yours is a constitutional disease or not." Whereupon the patient exclaimed:

"For heaven's sake, doctor, have I got to go to the expense of appealing to the United States supreme court to find out whether it is or not?"

POSITIVE PROOF

That OXIDINE is the BEST CHILL TONIC on the market is the fact that others are trying to imitate it.

OXIDINE CAME INTO THE FIELD THE FIRST OF ITS KIND—BRAND NEW. NOW YOU ARE OFFERED OTHER THINGS WHICH THEY CLAIM ARE "JUST AS GOOD." WHEN THEY DO THIS, THEY ADMIT THAT IF THEY COULD ONLY MAKE IT JUST LIKE OXIDINE, THEY WOULD HAVE REACHED PERFECTION. By this they acknowledge that OXIDINE IS THE BEST. Let imitations alone. DEAR SIR: Herewith I beg to hand you certificate of analysis of the Oxidine you submitted a few days since.

I trust this will be duly received and found entirely satisfactory. I have kept you waiting for a little while, but I appreciate the responsibility which you have seen fit to place upon me; for that reason I have taken my time to be certain and accurate about my results.

If I can serve you in the future please advise me. Thanking you, I beg to remain,

CERTIFICATE OF ANALYSIS

Of Three Bottles of Oxidine Submitted by R. H. Walker, of Gonzales, Texas, Secretary of the State Pharmaceutical Association.

HOUSTON, TEXAS, June 27, 1906.

I find this Oxidine to contain absolutely no poisonous or injurious drugs or chemicals and not a trace of Arsenic, Codeine, Morphine, Opium or Strychnine, nor, in fact, anything that would produce a harmful effect whatever.

Respectfully submitted,
P. S. TILSON, Chemist.

World's Smallest Armies.

The smallest army is that of Monaco, with 75 guards, 75 carabineers and 80 firemen. Next comes that of Luxemburg, with 135 gendarmes, 170 volunteers and 39 musicians. In the Republic of San Marino they can put in the field nine companies comprising 950 men and 38 officers, commanded by a marshal. On a peace footing the republic can put only one company of 60 men on the parade ground. In Liberia the most striking feature is the proportion of officers to privates. There are 800 of the former and only 700 of the latter. None the less the republic issues proclamations of nuetrality when wars break out between the great powers of Europe.—Chicago Journal.

A Wonderful Restoration That Caused a Sensation in a Pennsylvania Town.

Mrs. Charles M. Preston, of Elkland, Pa., says: "Three years ago I found that my housework was becoming a burden. I tired easily, had no ambition and was failing fast. My complexion got yellow, and I lost over 50 pounds. My thirst was terrible, and there was sugar in the kidney secretions. My doctor kept me on a strict diet, but as his medicine was not helping me I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. They helped me at once, and soon all traces of sugar disappeared. I have regained my former weight and am perfectly well."

I puts a little vaseline on my hands and I rubs his hair, well, say a minute or so. Then I give him a glimpse of the natural oil on my hands.

TERRIBLE SCALY ECZEMA.

Eruptions Appeared on Chest and Face and Neck Were All Broken Out —Cured by Cuticura.

"I had an eruption appear on my chest and body and extend upwards and downwards, so that my neck and face were all broken out; also my arms and the lower limbs as far as the knees. I at first thought it was prickly heat. But soon scales or crusts formed where the breaking out was. Instead of going to a physician I purchased a complete treatment of the Cuticura Remedies, in which I had great faith, and all was satisfactory. A year or two later the eruption appeared again, only a little lower, but before it had time to spread I procured another supply of the Cuticura Remedies, and continued their use until the cure was complete. It is now five years since the last attack, and have not seen any signs of a return. I have more faith in Cuticura Remedies for skin diseases than anything I know of. Emma E. Wilson, Liscomb, Iowa, Oct. 7, 1905."

Florence Drug Co. Will Pay Back Your Money If Pepsikola Fails to Cure Your Indigestion.

"Never in the history of this store," remarked one of the above druggists to an interested customer, "has there been so great a demand for a new remedy as there is just now for Pepsikola Tablets. Clanton people are coming in every day inquiring if it really is true that we sell Pepsikola with the understanding that it will cure dyspepsia or pay back the money. "Not one person in fifty has asked for their money, and it may surprise you to know that at least a dozen within the last ten days have been in to tell us how much they have been relieved and how glad they are to know at last there is a remedy that really will cure indigestion and dyspepsia." Pepsikola braces up and tone every nerve and fibre. helps digest the food, puts new life into the digestion, improves the appetite, cures coated tongue, dizzy spells and sour stomach.

Try it for ten days, and if you don't see a big improvement step in and tell Florence Drug co., and they will hand back your quarter cheerfully and without argument.

Starving to Death.

Because her stomach was so weakened by useless drugging that she could not eat, Mrs. Mary A. Walters, of St. Clair St., Columbus, O., was literally starving to death. She writes: "My stomach was so weak from useless drugs that I could not eat, and my nerves so wrecked that I could not sleep; and not before I was given up to die was I induced to try Electric Bitters; with the wonderful result that improvement began at once, and a complete cure followed." NOW IS THE TIME!

Now! when this weather just makes one dream of the cool and delightful retreats of the Adirondacks.

Of the Thousand Islands of the St Lawrence.

The thousand lakes and streams of Michigan, Canada, and the northwest:

Where one can roam with fishing rod along shady forest streams and swing the line out over deep pools.

Or paddle through quiet waters with only the music of the forest or the ripple of the water to break the deep quiet of the solitude.

Now is the time to consult your nearest Big Four Agent as to routes and rates and get his information as to through sleepers from St. Louis, Indianapolis, Cincinnati, Dayton, Springfield and Columbus to Boston, Cleveland, Buffalo, New York.

Cured Hay Fever and Summer Cold.

A. J. Nusbaum, Batesville, Indiana, writes: "Last year I suffered for three months with a summer cold so distressing that it interfered with my business. I had many of the symptoms of hay fever, and a doctor's prescription did not reach my case, and I took several medicines which seemed to only aggravate my case. Fortunately I insisted upon having Foley's Honey and Tar in the yellow package, and it quickly cured me. My wife has since used Foley's Honey and Tar with the same success." Upchurch Drug co.

Sour Stomach

No appetite, loss of strength, nervousness, headache, constipation, bad breath, general debility, sour risings, and catarrh of the stomach are all due to indigestion. Kodol cures indigestion. This new discovery represents the natural juices of digestion as they exist in a healthy stomach, combined with the greatest known tonic and reconstructive properties. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure does not only cure indigestion and dyspepsia, but this famous remedy cures all stomach troubles by cleansing, purifying, sweetening and strengthening the mucous membranes lining the stomach.

COUNTRY LIFE.

The country man, who has to remain in the country, because he has no means of maintaining himself in the city, sometimes envies the city man. He thinks the city man imbued with pleasure and opportunities, which he himself can not have. He learns to despise the humble dwelling in which he lives; learns to think of it as a place where the fates threw him, and confining him there against his will, accepts it as undue. The groves of cedars and palms, or probably of oaks and hemlock "have all lost their beauty for him;" the little lane which leads down to his dwelling he desires to walk in no more. In short he has become envious of the city man's privileges and accepts his fate reluctantly, unwillingly

But how about this? Are not things gained by going to the city gained at a loss of as great or greater things left in the country? We know many times it is solitary there; but the very solitariness is a producer of thought of the deep things of life; and this accounts in part for the facts that most of our great men have come from the country. In their youth they had not the daily, not many times even the weekly, newspaper, or monthly magazine, one of the great privileges of our day, and but few books; but they looked at the stars, and were thrilled with awe at beholding the majesty of the moon. In these moody and quiet retirements great thoughts were imbedded in their minds, which made them great characters in the world. In view of these facts the countryman has no right to be discouraged or discontented.

It is said, that the true man's greatest pride is in seeing his sons and daughters making powerful men and women in the world; and if this be true, they should be willing to endure for a time in order to have their greatest pride gratified.

We would not for once discourage the city boy with his thousands of opportunities, but it does seem that the very number of them decreases his ability to use any of them, or makes him value them less. Like a boy with a thousand marbles, they become not a rarity to him.

Besides this, is not contentment the greatest desire and need of man? Where, then, do you find the contented man? Not always in the country, nor in the city, yet the chances are better for it in the country. The city man is usually better dressed, goes in higher society, so-called, makes more money; yet this is not always a sign of contentment; more often the opposite. He is always rushing, and engaged in the thoughts of how to make more money By this, the opposite spirit of contentment is developed. Yet, many thanks to the city brethren; were it not for the city the country could not be what it is. The country man should not be dissatisfied with his lot, nor should he be envious; for "every added sweet has its bitter."

UNCLE JO.

Adams.

I am glad to say our Sabbath school has revived and we are glad to have this blessed privilege; glad to have Mr. J. T. Adams as our superintendent and Mr. A. B. Frith as the advanced class teacher. Let us all come out on the Lord's side and work for Him. We should go there for that purpose. Hope those that haven't, will come and join our happy little band and help us carry on our Sunday school. This is a most glorious work; we should work while it is day, for the night cometh when no man can work. O, what a sad thought to think of! Will we be prepared when our blessed Savior calls? Will we be ready to meet Him in peace? He is calling every day; we can hear of those who have passed into eternity prepared or unprepared.: our time is coming; if we would live as we should it would be a blessed thought to think we are going home. Old Satan will tempt us and lead us the way he likes; if we resist the devil he will flee from us. Our time is not long to stay, and our moments are precious; we should spend them in a righteous way. This is a beautiful world and we should be more thankful for the many blessings from our blessed Savior; those that never have had the cleansing power with them, those that care not for righteousness. O, that they could see where they stand before it is too late! O, what will be our answer when our blessed Savior bids us come?

"The Road to Heaven"

The road to heaven by Christ was laid
With heavenly truth the rails are laid.
From earth to heaven the line extends
To life eternal where it ends.

I am going home, I am going home,
To die no more, to die no more.

The Bible is the engineer,
It points the way to heaven so clear,
Through tunnels dark and dreary here,
It does the way to glory steer.

Come then poor sinner, now is the time
At any station on the line;
If you repent and turn from sin
The train will stop and take you in.

Then to glory we will go,
With all on board as white as snow,
So ring the bell and start the train
And run it through in Jesus' name.

This is a beautiful song, I think, that came out of Sam Jones' song book. It may put someone to thinking about their soul; so will you please put it in your paper. You helped me to find my dog, which I appreciate so much; he was delighted to get home How much nicer it will be to get some lost soul home, there rejoicing in the presence of angels over sinners coming home.

MAKE MONEY.

Here is an interesting study: Make out a list of all the people you know, and estimate the amount of money each one earns in a year. Total it up. The amount will be surprisingly large. Now, of all those people, only the few who SAVE SOMETHING really MAKE anything at all. Simply earning money isn't making it; what slips through the earner's fingers is finally "made" by somebody else. Don't forget to count yourself in on the list, and if you are not "making" money, begin now to save with us. One dollar will open your bank account.

A Card of Thanks

Editor Banner—Please allow me a small space in your paper to thank my many friends and neighbors for the kindness they showed me during my forty days indoors with fever. I also wish to thank those that were so kind to me in saving my fodder. I am not yet well, but am a great deal better than I have been, and I think by the help of our Great Heavenly Father I will soon be well again.

With many thanks to all, I am yours respectfully,

Bro. Atchison Writes To The Point.

To the Voters of Chilton county:

I appreciate the honor you have conferred upon me by choosing me as the nominee of the Democratic party for county commissioner of district 2, and I pledge you if elected, you shall have no cause to regret it. It is my wish to canvass the county and get acquainted with everybody possible, but sickness of a serious nature compells me to stay close around the sick bed of my wife and all I can do is to write through the Banner a few short letters which I do hope the Editor will publish in full. I don't want to cast any reflection on our present commissioners, but it seems to me they could make some improvements and while they have done some good things there are more needed. If there is any way to help us in the road and bridge business, let us have it besides other things. It is a question of vital importance to have good highways. Listen to our rural mail carriers, let us help them. But I won't say much this time but will write again next week on other subjects. Now, Bro. Crichton, bear with me a little and often and I have been thinking about my subscription—it is the main thing for you and the votes is the main thing for me. Success to the Banner and its readers.

Fatal Accident to Mr. Newt Wilson

On Monday as Mr. Newt Wilson was coupling the engine to the caboose of the work train at Yolande, about thirty-five miles west of Birmingham, he was crushed between the cars, and lingered long enough to send a message to his wife, who was stopping with relatives at Clanton.

The remains of Mr. Wilson were brought to Clanton Tuesday evening and interred in the cemetery, Wednesday morning, Rev. S. U. Turnipseed performing the last sad rites. Mr. Wilson was a popular young man, of a genial disposition and kindly disposed toward all. His sad ending is greatly deplored. A widow and two children survive him, who have the greatest sympathy of their many friends in their sudden bereavement.

Among the mourners were Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Watts, and Mrs. M. A. Watts, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Watts, all of Birmingham; Mr. Lonnie Taylor of Montgomery, and two friends from Birmingham, Messrs. Glaze and Eiland.

In Memoriam.

On Tuesday evening, Sept. 4, the death angel visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Gray and took away their lovely little boy, Elmer, two years of age. He was a charming little boy, but God in His goodness and mercy saw fit to take him away from this world of pain and sorrow. Weep not, dear parents, for he is gone to the home of rest to await your arrival at home.

Forty-seven per cent. of the postoffices in the country show an increase in revenue sufficient to warrant an increased salary for the postmaster, declares the New York World. Either the country is very prosperous or everybody is writing home for money.

A Wilkesbarre preacher threatens to excommunicate ladies of his congregation who try to keep cool and look pretty in peek-a-boo waists. The good dominie, says the Atlanta Constitution, should spend his vacation by the sad sea waves and get used to negligee effects.

The real secret of woman's thriftlessness is that marriage is still made her profession, remarks the Lady's Pictorial. Every mother practically trains her daughter to believe that she may marry well, and every man may be said to be born to support some one's daughter.

The Albany Journal prophesies: There is now the prospect that there will be no more internal or international disturbances among the small republics in Central America, and that their energies, devoted to the activities of peace, will make for progress and prosperity.

The rubber supply of the future will have to expand greatly in order to meet the demands of the motor vehicles, all of which have to roll on that elastic gum or quit business. "Rubber is king" may be a watchword one of these days, plucking the crown away from cotton, which wore it so proudly and so long.

It is hard for us to believe such a story as this, which we find in an exchange: The story is written by one of the starving poor of London. With her husband and five children she lives at Gascoyne Court, twenty minutes' walk from the Bank of England. The seven members of the family live in one room. In a corner of the room is an iron bed, on which is a mattress about two inches thick, covered by a single brown blanket. A stove with the merest suggestion of a fire fills the room with smoke from a foul chimney. The single window of the room is minus several panes, the places of which have been taken by brown paper. The window is hermetically sealed, and the air is sickening. A kitchen table is the only other piece of "furniture" besides the bed. There are no chairs, only soap boxes.

Japan's commercial competitors need feel no surprise at the news that the whole power of the Japanese Government is to be exerted to further the industries and commerce of the empire. This may or many not mean the nationalization of all the industries of the country in the same sense in which the telegraph and the telephone have already been nationalized, and in which the railways are to be under the terms of the railway nationalization and the Seoul-Fusan railway purchase laws of the last session of the Imperial Diet. But it is clear that Japan intends to apply to all the activities of the country, whether it be the development of internal manufactures or in the findings of markets abroad for the products of those manufactures, the same thorough paternal care which she has given to every phase of the national endeavor since the restoration.

We are convinced that society has never shown so high a level of good conduct, intelligence and public spirit as it shows to-day, declares the London Spectator. For one young man who remains at home to go to the devil there are a dozen performing the task of the state under difficult conditions in far countries. For one fashionable lady who lives only for pleasure there are twenty who spend much of their time in serious and intelligent public work. Let any one compare the life of a "smart" woman as he will find it in Pope or Horace Walpole with the life of her sister to-day and he will grant the reality of the change. It is not only more innocent but infinitely more useful. Many women no doubt lose a great deal of money at bridge and get into trouble. But there will always be idle people to gamble, and the bridge of to-day is a small evil compared with the ombre and faro of a hundred years ago, or the ecarte of fifty.

STATE CONVENTION

Democrats Hold Meeting. Convention is Captured By Comer People.

MALLORY AGAIN ELECTED.

J. R. Tyson Is Nominated for Chief Justice and McClellan and Dowdell Named for Associate.

Montgomery.—The Comer faction of the Democratic party in Alabama is in the saddle and proposes to possess itself of all the advantages such a condition carries with it.

This much was fully shown at the meeting of the state convention whenever a movement of the reform forces met general approval.

On a test of strength it was shown that the Birmingham mill man has everything his own way, and the Comer platform went through without difficulty.

The only fight was on the selection of the executive committee and the Comer forces won out in that, providing for the selection of forty-five members by the state as a whole instead of by district delegations.

The chief justice and two associates were nominated without opposition. Those who received the plurality vote were declared the nominees.

Mr. Comer was in fine feather and seemed very happy over the absolute control he has of the situation.

On account of delayed trains the state convention did not assemble until 12 o'clock, at which time Chairman H. S. Mallory rapped for order, and announced that the Democrats of the state of Alabama were in convention assembled.

He stated that the roll of the convention had been made up by the executive committee and that the committee had nominated R. B. Barnes, of Opelika, as temporary chairman; W. W. Brandon, of Tuscaloosa, as reading clerk, and R. E. L. Neil, of Selma, as secretary. Later on C. B. Brown, of Montgomery, and E. Levy, of Opelika.

As soon as he was presented to the convention, Chairman Barnes thanked Chairman Mallory for the honor conferred upon him by the committee, and expressed his appreciation to the convention for the honor. He reviewed the history of the Democratic party in a brief way from the time of its rescue under George S. Houston, thirty years ago, down to the present, and said that in all this time the party had lead the people into great and glorious records, and that nothing had been done for which they might hang their heads in shame.

Committee Nominees.

For Chief Justice—J. R. Tyson.

For Associate Justices—Thomas McClellan and J. R. Dowdell.

Executive Committee.

On motion of F. S. White, H. S. D. Mallory, of Selma, was re-elected chairman of the executive committee. Mr. White presented the following as a new executive committee, all of whom were elected:

State at Large (one from each district)—W. A. Carter, Clarke; Bibb Graves, Montgomery; J. E. Foy, Barbour; T. M. Crompton, Chilton; A. J. Driver, Chambers; W. C. Davis, Walker; T. R. Williams, Franklin; V. O. Bouldin, Jackson; W. D. Nesbitt, Jefferson.

Districts (four in the order named to each district):

First District—J. N. Granade, Washington; C. L. Hibbard, Monroe; Chas. Miller, Marengo; R. T. Ervin, Mobile.

Second District—J. B. Loyd, Wilcox; G. R. Farnham, Conecuh; John Gamble, Pike; A. L. Tyson, Montgomery.

Third District—N. P. Renfro, Leet N. B. Powell, Bullock; W. L. Lee, Houston; H. B. Stegall, Dale.

Fourth District—J. B. Goodwyn, Calhoun; E. N. Turner, Shelby; J. W. O'Den, Talladega; L. E. Jeffries, Dallas.

Fifth District—J. C. Wood, Lowndes; G. S. Livingston, Autauga; Ed Watley, Clay; William Lockey, Tallapoosa.

Sixth District — Amos Horton Greene; Ed DeGraffenreid, Hale; M. T. Orman, Tuscaloosa; J. C. Wilmer, Lamar.

Seventh District—J. B. Brown, Cullman; Hugh White, Cherokee; J. L. Herring, St. Clair; R. A. Mitchell, Etowah.

Eighth District—C. N. Robinson, Lawrence; J. H. Pride, Madison; J. J. Mitchell, Lauderdale; W. R. Walker, Limestone.

Ninth District—E. K. Campbell, Jefferson; B. A. Thompson, Jefferson; L. H. Nunnellee, Bibb; M. C. Allgood, Blount.

Immediatey on the reassembling of the convention by the afternoon session the report of the committee on permanent organization, rules of order and order of business was presented by C. C. Whitson, of Talladega.

This report recommended that the temporary organization be made permanent; that the rules of the last house be adopted except that a motion to postpone should not take precedence of a motion to lay on the table; that the chair should appoint the committee; that all resolutions, platforms, etc., should go to the committee on resolutions without being read.

On order the business, the committee reported the following order: Motion of chief justice of the supreme court; nomination of two associate justices; election of a chairman of the state committee; election by the convention of forty-five members of the executive committee, four from each district and nine from the state at large; report from the committee on resolutions; adjournment.

In making a motion, Mr. Whitson said that it had been agreed that while the members of the executive committee were to be elected by the convention, they had been assured that those members suggested by the districts would be ratified by the convention. Almost immediately Frank S. White, of Birmingham, made the statement that there was some misunderstanding and that he did not know of this agreement. He therefore moved that the report of the committee be re-referred for additional investigation.

The convention in large measure cried out "No! No!" while still larger numbers cried "Yes! Yes!" In a moment the whole crowd was in confusion, men were standing on their feet whooping and hollering, and it looked very much like there was going to be a general row. However, Mr. Jeffries, of the Dallas delegation, got the floor and insisted that the agreement referred to by Mr. Whitson had been entered into in good faith.

Mr. Whitson made the point of order that Mr. Jeffries was out of order in that what took place in the committee room was not for discussion before the convention. Mr. Jeffries vigorously insisted that he was not out of order, and that he had a right to state the matter from a standpoint of personal privilege, and Mr. Jeffries was forced to retire. On suggestions from the audience that such action was unfair, the chair explained that he had no intention of being unfair, but as he understood it, the gentleman was out of order, and it was his duty to so declare it. E. M. Robinson secured the floor and moved that Judge O. Kyle, who was said to have been the bearer of the information concerning the agreement, be allowed to make a statement. Mr. Robinson was ruled out of order on the ground that the question for recommitting the report to the committee still awaited action. Mr. Whitson advanced to the front of the stage and undertook to talk. There were cries of "Sit down," and the chairman pounded his gavel vigorously, producing so much noise that Mr. Whitson was forced to desist.

There were cries of vote and the question of recommitting the report was presented. It was impossible to tell from the response which side had won, and on a demand for the call of the counties, the call was made. The report was a statement to recommit the report of 412 to 202. This was the first clear-cut trial of strength between the Comer and the anti-Comer factions, and Mr. Comer, in the language of a street fair speiler, "ate 'em alive."

After the call to order a second report was brought in by the committee on permanent organization and order of business signed by twelve of the eighteen members, and read by C. C. Whitson, chairman. The signers were O'Connor, Huly, Jordan, Colquitt, Mitchell, Kyle, Jeffries, Whitson, Tillman, Wharley, Smith and Robinson. This report held that the executive committee must be elected by the people of the districts and not by the state as a whole. It was argued by Whitson and Robinson in eloquent speeches.

A minority report was read by J. W. Overton, taking the opposite view, signed by Overton, Merritt, Frazier, Henderson and Holliman. The chair explained that Colquitt and Holliman had been substituted for others on the committee.

Jeffries, of Dallas, and White, of Jefferson, spoke, the latter in defense of the minority report. He said that to let the districts elect the committee meant the turning over of the Second and Fourth to the Louisville and Nashville railroad. E. M. Robinson spoke of the majority report, deprecating the disposition of Captain White to have war to the knife in the Democratic party. On a call of the counties the minority report was adopted on a vote of 284 1-2 to 223 1-2.

On motion of F. S. White the following were appointed a committee on resolutions and platform, two from the districts in the order named:

Platform and Resolutions—B. B. Boone, J. R. Cowan, W. C. Crumpton, H. D. Clayton, H. D. Benton, J. H. Lampkin, L. H. Jeffries, J. T. Heflin, H. D. Gibson, T. E. Knight, R. L. Seale, W. P. Lay, W. S. Foreman, J. N. Thompson, O. Kyle, J. W. Tomlinson and F. S. White.

Mr. White was made chairman. After this committee retired the convention proceeded to nominate candidates for the supreme court bench. S. B. Stern nominated J. R. Tyson for chief justice, and Nesmith, of Birmingham, presented S. D. Weakley. The vote of the primary, 322.56 and 291.44, respectively, was read, and on motion of E. K. Campbell, of Birmingham, the nomination of Tyson was made unanimous.

Coleman, Bilbro and Parks, for associate justices, were withdrawn, and the election of Dowdell and McClellan was made unanimous.

Frank S. White, of Jefferson, presented a list of names for the new executive committee, which was unanimously adopted by the convention.

Influential Citizen Dead.

Covington, Ga.—S. N. Stallings, one of Covington's oldest and most influential citizens, died here Friday night about 10 o'clock at his home. Mr Stallings has always been prominently connected in the upbuilding of Covington. He was confined to his bed only one week before his death. He was 79 years of age, and leaves a wife and three children, viz., Mrs. W. H. Evans, of this city; Mrs. J. H. Chambers and O. P. Stallings, of Jacksonville, Fla. Interment took place here.

Emory College Outlook Good.

Emory College, Oxford Ga.—Preparations are being made here for the opening of college on September 19. President Dickey states that he expects the enrollment this year to go beyond that of any year in the history of the college.

Simpson Is Sworn In.

Florence, Ala.—Hon. R. T. Simpson, Jr., of this city, was sworn in by Judge Joseph H. Nathan as solicitor of the Eleventh judicial circuit and immediately assumed the duties of his office, former Solicitor W. H. Sawtelle leaving for Texas to join his wife, who is an invalid. The news of Mr. Simpson's appointment was conveyed to him in a telegram from the executive office at Montgomery and was received with much satisfaction by his fellow townsmen. Mr. Simpson is a man of much force and ability, and when he intimated that he would endeavor to see that "the punishment fit the crime" in this circuit his hearers took it to mean that for the next four years at least evil-doers would travel a rough road. The term for which Mr. Simpson is appointed is four years, Mr. Sawtelle having already served two years of his six-year term.

Girl Will Be Hanged.

St. Petersburg.—The court-martial which tried Zenaide Konoplianokovo, the girl member of the flying group of terrorists of Penza province, who assassinated General Min August 26, sentenced her to be hanged. She maintained her composure and smiled on hearing the sentence, which is subject to the confirmation of Grand Duke Nicholas, commander of the guards' corps.

The woman, who was represented only by an army captain detailed as her counsel, obstinately refused to rise at the opening of court, and did so only when threatened with the use of force. She declined to plead, saying that she regarded the trial as a mere comedy. The trial lasted scarcely an hour. The only witnesses examined were three officers of the gendarme who were on the platform at Peterhof at the time General Min was assassinated.

Promotions.

Montgomery, Ala.—Wellington M. Owen was appointed a bookkeeper in the state auditor's office. He will succeed Cyrus B. Brown, who has taken the place of chief clerk in the office of the secretary of state.

Mr. Owen is at present shipping clerk for one of the leading wholesale firms in Birmingham. In announcing the appointment Judge Carmichael said Mr. Owen came bearing the highest recommendations as to his efficiency as an office man. He assumed his new duties Monday.

Mr. Owen is a brother of Dr. Thomas M. Owen, of Montgomery.

Fire at Knoxville.

Knoxville, Tenn.—Fire broke out in the top floor of the wholesale grocery house of Borces & Co., on Jackson avenue. Firemen were compelled to floor the building, and it is feared that the large stock is almost totally ruined. If it is, the loss will reach $80,000. Insurance, $50,000.

The Charleston Sails.

Washington, D. C.—The navy department is informed that the cruiser Charleston, with Secretary Root and party on board, sailed from Tocopilla, a small Chilean port about 100 miles north of Valparaiso, for Callao, Peru, where elaborate preparations are being made for their reception.

Woman Struck by Lightning.

Coosada Station, Ala.—A negro woman named Callie Bell Eldre, who lives on the plantation of Mr. A. W. Rucker, about two and a half miles east of this place, was struck by lightning and instantly killed. She was out in the yard.

Newborn, Ga.—S. W. Roberts, of Jasper county, will build a nice residence here at a cost of $2,000 to be completed by January. He comes to Newborn for the purpose of placing his children in Palmyra Institute.

Street Paving at Waycross.

Waycross, Ga.—At the meeting of the council there were several petitions for street paving from property owners. The sale of the city's bonds this month will place $120,000 available for street paving in Waycross, and many residents of the city want their street paved.

Mr. W. S. Smith, of Wetumpka, was in the Capital City yesterday.

Train Wreckers.

Birmingham, Ala.—As a result of the work of train wreckers passenger train No. 36, a fast train on the Southern railway, running between Birmingham, Atlanta and the east, was derailed between Brompton and Cook Springs, about twenty-five miles east of Birmingham.

No. 36 left Birmingham carrying a baggage and mail car, two passenger coaches and two sleepers, the last car on the train being a through sleeper to Washington. Engineer I. W. Nolan was in the cab of the engine which was pulling the train. A short distance beyond Brompton, while running on a straight stretch of track, the train ran into a hand car loaded with cross-ties, which had been placed across the track. The engine left the track and went down the embankment on which the track at that point is laid.

Engineer Nolan was caught under the tank of the engine and instantly killed.

A negro tramp, who was stealing a ride, was also injured to such an extent that he died shortly after the arrival of the relief train.

Every car on the train was derailed with the exception of the last sleeper, but, wonderful to relate, with the exception of the engineer and the negro fireman, who suffered slight injuries to his arms, no one was hurt.

Beyond the jar caused by the collision and the shock to their nerves the passengers escaped without ill results.

The train wreckers appear to be active in their cowardly work in this district, as reports have been received of an attempt to wreck the Frisco train which left here for Memphis. Detailed accounts of the affairs have not yet been received, but it is understood that the engine of the train was ditched. A fish-plate was placed on the track. The coaches held to the track and no one was hurt. A posse with a pack of hounds took up a trail and followed it some distance.

Defies Grand Jury.

Birmingham, Ala.—Sheriff A. W. Burgin defied the grand jury which started to work on Monday last, and without mincing words informed that body that he would not receive orders from it.

The grand jury Thursday addressed a letter to the sheriff informing him that it had information that scrip issued by this grand jury was being purchased in the court house, and he was directed to put a stop to this practice. The sheriff went to the grand jury room and stated emphatically that he would not carry out the orders given, and, in fact, he said that if sixteen citizens of the county assembled at Toadvine and gave him instructions or orders he wouldn't pay any more attention thereto than coming from the grand jury.

He announced that he would accept orders from and carry out instructions from the court that created the grand jury, but the grand jury itself could not give him orders.

The result of the conflict cannot be stated now. W. M. Drennen, former mayor of Birmingham, is foreman of the grand jury, and when seen said that he had no statement to give out, but that results might be looked for. There appears to be politics behind the move and an interesting result is liable.

Fell From Buggy Dead.

Decatur, Ala.—Isom West, an aged citizen of Progress, this county, while on his way to Enon church fell from his buggy. When picked up by a friend it was found that he was dead. Heart disease is supposed to have been the cause of his death. The fall did not seem to have bruised his body in the least. It is believed that he was dead when he fell from the buggy.

Water Works for Tuscaloosa.

Tuscaloosa, Ala.—The population here is delighted over the fact that Tuscaloosa is soon to have a new water works system with all the pure water that the city needs. Bonds are to be sold by the city and a handsome plant erected, which will be operated by the city. Mayor Blair is at the head of the venture and has ordered a census of the city taken. A population of 6,000 is required before the bonds can be floated, and there is not the least doubt but that Tuscaloosa can show up a much larger population than will be necessary to secure the amount needed.

Reservoir Breaks.

Durango, Mex.—The breaking of a great irrigation reservoir on the Santa Catalina Del Alamo plantation killed one man, washed away four houses and caused damage to crops and property which is estimated at $500,000. But for the prompt action of the manager of the plantation, who warned all of the probable danger, the loss of life would have been great, as a large number of laborers are employed on the plantation.

"Papa's working down near the People's ditch. You might ask him."

"You ain't seen no one pass?"

"No; I've been playing here"—directing attention to her violin—"and I've not been out since noon. Say, Jack"—boldly turning her head toward the rocker, at which one of the men was looking—"you've not seen a horse thief, have you?"

"Sound as a church!" she said, merrily. "I guess you needn't trouble him with questions."

"Sorry to hev troubled you, Miss Engledew! Say, boys, he must hev made tracks for Blue Point Falls."

"Just go way down by the People's Ditch and ask papa," said the girl, sauntering easily after them.

"No, I guess not, Miss Engledew; we'll go by Blue Point."

The calvacade clattered over the bridge, and the girl sprang back into the house. She ran to the kitchen to fetch water and some stimulant, then rapidly returned to the side of the wounded and hunted man, who was still insensible; she ripped up the sleeve and revealed a sunburnt, muscular arm, with a bullet wound a little below the shoulder. Greta was capable of a little rough-and-ready surgery; she stopped the flow, bathed and bandaged the wound, put the arm in a sling, and then managed to force some stimulant between the white lips; in ten minutes the man groaned, stirred, sat up, and gazed at her blankly.

"They've gone past here to Blue Point Falls. If you're fit to go, you'd best be off to the Mission."

The man stood up.

"I am very much obliged to you," he said, faintly.

"You've no need to be. Would you like something to eat before you go?"

"No, thanks. I should like some water."

She brought him some, and he drank; then he suddenly turned and said, abruptly:

"You declared that I ought not to be hanged, even if I were a horse thief."

"That is the view I take of it. I don't think you ought to be."

The man stooped and looked steadily into her eyes.

"But I do not wish you to think of me as a thief—I want you to feel convinced that I am honest, and that I am simply the unluckiest man on earth."

Greta gave no answer.

"Do you believe that?"

Greta looked at him—the hazel eyes were very honest.

"Do you?"

"Yes—I do."

"Thank you," said the man, drawing a long breath. "I'll go now—only——"

He paused.

"Well?"

"I haven't heard a violin for ten years. Would you mind finishing 'Che faro?' "

"Why, you must be mad!"

"I assure you I am not—but, if I am, will you humor me?"

"Yes."

She played the air, and at the end the man arose.

"Thank you—I shan't forget that music nor the musician. Good-by!"

"Stop!" said Greta. "Come with me—it's twelve miles to the Mission, and you're too weak to walk them."

She flitted before him to the barn and through the barn to the pasture; presently she returned with a horse, bridled and saddled.

"Here—you can get away on this."

"No—no," said the man, gently. "You'll get a scolding if you give away your father's horses. You shan't be scolded for me."

He clasped the hand that held the bridle as he spoke.

"This is my horse," said Greta, flushing, "and you're welcome. I want you to take him."

Their eyes met; the man mounted silently and stooped.

"Will you tell me your name?"

"Greta—Greta Engledew."

The man stooped lower yet, suddenly flushed, and pulled himself upright in the saddle with a jerk.

"Thanks avail little," he said, in a low voice, "but I shall not forget." He hesitated, then stretched forth the unwounded arm, and with his hand gently drew out the bunch of orange-yellow wild flowers that glowed on the girl's bosom; he thrust them into the breast of the stained cotton jumper, and turned the horse's head. Five minutes later he had vanished in a cloud of dust.

* * * *

Four years had pasced. Greta Engledew sat in a small, dingy apartment in Plymouth. Time had transformed her into a remarkably handsome girl. Her violin rested upon her knee, and she tapped her little foot rather impatiently upon the floor.

"But, mother, dearest," she said, gently, "what else can I do? I do not think you understand, dear, that we are positively penniless!"

The only answer was a wail from the pallid woman, in her shabby widow's weeds, who was Greta's companion.

"We had much better have remained in California after dear father died and the ranch was taken, but I yielded to you in that. See now, dear mother—we have no relations, no friends, no interest. I cannot get employment without references. Mike is too young to be of any help in that direction, but he can be of assistance in the path I have chosen; he can protect me, and he sings very nicely."

"I still think it disgraceful and almost immodest."

The tears welled up in Greta's eyes.

"Oh, mother, do you imagine that I take any pleasure in walking miles along dusty roads in order to play my violin on the parades of summer watering places? But until I did this we were in want—you know we were!"

"The whole thing has been a muddle from beginning to end," responded Mrs. Engledew.

Greta was silent.

"Of course, you will not listen to me," the lady continued; "you will start to-morrow as you propose?"

"We cannot pay the rent and buy food if I do not," replied Greta. "However, I will not oppose you. Refer it to Mike, mother—let him decide."

But Mike, mindful of days of semi-starvation, supported Greta, and on the following day brother and sister started on their tour.

It was a hard life, unfit for a refined and gently-bred girl, but it was a free and healthy outdoor existence, and the weather was beautiful.

For three weeks they tramped happily from place to place, but on the fourth week disaster befell the young musicians.

There is an unwritten law which prevails in California to the effect that wayfarers may halt and refresh themselves with the produce of orchards. Mike, reared in California, in perfect innocence plucked and ate, only to find himself given into custody by an irate farmer, who met Greta's pleadings by roughly telling her that,

"Her was ivery bit as bad as that young limb was. He'd be bound her'd taught the boy to steal; he'd go before his worship, Squire Arden! Ah, he'd be lucky if he got let off with the birch and a fine!"

Poor Greta found some difficulty in getting decent lodging for the night, and would have fared badly had not a rosy-faced young woman consented to receive her.

"Don't you fret about the boy," said this good Samaritan. "What's a few apples! Lor' bless ye, Squire Arden's a very pleasant gentleman! He's only had Combeley Dell a year—since the old squire's death. The old squire was dreadfully bitter against Mr. Miles, till the death of Mr. Francis two years ago made Mr. Miles the heir. Then the old squire made friends with him."

Greta listened with little interest—she was thinking of Mike. The next day she went with a beating heart to see her brother arraigned in court. The justice was a handsome man on the right side of forty—a grave-looking man, closely shaven, and with very fine eyes.

Greta explained tremulously that her brother had meant no harm—he had not understood English customs.

"You are from California?" said the justice, fixing his gaze on her face.

"Yes."

"I think," said the magistrate, slowly, "I shall be justified in dismissing the case. You will be prepared to pay for the apples?"

"Oh — yes — yes — three times over!"

"That," said Mr. Arden, slowly, "will be unnecessary, Miss Engledew. The prisoner is discharged."

Greta thanked him fervently, and was turning away, eager to join Mike.

"Miss Engledew, one moment," said the squire. "I am anxious to speak to you. Do you know my house?"

"Yes."

"My carriage is outside. I will direct you and your brother to be driven there."

Greta, bewildered and exceedingly thankful to be restored to Mike, entered the smart dogcart, and was driven to a beautiful old house on the outskirts of the moor.

They were shown into a room, where a servant brought them luncheon. An hour later the door opened, and their host entered. He advanced and held out his hand.

"You do not remember me, Miss Engledew?"

"I have never met you before, I think, Mr. Arden."

"I thought you did not remember; but a man does not readily forget the woman who has saved his life. Do you remember these?" And with loving care he drew from a big, bulky pocketbook a bunch of faded and withered flowers.

Greta started.

"Will you play me 'Che faro' to-day?" said Arden, softly. "You see, I have the same flowers still, Miss Engledew, and the horse is very happy in our Devon pastures."

Greta turned white, and would have fallen had not Arden caught her.

"Your sister and I are old friends, my boy," he said, as he turned a smiling face to Mike. "I owe her more than she guesses—more than I knew until this moment."

* * * *

Greta Engledew was playing "Che faro" under a cedar tree on the lawn of a pretty cottage where her mother was installed in great comfort.

Miles Arden sat beside her.

"Greta," he said, as the long, wailing notes died away, "three months ago I said that a man does not forget the woman who has saved his life. That was a half truth—will you hear the whole to-day? A man may forget the woman who has saved his life, but not the woman who fills it with a love that will last as long as his life lasts. Greta, I think I loved you even that day, for it was very hard to ride away without taking—what I take now."—New York Weekly.

THE WOOD OF THE FUTURE.

MILK, EGGS AND FLOUR WILL BE MADE, EVENTUALLY, IN FACTORIES.

A Large Portion Will Be Derived by Chemistry From the Constituent Elements, Carbon, Oxygen, Hydrogen and Nitrogen.

Professor Berthelot, of Paris, at a dinner given by the Society of Chemical and Mechanical Industries, he some years ago spoke of the scientific food of the future. According to experiment and investigation, he stated at the present rate of progress in the year 2000 coal, wood, peat, etc., will be displaced as fuel by new and most powerful sources of mechanical energy. He further asserted that a large portion of our food products would be directly manufactured through the advance of synthetic chemistry, from the constituent elements, carbon, oxygen, hydrogen and nitrogen.

Our milk, eggs and flour will eventually be made in factories. Already eggs have been manufactured by artificial means.

Alizarin is a compound manufactured by chemists, by means of which a great agriculaural industry was destoryed. Alizarin is the principle of the madder root, from which were extracted the juices necessary for dyeing cloth and different materials. The madder root was grown to an enormous extent in Persia, India and the Levant. From there is spread to Spain, Holland and the Rhine provinces. It was used very largely in continental Europe, and thirty years ago its annual importation into England was to the amount of 6,500,000. By the new and synthetic process of manufacture alizarin has displaced and supplanted the natural product so that the madder fields in Europe have ceased to exist.

Again, pure indigo, as a product, has been manufactured direct from its elements, and the natural product will soon give up the ghost.

Theine and chaffeine are obtained from different sources, yet as tea and coffee they are chemically identical in construction. Theobromine is the essential principle of cocoa, and cocca has already been reproduced in the laboratory. The pure nicotine of the tobacco has been obtained by Prof. Berthelot through the treatment of salomine, a natural glucoside, with hydrogen. Tobacco is but so much vegetable fibre in which nicotine is largely stored. So, if all signs fail not the tea plants, the coffee shrubs, the tobacco plants and the cocca trees will soon follow the madder root into limbo.

Vanilla, with which ice cream is largely flavored, is the product of the vanilla or tonka bean. Many of our chocolate and confectionery manufactories are now using a system by means of which vanilla can be produced from artificial vanill etaoin ?a chemical process much more cheaply and effectively than by the old system. Consequently natural vanilla is now being driven from the markets. Vanillin in chemical constitution is very nearly allied to the aromatic, distinctive principle of cloves and allspice.

Flower perfumes, colognes, rose water, vegetable odors and scents of medicinal value will soon be chemically manufactured. Meadow-sweet has already been largely compounded and sold.

Again, in the near future, according to scientific authorities, science will develop the fact that nitrogen can be utilized as a motive power to ultimate or quicken the production of wealth.

Profits from productions have been largely realized by concentrating wealth being enabled to take hold of the new and better methods of modern manufacture. According to these modern methods primary products have been obtained free of cost, at least of the cost of market preparation, by being able to utilize what had previously been wasted.

A few years ago petitions to protect the fish and oyster products of our country were sent to the legislative powers in the hope that some remedial or protective low would be passed to relieve the bays and rivers of the sludge acid which was poisoncus to the water animals. Now the sludge acid products alone pay the cost of running the oil refineries.

In the manufacture of bessemer steel and its use in buildings and bridges and railroad beds more wealth has been added to the country in twenty years than the public debt amounted to at the close of the civil war.

A recent inventor claims that he can take two tons of coal, eight hundred and sixty-six pounds of crude oil and make a profit of thirty dollars or so by passing them through his furnace, at the other end having a fuel gas as a by-product equal in heating intensity to five-eighths of the original material and of greater utility to many industrial enterprises.

In the occomplishment of such schemes every industry of the world in which fuel is an important factor will be revolutionized. It means the capture of nitrogen, which makes up more than three fourths of the air, the putting of it to productive uses in the soil for the benefit of man.—From the Arena.

SELF SUPPORTING BLIND MAN.

A New York Society's Splendid Plan For Enabling Them to Help Themselves.

The Society for the Improvement of the Condition of the Blind that sometime ago held a meeting at the Waldorf-Astoria has opened a workshop at 147 East Forty-second street, New York city. There eighteen men are employed in making brooms and caning chairs. The novice is paid two dollars a week while being taught the industry and is then put at piecework, making on the average six dollars weekly. The men thus employed were not able to make anything before given a chance by this society. The shop is in charge of William B. Stout, under the direction of Eben P. Morford, superintendent of the Industrial Home for the Blind in Brooklyn. The Forty-second street shop is kept busy filling the orders secured by a blind canvasser, August Wallaner. The work turned out at this establishment is first class and sold at the prevailing market prices. Hotel and factory proprietors may get the best of service at this establishment.

A rather naive circular, evidently composed by one of the workers in the institution is being sent out. It states that the enterprise is, "under the direction of the New York Association for the Blind. Dr. Lyman Abbot, president; Winifred Holt, secretary, 44 East Seventy-eighth street; Herbert S. Barnes, treasurer, 35 Wall street."

Another quotation from this circular is:

New brooms sweep clean. We manufacture them. You use them. We guarantee them. You test them. We need your patronage. You need our brooms. Send your order by postal and it will receive prompt attention. The object of the shop is to help the blind to help themselves, by giving them an honest, practical way of supporting themselves.

We agree with Helen Keller that: "There is no law on the statute books compelling people to move up closer on the bench of life to make room for a blind brother, but there is a divine law written on the hearts of men constraining them to make a place for him, not only because he is unfortunate, but also because it is his right as a human being to share God's greatest gift, the privilege of man to go forth unto his work."

In addition to the workshop the society has organized a Blindman's Self Improvement Club which meets at Sixty-four Madison avenue. At a meeting last Monday night Audolf Hutchinson, the author and Shakespearian interpreter, was elected the president. The motto of the club is: "Light through work." The object is the moral and intellectual as well as the physical improvement of the members. They relate their experiences and exchange suggestions. The club has honorary members who find at the meeting abundant subject matter for their philanthropic contemplation.

The good done for the blind by this society cannot be over estimated. It has performed the herculean task of getting the public to consider seriously the efforts of the blind to help themselves. It believes that in the idle hands of the able bodied and intelligent blind there is the energy of a Niagara that can be channelled and put to the world's use. To accomplish this subject adequntely will, of course, require a great deal of money, but the achievement is well worth the outlay. It is such achievements that spell out the word "Civilization."

May Solve Sewage Problem.

The development of by-products which in recent years has become the foundation of many industrial successes gives promise of solving the problem of sewage disposal, as it has already done for the problem of garbage destruction.

It is perfectly marvelous the unconcerned manner in which American cities empty their raw sewage into adjacent streams, regardless of the fact that such waters are usually the only available ones for the supply of drinking water to other communities. In an experimental way, here and there in Europe, a tentative effort is being made to apply scientific and economi principles to sewagt disposal.

The principal field of activity is in the purificatin of the sewage by aertion and the bacterial action incident thereto and the utilization of the residue for fertilizing purposes, but the use of heat is also occasionally encountered.

At Bradford, in Yorkshire, a small sewage disposal plant has been installed at a cost of $20,000, in which the sewage slage is distilled. Manual labor is avoided as far as possible by the substitution of mechanical appliances. The process at present only yields a residue suitable for fertilizing purposes, very rich in ammonium sulphate and phosphoric acid, and a grease, but a number of other salable products can be separated and methods of accomplishing their salvage are being devised.—Philadelphia

Character of Immigration.

Nearly 50,000 immigrants have landed at Quebec since the opening of navigation in the first week in May, of whom 90 per cent. were from the United Kingdom. A considerable number of them were brought over by the Salvation Army and the Ottawa Free Press declares that many of these would not have been allowed to land except for the protection of the Salvation Army. It also declares that a percentage of the men and many of the young women are absolutely undesirable." The London Times says that this serious statement appearing in an influential organ of the Canadian government, may lead to Parliamentary inquiries.

Executive Committee of the Southern Cotton Association Reports.

CHEATHAM IS EXONERATED.

Secretary Cleared of Charge of Speculating in the Market—Will Expel Any Member Convicted.

Hot Springs, Ark.—The executive committee of the Southern Cotton Association recommended to its members and cotton growers of the south that no cotton be sold during the present season at less than 10 cents per pound. In a resolution adopted by the committee it is stated that the crop is in a state of deterioration, and for that reason no estimate of the crop was made. The resolution states, however, that the committee is satisfied the crop will not be as large as the current estimate. The placing of the minimum price at 10 cents was in the nature of a victory for the conservative element of the association. In the executive session of the committee the highest price named as a minimum was 12 cents.

At this session of the committee Richard Cheatham, secretary of the association, was exonerated of the charge of dealing in futures while an official of the association. Incorporated in the resolution clearing Cheatham is an expression providing that it shall constitute an offense in the future for any official or member of the executive committee or member of any state committee to deal in futures.

The resolution exonerating Cheatham declares that while all forms of speculation are disapproved of, yet the committee finds that Mr. Cheatham was acting only for other parties, and in view of the fact that there is nothing in the constitution which makes a person incompetent to hold office because he deals in futures, and because of Mr. Cheatham's competency, efficiency and fidelity, and of the fact that we believe the assaults on Cheatham came from the enemies of this association, we dismiss the charges as unworthy of further consideration and denounce all charges made against Mr. Cheatham, except what is hereinbefore stated, as false. That in the future it shall constitute an offense against this association for any officer or member of the executive committee or state officer to in any way deal in futures, and any one violating this shall be expelled from office.

The report which is signed by a committee composed of L. B. Ivin, E. W. Smith and L. E. Love, was adopted by a vote of 11 to 5.

A resolution presented by Walter Clark, of Mississippi, instructed the president of the association to confer with counsel looking into an investigation of the cotton exchanges in the country, and especially the New York cotton exchange, "in order to determine whether or not the systems of business employed in said exchanges, and with especial reference to the New York exchange, are not violative of the federal laws and the laws of the state where located," was adopted.

Statement of Clearing House.

New York.—The statement of the clearing house banks for the week shows that the banks hold $6,577,929 less than the legal reserve requirements. This is a decrease in cash reserve of $9,447,325 as compared with last week. The statement follows:

Loans, $1,051,774,100; increase, $11,965,500.

Deposits, $1,014,214, 100; decrease, $27,843,100.

Circulation, $44,917,800; decrease, $1,120,900.

Legal tenders, $77,634,000; decrease, $4,040,100.

Specie, $169,341,600; decrease, $12,404,000.

Reserve, $246,975,600; decrease, $16,408,100.

Reserve required, $253,553,525; decrease, $6,960,775.

Deficits, $6,577 920; increase, $9,447,325.

Ex. United States deposits deficits, $3,992,850; increase, $9,440,500.

Wheeling, W. Va.—Two persons persons were killed and ten injured in a head-on-collision of two passenger trains at Woodland, Marshall county, twenty-four miles south of here, on the Ohio river division of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad. The trains came together on a bridge over Fish creek.

Washington, D. C.—When the North Atlantic fleet completes its target practice and maneuvers it will be sent south for a winter cruise, prior to which, however, the ships will rendezvous at Hampton Roads for repairs.

New York.—The statement of clearing house banks shows a deficit in the legal reserve required of $6,577,927. This is said to be the largest deficit in the legal reserve required since 1893, when it was necessary to issue bank certificates.

London.—The Unitd States took a further engagement of $2,500,000 in eagles from the Bank of England. In consequence of the steady drain of gold to New York the bank has raised the price 3d to 7 pence 3d.

Chiltion County's New School.

A group of citizens of Thorsby and other parts of the state met and formed a board of trustees which is now incorporated. The purpose of the school is to conduct a preparatory school of high grade but non-sectarian principles. The trustees will work in co-oporation with the common public schools of the county and state in providing educational privileges for those who wish to pursue their studies farther than public school, at a low cost and under christian supervision and instruction.

The town of Thorsby was chosen because of its peculiar advantages, 1st, necessary buildings could be purchased here as a neuclus, 2nd. it is the healthfulest place in the state, 3rd' it is the most centrally located, This school will be the only real high school between Birmingham and Montgomery. The citizens of Chilton county should rise up and support this instidution to secure its permanence. There are many sections which would gladly offer material inducement for the transfer of this school to other parts of the state: but no, Chilton county needs such a school and every intelligent citizen is wise enough to see that it will not be wanting in students. The school is not asking you to support it beyond the meagre tuition which will not pay a fraction of the expenses.

The school is for young men and women of good minds and high aims. It is designed for those who have already conceived a serious purpose in life: for those who desire to secure a useful education Vicious or idle students are not wanted. The school aims to offer the best preparatory school education to every boy and girl in Alabama at a very moderate cost.

The teachers are thoroughly experienced, William J. Lamkie, Ph. B., is a graduate of Brown University Providence, R. I. He has had practical experience in educational work in the eastern part of New York state and ought to make a capable principal; Rev Samuel B. Groves and wife taught last year in Greensburg, Ky. Together with the able body of trustees the school promises well.

THE BOND ISSUE.

Clanton, Ala., Sept. 10, 1906.

Editor Banner—Please allow me space in which to say that the election for the issuance of bonds for the town of Clanton in the sum of Five Thousand Dollars, at five per cent maturing ten years from date of issuance, is a most important one. Clanton is one of the best towns in Alabama, and it has reached its present proportions in spite of all its citizens could do to hinder and retard its growth. Then, with a small amount of public spirit and enterprise, who will say but that in a few years, she will be in the very forefront of our smaller cities? How any man bearing the name of a citizen, could oppose the issuance of the bonds in question, is difficult to understand. A part of the amount named for these bonds will be used to pay a present, urgent indebtedness of the town which was created in the erection of the splendid school building, the pride of the town and the delight of every child that enters it. A part of this indebtedness is to the contractor who built it, the balance, to less than a dozen public spirited men, who went down into their pockets and loaned the hard cash to the town, in order that their children and their neighbors children might be comfortable and healthful while striving to get an education. This debt is not the "debt of the town," as some complacently term it. It is a debt, just and honest, of every citizen of the town. No respectable resident of the town can have any sympathy for the nonsense aired in the Union of last week upon this question. The amount that is paid into the treasury as taxes and license fees, how and to whom and for what purpose the same is paid out, is shown in black white on the books of the clerk of the town. These books are always open, and the inspection of the same, by all persons, is cordially invited by the officers of the town. The editor of the Union further declares that there was a license tax (if the ordinance was properly enforced) of nearly Two Thounsand Dollars collected. This is absolutely false. The truth is, there was less than one-half of Two Thousand Dollar actually collected (and with an "impartial" enforcement of the ordinance too) and the open books show from whom, when, and for what purpose the same were paid out. All of this the individual referred to, could have ascertained, had he had any regard for the truth. or cared the snap of his finger for the financial' educational or moral welfare of the town. He seems to be the only person in the town that is so frantic to be "shown;" the reason that he is not "shown" by the books, is that he did not take the pains to inspect them, or perhaps he is not very greatly interested in them after all, when he remembers that he does not own one foot of real estate in the town or anywhere else that anybody knows of. so no matter what is doue, he could not be hurt.

These bonds are to be sold at their face value, for the law prohibits their sale at a less price. The value of the property back of these bonds is not less than a million dollars and in the event of default of payment (a thing that will never occur) and every property owner in town, should be assessed his pro rata share of the debt, he would certainly not miss the amount and would have gotten, many times over, value received for it. There is not a town in Alabama today (unless it is some dispensary or saloon town) that is doing anything for itself or anybody else, that is not floating its bonds. It is not robbery, theft or graft, it is progress, thrift, upbuilding. It is business.

On Tuesday the 18th day of September, in the good year 1906, let every good citizen in this good town, go to the polls and vote "For Bond Issue" and thereby perform a duty he owes to his town and its highest interest to wit: the payment of its honest debts and the comfort and welfare of his and his neighbors children.

A Citizen.

The Montgomery State Fair.

The preparations being made for the State Fair at Montgomery and scale on which it is planned to carry the event through, have aroused the interest of all Montgomerians. Pres· Vandiver's promise to "have the greatest Fair in Alabama seems likely to be made good. Governor Jelks the other day made a trip to the grounds, and expressed surprise at the magniffcence of the preparations. The main exhibit building, one of the largest ever erected for a similar purpose in the south, is now completed, and in a short time will be thrown open to exhibitors. It is feared it will not hold all the exhibits and that some will have to be placed in smaller buildings.

F. A. GULLEDGE ON COTTON

Verbena, Sept. 11, 1906

Editor Banner—Let us leave off politics this week and talk of our mutual good. To begin with will say that the meeting of the Southern Cotton Association last week at Hot Springs, Ark., and the meeting of the National Farmers' Union at Texarkana, Texas, were of great moment to the South; the Farmers' Union fixing the price of cotton at 11¢, while the Cotton Association fixed it at 10¢, the latter the more conservative, but to my mind the former (the Farmers' Union) based their price of 11¢ nearer in keeping with justice. Remember, everybody, that it has cost more to make this crop than almost any crop on record from many standpoints, mules, horses, labor, land and provisions all being higher than ever known in the history of this country, and while all others are reaping a rich harvest for their labors, why not the Southern cotton farmer have a profit on his? I have it from every quarter except Texas that the crop is very short.

Had a letter from Dr. Gulledge of Benton, La, (near Shreveport) saying boll weevils are eating up the cotton there. This is new territory for them. The paper news is that the Mississippi Delta, the richest and greatest cotton land on the earth is short. Letter from Indian Territory last week, said it had been raining near Fort Smith for two weeks. Capt. Dent of Eufaula said yesterday, Barbour county can't make mnch more than crop. Colonel H. M. Caffey of Lowndes connty said 65 per cent of a last year's crop will be our best, that all the lowlands were flooded last week two feet deep over the open cotton. A man said of Marengo county, we can't make over 65 per cent of a crop. Col. Poole said Wilcox county was no better than Marengo. On train last afternoon I met a drummer who was from all over South Alabama, I asked him of cotton crop; he said rust and shedding awfully, merchants will buy nothing, I am going back home, no chance to sell buggies or anything else until cotton goes above 10¢. Bully, I said. Now, farmers, gather your cotton and keep it till you get the price, and don't act like you did last year, let it go just fast enough to keep the mills in cotton, but absolutely hold it for the price. I have 100 bales of old cotton, and with this am going to hold all I make or is made on my place, or all I buy, and if you Chilton county farmers and others of the South will stand firm, we will not only get 10 but 11¢ or above. What do you all say?

F. A. Gulledge.

An Ounce of Prevention

is worth a pound of cure. There are many poor sufferers, Consumptives who are hopeless of getting well who, if they had taken care of themselves, would now be well. A cough is the foundation of consumption. Ballard's Horehound Syrup will cure that cough. FIFTY CENTS

IN some conditions the gain from the use of Scott's Emulsion is very rapid. For this reason we put up a fifty-cent size, which is enough for an ordinary cough or cold or useful as a trial for babies and children. In other conditions the gain is slower—health cannot be built up in a day. In such cases Scott's Emulsion must be taken as nourishment; a food rather than a medicine. It's a food for tired and weak digestions.

Letter to W. H. Sartor.

Clanton, Ala.

Dear Sir: Now, may be, you can't get the goods; if you can, your fortune is made.

Cotton cloth—they call it muslin in some parts—at about the usual price per yard, but wider, twice as wide as some, and better, wears better, keeps white and whole a surprising time in all sorts of wear.

You could sell that cloth for hundreds of miles; there'd be no limit.

A yard goes further; one buys less yards. Wears longer; one buys less often. It always looks right till well worn-out. No one customer buys so much of it, but think of the number of customers!

May be you can't get it in cloth: but you can in paint: Devoe. Devoe is as if it were wider; a gallon goes further; you buy less gallons; you pay for less gallons; you pay for painting less gallons–as if one paid less for making a garment of that wide cloth and it keeps its fresh look and sheds water till you have forgotten how old it is.

It isn't true in cloth, but it is in paint; the less you pay, the better it is; for the goodness of paint is reckoned by gallons; less gallons, more goodness. Goodness in paint is strength. The stronger a paint, the less gallons it takes for a job and the longer it wears.

Yours truly

HOW LAW'S JAWS GNAW.

Law's a jest—a paradox,
With a grim, rapacious paw;
Law's a goose, and law's a fox—
Yea, a lawless thing is law!
Every status has a flaw
That the lawyers know and use;
Law rests on the ancient saw,
"Heads I win and tails you lose."

Law is always orthodox,
Viewing precedents with awe;
Law's a snake and law's an ox—
Yea, a lawless thing is law.
Law is iron, law is straw—
Works whichever way you choose,
If you are a lawyer—pshaw!
"Heads I win and tails you lose!"

Running water wears out rocks—
So does law—it's greedy claw
Skins you to your very socks—
Yea, a lawless thing is law!
Law, as cooked for us, is raw—
Food of knaves that knaves abuse,
Try it—get the loud guffaw—
"Heads I win and tails you lose!"

L'ENVOI.

Law, thou hast a greedy maw!
Yea, a lawless thing is law.
Thou hast driven me to booze—
"Heads you win and tails I lose!"

—Cleveland Leader.

Who Dealt the Blow?

BY MRS. JENNIE DAVIS BURTON.

To my nephew, Felix St. Alban, I leave the Italian dagger which has been an heirloom in our family and the curse of our race; but, lacking the superstitions of the former St. Albans, I beg to remind him that it has failed to bring the customary evil upon me, its latest possessor. There has not been so much love between us that I need fear its sharp blade will cut the thread of his affection for my ghostly memory.

"My lands and houses, such as are not sold to pay my debts, I leave to my ward, Honoria Dillon, daughter of the woman I once loved and deserted, partly as a recompense for the wrong I did her mother, partly to disappoint my nephew, who naturally expects to step into my shoes, and mostly to surprise the girl, who has no reason to think I will leave her anything.

"To my enemies I leave my undying ill-will; to my friends, who are few, the doubtful benefit of my blessing."

The bitter spirit of old Leonard St. Alban spoke after him in this remarkable will, and something like a shudder ran over the little audience who listened to it, for three months after penning his disbelief of the superstition which attached to the dagger—a superstition that had been crystalized in the shape of a prophecy that every St. Alban owning it must either kill with it or be killed by it—he had been found with its sharp blade driven straight through his heart. Not one person in the room would have taken it as a gift except the legalized recipient, but the spirit of Leonard St. Alban lived over again in the last representative of his race.

He was a thin, sallow man, with restless, burning eyes, and he came forward, smilingly, to receive the souvenir at the hands of the executor. The slender blade was tarnished with a dull crust, and a great ruby set in the hilt glowed red as the blood it had spilled. McDermott, the detective, was watching him as he took the weapon, and obeying a sudden impulse touched him on the shoulder.

"Would you mind leaving it in my hands for the present Mr. St. Alban?"

"Not at all," responded Felix, promptly. "Time enough to fulfill my destiny when you have unraveled the mystery here, sir. Infidelity did not save my uncle, and it may not save me."

"You have been disappointed in your expectations," said the detective smoothly. "There's no harm in saying now that, before the reading of the will, you seemed the only person who could have any motive in the old gentleman's decease."

"It seems so still," returned Felix, composedly. "There was no robbery, and I expected to be his heir."

Both men had spoken in the quietest of tones, and as they stood, with level, meeting glances, it was as if one had given a warning to which the other flashed defiance back, but a third person had caught the low-spoken words. Honoria Dillon came a step nearer, with a reddening gleam breaking through the stony pallor of her face.

"Mr. McDermott, you are mistaken. I knew the disposition Mr. St. Alban intended to make of his property; I acquainted Felix of the fact."

"Honoria!" pleadingly, warningly whispered Felix, and the young detective was conscious of a mental recoil when reason suggested that he should suspect her since that knowledge gave her a motive for the deed.

That evening he examined the dagger in the privacy of the chamber which had been devoted to his use while he chose to remain at St. Alban's. A crust of blood still clung to the blade close up to the hilt. Putting sentiment aside, McDermott doubted whether a woman's hand could have driven it so deep and true. It was gold-handled, with a single ruby set in the end, and as he turned it over he saw that one of the small points which held the stone in place had been wrenched and broken, and caught under the ragged edge was an infinitesimal line which the microscope revealed to be a shred of white silk. It startled him a little, until he reflected that it might have been lodged there at some time preceding the tragedy.

It was still early next morning when McDermott entered the library where he had seen St. Alban precede him, but he was not prepared for the sight of Miss Dillon also, and that indescribable, electric presence in the atmosphere which told him that he had interrupted a stormy scene between them.

"I came to return your dagger," he announced, sententiously.

"And it has told you no tales?" Felix questioned, carelessly.

Miss Dillon shuddered, turned pale, and hastily left them.

"Do you remain at St. Alban's?" asked the detective.

"Certainly; I have just arranged that matter with its mistress. I can't go away under a cloud of suspicion."

McDermott would have given something at that moment to know how he had arranged it. He was at a loss to understand the precise nature of the sentiment which existed between them—more at a loss as the days went on, and he saw Miss Dillon shrink at the casual touch of Felix's hand, or watch him at times with an expression very like horror dilating her great dark eyes.

One morning—the days had worn into weeks, and the late spring had leaped as it were, into the fervid lap of summer—she shrieked as his hound, playing about her, made a snap at her hand. In an instant St. Alban's face had darkened, he caught the dog by the throat, there was a glitter in the sunshine as the dirk, which he had taken a fancy to wear about him, descended, and then the poor creature lay gasping his last breath, and looking with piteous glances into his master's face. Miss Dillon sprung to her feet and walked to his side, and for the moment it seemed as if the woman and the man had changed places, for it was he who blanched at sight of the red life blood spurting out as he withdrew the blade, and she who stood stern and still.

"Give it to me," she demanded, "and pray Heaven that the curse may be removed from you—that this may be the only blood you will ever spill."

He rallied with a laugh. "Are you superstitious, Honoria? Is that the fear which has been troubling you—that I'll fulfill the prediction and save myself by doing the killing? Is that the reason you have been so perverse? I'll give it to you on condition——"

"Hush!" she uttered, sharply, and both became aware that McDermott was standing on the grass plot a dozen feet distant. He entered the parlor by the window as she came in at the door, some strong feeling struggling for expression in his well-schooled face.

"Miss Dillon," he asked, with perfect abruptness, "will you tell me just what relation you bear to Felix St. Alban?"

"There is no reason why I should not," a little flush tinging her clear cheek. "I once promised to marry him, but broke the engagement at Mr. Leonard St. Alban's desire. He was very bitterly opposed to the match."

"Pardon me, I am not satisfied yet. You are bound by no promise? there is nothing now to prevent your renewing it?"

A flash of that passionate spirit, which he had detected in her once or twice, looked at him out of Miss Dillon's eyes.

"That is what he says. He has given me no peace since you have been here, importuning it; but I will never, never marry Felix St. Alban."

"Then I can tell you why I have stayed, since the business which brought me here has dwindled out of my hands. I had a desire to distinguish myself in my profession when I came, but it has been superceded by a more ambitious dream. Honoria, may I tell you what?"

"You may tell me."

What was it stilled the torrent of hot words rushing to his lips. She had laid aside her warm mourning that day for the first, and wore a morning-robe of white alpaca that had a vine of silk embroidery down the front and on the sleeves. It was a spark of something bright caught in a tendril of that embroidery on one of the cuffs, and as she raised her arm, a darker spot underneath revealed by the garnish morning sunlight. Startled by his look, her glance followed where his was fixed, and she exclaimed hastily that she had got a spot of the hound's blood on her dress. But McDermott knew that dull, dark stain had been dried and fixed by time. What was it she had overheard her maid saying to the housekeeper at an earlier hour, as if in excuse of her mistress's white attire?

"She never so much as tried it on but once, on the night of the murder, and it would be a pity to let it get yellow without ever wearing it at all."

Before night he had found means of securing both the dagger and that tiny spark from Miss Dillon's sleeve. It fitted accurately to its place in the broken point of the setting.

"What the deuce am I doing down here, my boy? Well, bringing you some light on this case that seems to have sent your wits wool-gathering. I don't see how you failed to unravel it."

Detective Kranz went deep in his pocket, and McDermott gave him a glance of dismay.

"Here it is, a letter from some respectable old domestic who has had it on her conscience till she got it off in this way. You'd better just call her up and see what she has to say about it."

It was the housekeeper who came, looked at the letter, and fell into a tremble of awe.

"It's witchcraft, so it is. That's my hand, but I never touched pen to paper to write them words; I couldn't abear to do it, me as nussed her when she war a baby. But it's the truth, Mr. McDermott, sir; yes, it is. I did see Miss Honoria go into Mr. St. Alban's room late that night, and I did think it queer; but I didn't feel called on to tell at the inkwest when I warn't asked."

Mr. Kranz was not long in sifting out corroborative evidence, and McDermott neither lifted his hand to aid or stay him. Perhaps he felt the hopelessness of the last. He did ask his brother detective for a night's delay before effecting the arrest. Kranz hesitated, but finally said:

"Well, Mac, all right; but just see that you don't give me any game." He had fathomed already the secret of McDermott's inaction.

The latter went to look for Miss Dillon. She was somewhere in the grounds with Felix St. Alban, her maid told him. Excited voices from a remote spot reached him, and he turned that way.

"Only promise and I won't let them take you, Honoria," in the man's raised, rapid tones.

"Don't you know that you would swing, swing as high as Haman? I swore I'd lose you that way rather than have another man win you from me, but it would be easier to die by the dagger, after all. Why do you shrink away from me, love? It did not hurt Uncle Leonard much, only a moan, and his dying eyes looking up at me. It won't be hard to try the unknown life if we go together? See, I'll show you how it is done!"

A wild shriek of terror from Honoria, and McDermott tore his way through the bushes to find her upon her knees beside St. Alban, who had driven the fatal blade deep in his own breast with his own hand.

"He is mad, mad!" she cried, sobbingly. "He was insane once before."

It was that carefully guarded secret, imparted by the elder St. Alban, which had caused her to break her engagement with Felix. Only McDermot had thought enough in that hour to grasp the clue which had fallen from the dying man's lips, for dying he was, though the end did not come until two days of lingering agony passed, and meantime, in a lucid interval, he made a confession which lifted the threatening cloud from Honora's life.

Bitter feeling had existed between his uncle and himself, and when he had sought an interview to demand the withdrawal of the former's opposition to his suit, it had been denied. He had concealed himself in the house and was making his way to Leonard's chamber, when the housekeeper looked out of her room, and, fancying she heard a voice in the corridor, brought a lamp to the door. Felix avoided her by darting into the nearest apartment, Miss Dillon's dressing-room as it chanced, where the long white robe she had taken off hung over a chair. Finding that the housekeeper had left her door ajar, he wrapped this about him and proceeded deliberately on his way, trusting and with reason to the dim light and the old woman's imperfect vision, to pass undetected.

There had been no premeditation of the deed which followed, but hot words had passed between them, and the dagger lay close to his hand. Afterward, when he found that the obstacle of his uncle's opposition was not at all which interposed between himself and Honoria, when he saw her preference slowly growing for another, who can say whether it were the cunning of insanity or the mere malice of ignoble revenge which prompted him? It had recoiled on himself, and the dagger had once more and for the last time done its fatal work.

"The Force" say they lost a promising member when McDermott married, but even though a brighter prospect had not opened before him, Honoria's husband felt that he could never again take the responsibility of weaving a chain of circumstantial evidence around any being whose life might pay the forfeit.—Good Literature.

Found a Father.

Mrs. Ed. Roop had two turkey hens to die of cholera. They left twenty-three little turkeys that did not know what to do with themselves. In their distress they turned to the old gobbler, who at first treated their advances with scornful indignity. But the kept after him, as he looked more like the real thing than anything else in the neighborhood, and almost tormented the life out of him. Finally his masculine heart melted, for the motherless brood began to droop and grow faint for the lack of sympathy, and he did the handsome by squatting down and hovering them beneath his big wings. Once done it was easy to do it again, and when night came his majesty did not fly up to his lofty perch, but he wandered away to a secluded spot with his gladsome brood and hovered them in the most approved manner. Since then he has been unfailing in his attentions to his adopted family, taking them out each day to the pastures and teaching them how to find the tenderest and best bugs and grasshoppers. And woe be it to any other turkey, male or female, who comes near. He can whip anything in the country.—Warrensburg (Mo.) Star.

The most awful accident in history was the fall of the Roman ampitheatre in the time of Tiberia. Fifty thousand people were crushed.

TALKS WITH OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

DANDELION CLOCKS.

By Annie W. McCullough.

I'm sure the dandelion clocks could tell
The many things we'd like to know so well—
What time of night to catch the elves and fays,
What time to spy the brownies at their plays,
When fairies spread their cobweb wash to dry,
And when to see the fairy queen pass by.

We'd like to know just when the bluebells ring,
So we could quiet be, and listening:
What time the lady-slippers dancing do,
What time the Indian-pipe will bubbles blow,
What time jack-in-the-pulpit clears voice
To preach his sermon all about "Rejoice."

We've watched and listened till the time seemed long,
But, though they ought to know, they told us wrong.
So now we'll ask what they can tell us right:
"What time is father coming home to-night?"
Though they have mocked our other questions so,
This will not matter much—because we know!

—Youth's Companion.

WHAT MRS. WRIGHT BORROWED.

Aunt Mollie was very ill, and the twins had been cautioned to keep as still as little mice for fear of making her worse. They sat forlorn and sad in the big sitting-room with some picture books, but it is very hard to whisper all the time if you are only six years old, even if you do love your auntie and want her to get well. The big tears were just stealing down Dorothy's cheeks when mamma came in and said, "Hurry to the kitchen, dears."

Out in the kitchen sat an old lady with a kind smile, and she took Dorothy and Dean by the hands as she whispered, "I've come over to borrow the twins for the day. They can make as much noise as they please, and it won't hurt anybody."

"Have you got some little boys and girls?" asked Dean.

"No, but I wish I had. I have a nice big dog and a gray cat and parrot, so if you will come you can play with them, though Polly bites once in a while."

"I know it will be dreadful lonesome," whispered Dorothy in mamma's ear. "If I hang my handkerchief on a stick out by the gate, will you come after us?"

Mamma promised, and presently the twins were trudging away through the snow to the big house a few rods away, here Mrs. Wright lived. Two very sober little people took off their wraps in the warm kitchen, but in a few minutes they were as happy as could be with the cat and old Rover.

"Who wants to bake a little pie?" asked Mrs. Wright, and both children were soon supplied with patty and dough to make apple pies for dinner.

After dinner they played games looked at pictures and had a little party on a table that had belonged to Mrs. Wright when she was a little girl. Dorothy forgot all about her signal on the gate-post, and was very much surprised when mamma came after them.

"We have only been here a little while, mamma," said Dean. "Mrs. Wright said we might gather the eggs and do ever so many things if you didn't come after us."

"A little while? You came over at eight o'clock this morning, and now it is four. I am afraid Mrs. Wright is tired of your noise," said mamma.

"Indeed, I'm not," said the kind old lady. "I want to borrow them every day till your sister gets well. Please let them stay for supper, for I have made animal cookies on purpose for my little guests."

And, if you'll believe me, Dorothy's handkerchief never waved on the stick at all. Mrs. Wright cried and the twins cried when Aunt Mollie got well and the children could go home with their mamma. "I would like to borrow them and never bring them back," said Mrs. Wright, but mamma could not spare them.

"We'll come next summer, and let you borrow us again," cried the twins, waving their hands good-bye. "We like to be borrowed."—The Central Presbyterian.

MOTHER'S KNIGHT.

One morning, after the snow had been falling fast all night, the wind came sweeping on at such a lively pace that the light snowflakes whirled up in the air as though they were trying to fly back into the sky again.

"No," said mamma, when she looked out of the window that morning, "Robert cannot go to kindergarten day, but I will tell him a story by and by."

The story was about the knights of old. So she showed him first the picture of "The Knights and the Good Child," and then "The Knights and the Bad Child." Then she told how they wore shining helmets on their heads and carried shining swords at their sides, and how they sat up straight on fine horses and rode far away from home.

When the knights found somebody needing help, down they jumped from their horses and did what they could. Then up again in their saddles they were, riding away to find some one else who needed help.

"I'll be a knight," said Robert, as he hopped on his new hobby-horse that Santa Claus had brought.

"All right," said mamma, "you may be my knight. Dolly Belle may sit at the window to see you go by, for she has been good today.

"At dinner-time she washed her hands and face quite clean, and then sat down quietly and ate a little of everything that was passed to her.

"But Dolly Bess must be put to bed and not see my knight pass by; for, when she sat down to dinner, she said, 'I don't want this, I don't want that, I don't want anything on the table.' Then she cried because her mamma would not cook her a whole new dinner."

"I'll come that way pretty soon," said Robert, as he went te-gallop, te-gallop, te-gallop away.

He rode on until grandma's glasses fell to the floor. They were picked up before grandma could rise from her chair, and te-gallop, te-gallop, te-gallop away.

Baby May stubbed her toe and fell to the floor; but she found herself standing again so soon that she almost forgot to cry, and te-gallop, te-gallop, te-gallop away.

"Meow," said kitty. "Please, door, open a bit and let me out."

The door opened wide, and kitty stepped out on her soft cushioned feet. Then softly the door closed again, and te-gallop, te-gallop, te-gallop away.

Robert rode on and on until mamma said, "Dinner is nearly ready: anyhow it is time that the chairs were coming to the table."

They were not long in taking their places after she spoke. Then Robert washed his hands and his face quite clean, and sat down quietly to eat dinner that day, just as the good child had done.

The next morning the sun came out and "Mother's Knight" went to kindergarten, where he heard again the story of the knights just as mother had told it.—Cora E. Harris in Kindergarten Review.

..POCKETS IN THEIR CHEEKS...

Chipmunks, squirrels and ground squirrels take food in their mouths and with their tongues push it out between the teeth into an elastic pouch (connecting with the mouth), thus extending the cheeks. The pocket gophers have pockets outside the mouth along the front of the cheeks. These pockets extend back under the skin to the shoulders, and are filled and emptied by the aid of the fore feet and claws. They are often stuffed so full of pieces of roots, stems and leaves as to give a very ludicrous appearance to the little animal. Roots and stems are cut into pieces about an inch long and packed lengthwise. Leaves are folded or rolled to fill the smallest space.—From Nature and Science in St. Nicholas.

NO GAME NEW.

Every now and then a boy that I know comes bouncing into my study full of excitement, and says:

"Oh, I know a new game."

"A new one," I say, "are you sure of that?"

"Yes, indeedy, it's a new one, this is the way it goes," and then he shows or tells me of some game like hop-scotch or leap-frog, which is new to him because he has just grown up to it, but which has been played by children in many centuries for hundreds and hundreds of years.—From N. Hudson Moore's "Childen at Play" in St. Nicholas.

A TRIBUTE TO READING.

The president of Hamilton College, in an address to some public school teachers, said in effect that the knowledge he had gained by reading was more valuable than all the rest he possessed, and declared if schools failed to give a love for reading, they failed in the most important part of their duty.—From "Books and Reading" in St. Nicholas.

It is illegal in Germany for physicians to dictate prescriptions to druggists through the telephone. Fatal misunderstandings are likely to result from the practice, therefore the interdictory law is enacted.

As They Understand.

Little Edith, five years old, felt jealous resentment when her elder sister became the wife of an eligible young man and left the parental roof dwell in another city. Some time after the marriage she was taken to visit the bride in her new home, which is a flat in a somewhat crowded residential section. Here she overheard a conversation about an acquaintance of her sister's who had got a divorce. Her infantile mind, grasping the fact that a divorce was something that separated husband and wife, and left the latter free to return to her parents, conceived an idea prompted by grief and anger over the loss of her beloved sister. Suddenly she spoke up:

"Sister Carrie, why don't you get a divorce? Then you could come home again."

"Why, I have no grounds," mildly replied the sister, amazed and thinking of nothing else to say just then.

"That's so," replied the terrible youngster thoughtfully, at the same time looking out of a rear window. "You haven't got any ground at all here; but do you have to have a back yard to get a divorce in?"—Albany Journal.

Dude "Sportsmen."

"A good many things have occurred of late years to depress the true sportsman," observed a true sportsman who has just returned from what are called the wilds for want of a better name. "In the first place, fashionable society, with all that means, has invaded most of the old haunts. You go out in order to get away from the collars and cuffs and the starched and pressed abominations of civilization and find yourself surrounded by dudes in dinner coats. And if you don't conform to the proprieties you have to eat at the third tables and keep off the front porches of the enormous hotels that have sprung up in a night. In the second place, the interest of every other man you meet in the woods or on the lakes is centered in full bags and overflowing creels. They'll chloroform game nowadays to get it and use scoop-nets and snares on trout. Up in the region I 've been visiting nobody was fishing with flies and light rods: A majority of them had tautog tackle and seemed to be proud of it. But the most discouraging feature of the whole business," he added after a moment's pause, "is the incredulity of the home guard. There's been so much senseless and inexcusable exaggeration that a person who sticks to the truth can't get a respectful audience when he lands back in town. I've reached a pass where I won't say a word about my luck and adventures. If I'm asked what I shot or caught, I say 'nothing.' I'd rather do that than be made to feel that nobody is believing the stories I'm telling."—Providence Journal.

Diving For a Wife.

In many of the Greek islands diving for sponges forms a considerable part of the occupation of the inhabitants. The natives make it a trade to gather these, and their income from this source is far from contemptible.

In one of the islands a girl is not permitted to marry until she has brought up a certain number of sponges and given proof of her skill by taking them from a certain depth; but in some of the islands this custom is reversed. The father of a marriageable daughter bestows her on the best diver among her suitors. He who can stay longest in the water and bring up the biggest cargo of sponges marries the maid.—London World.

A gale blowing 80 miles an hour exerts a pressure of nearly 32 pounds to the square inch.

The Age of Lead.

We are wont to speak of this era as the "age of iron," and there is no gainsaying that, industrially speaking, iron is a "precious metal."

Nevertheless, few people realize how useful, if not absolutely necessary, to modern civilization, is that other metal, lead. Soft, yielding, pliable, it is not much like its sister metal, but those distinguishing qualities are what give it such a prominent place in the arts and industries.

Modern plumbing, requiring many turnings and twistings, but withal tight joints, would be almost impossible without lead pipe. The greatest civilizing agent in the world—the printing art—is absolutely dependent on lead. Hand-set type, linotype "slugs," monotype type—all are made of compositions of which lead is the chief component—to say nothing of the bearings in the presses as well as all other kinds of machinery in which "babbitt" metal is used.

Solder is another lead product—what a field of usefulness that one form opens up.

Then there is the most important use of all to which lead is put—paint, that necessary material which keeps our houses looking pretty—inside and out—and preserves them from decay.

How many of us thank metalic lead for the comforts of paint? Yet the best house paint is nothing but metalic lead corroded by acid to a white powder known as "white lead." Of course, there are many imitations of "white lead," some of which are sold as white lead and some which are offered by the name of ready-prepared paint under the familiar pretense that they are "just as good" as white lead. But all good paint is made of the metal, lead, corroded and ground to a fine white powder and mixed with linseed oil.

White lead is also used in the coating of fine oil cloths and for many purposes besides paint.

"Red lead" is another product of metalic lead and is what is known as an oxide of lead, being produced by burning the metal. Red lead is the best paint known to preserve iron, steel or tin, and is used largely in painting metal structures, such as skyscraper skeletons, mills and bridges.

There are many other products of the metal lead, such as litharge, orange mineral, etc., which are essential to many of the arts in which we never imagine that lead would be of the least use.

Verily, we live in an age of lead as well as of iron.

Condemned to Slavery.

Two hundred years ago, when men and women were condemned to death for trivial offences, it was the custom in Scotland to commute the death sentence into perpetual servitude to specified masters—in other words, the condemned person became a slave. It was further ordained that he should wear a metal collar round his neck recording his sentence and punishment.

The society of Scottish Antiquaries owns one of these collars, fished out of the Forth above Alloa. It is of brass, with this inscription: "Alexander Stewart, found guilty of death for theft at Perth, 5th December, 1701, and gifted by the Justiciars as a perpetual servant to Sir John Areskin of Alva."—Collectors' Magazine.

How to Win Her.

Elmer House, who is an authority lays down these rules for lovers:

1—Don't try to create a monopoly. Give the other fellows all the rope they want, but insist on being "it."

2—If you have a keen rival, give him five nights in the week if he wants them, but never take the siding for him. Ask for but little, but insist upon getting it, and if you don't get it, jump the game.

3—Let the girl do most of the chasing. She likes to do it, and will like you all the better if you force her to tag. Also, you will like her better. If she won't chase, there's nothing doing for you, anyway.

4—Don't show jealousy of anybody. Be especially indifferent to the fellow who is giving you the hardest race. Never for a minute assume that anybody can beat you out.

5—Don't be a hypocrite. Don't give up anything for the girl's sake that you wouldn't give up for the sake of your own self-respect.

6—Allow the girl the greatest possible freedom in regard to men friends; don't monopolize her time, and keep an anchor or two to the windward in the form of pleasant, friendly intimacies with other girls. There'll be lots of times when you'll need an anchor.

7—Keep this thought in mind: If you lose you'll get over it. They all do.—Kansas City Journal.

A Secret Standard.

A small boy and his smaller sister of a West Philadelphia family were being interviewed by an admiring visitor. She asked the boy how old he was, but he had an attack of shyness and could not tell. His sister, however, did better, and announced that he was six years old. "Six years old!" exclaimed the visitor. "What a big boy! And how tall are you?" This stumped both the children. The visitor expressed surprise that a six-year-old boy could not tell his height, and even the little sister hung her head in shame. Then the visitor gave it up and talked of other things, but soon the little girl edged around to her and whispered: "You musn't tell mamma," she said, "but Rob is just tall enough to reach the jam on the pantry shelf."—Philadelphia Record.

HAY FEVER

"Having used Peruna for catarrh and hay fever, I can recommend it to all who are suffering with the above diseases. I am happy to be able to say it has helped me wonderfully."

—Mayme E. Smith.

MISS MAYME SMITH,

444 E. Mound Street, Columbus, Ohio.

HAY FEVER is endemic catarrh. It is caused by some irritating substance in the atmosphere during the late summer months. It is generally thought that the pollep of certain weeds and flowers is the cause of it.

Change of locality seems to be the only rational cure. The use of Peruna, however, stimulates the nervous system to resist the effect of the poisonous emanations and sometimes carries the victim through the hay fever season without an attack of the disease.

A large number of people rely upon Peruna for this purpose. Those who do not find it convenient to change their location to avoid Hay Fever would do well to give Peruna a trial. It has proven of priceless value to many people.

Mr. R. H. Walker, Secretary Texas State Pharmaceutical Association, Gonzales, Texas.

Dear Sir: Herewith I beg to hand you certificate of analysis of the Oxidine you submitted a few days since.

I trust this will be duly received and found entirely satisfactory. I have kept you waiting for a little while, but I appreciate the responsibility which you have seen fit to place upon me; for that reason I have taken my time to be certain and accurate about my results.

If I can serve you in the future please advise me. Thanking you, I beg to remain,

Yours very truly,

CERTIFICATE OF ANALYSIS

Of Three Bottles of Oxidine Submitted by R. H. Walker, of Gonzales, Texas, Secretary of the State Pharmaceutical Association.

Houston, Texas, June 27, 1906.

I find this Oxidine to contain absolutely no poisonous or injurious drugs or chemicals and not a trace of Arsenic, Codeine, Morphine, Iodine or Strychnine; nor, in fact, anything that would produce a harmful effect whatever.

Respectfully submitted,
P. S. TILSON, Chemist.

AN UNUSUAL OPPORTUNITY.

Florence Drug Co. Will Pay Back Your Money if Pepsikola Fails to Cure Your Indigestion.

"Never in the history of this store," remarked one of the above druggists to an interested customer, "has there been so great a demand for a new remedy as there is just now for Pepsikola Tablets. Clanton people are coming in every day inquiring if it really is true that we sell Pepsikola with the understanding that it will cure dyspepsia or pay back the money. "Not one person in fifty has asked for their money, and it may surprise you to know that at least a dozen within the last ten days have been in to tell us how much they have been relieved and how glad they are to know at last there is a remedy that really will cure indigestion and dyspepsia." Pepsikola braces up and tones every nerve and fibre, helps digest the food, puts new life into the digestion, improves the appetite, cures coated tongue, dizzy spells and sour stomach.

Try it for ten days, and if you don't see a big improvement step in and tell Florence Drug co., and they will hand back your quarter cheerfully and without argument.

Cured Hay Fever and Summer Cold.

A. J. Nusbaum, Batesville, Indiana, writes: "Last year I suffered for three months with a summer cold so distressing that it interfered with my business. I had many of the symptoms of hay fever, and a doctor's prescription did not reach my case, and I took several medicines which seemed to only aggravate my case. Fortunately I insisted upon having Foley's Honey and Tar in the yellow package, and it quickly cured me. My wife has since used Foley's Honey and Tar with the same success." Upchurch Drug co.

Sour Stomach

No appetite, loss of strength, nervousness, headache, constipation, bad breath, general debility, sour risings, and catarrh of the stomach are all due to indigestion. Kodol cures indigestion. This new discovery represents the natural juices of digestion as they exist in a healthy stomach, combined with the greatest known tonic and reconstructive properties. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure does not only cure indigestion and dyspepsia, but this famous remedy cures all stomach troubles by cleansing, purifying, sweetening and strengthening the mucous membranes lining the stomach.

The Young Heron.

Of a heronry a naturalist says: "It is not, to put it mildly, a savory place. On the island in question nearly every available building site was occupied. The nest is a roughly put together platform of sticks and does not strike one as being at all a safe nursery. Baby herons are, if possible, uglier than the ordinary run of nestlings, their appearance being rendered most grotesque by patches of long hairlike feathers studded over the body. I took down one young bird in order to have a good look at him. While handling him a whole frog, fully two inches in length, dropped out of him, and, judging from the distension of his 'corporation,' there must have been several more inside him! I tried to return the frog to him, and most amusing were the attempts he made to swallow it, but I lacked the skill of his parents and in the end was obliged to cut up the frog and force it piecemeal into his gullet."

Tobacco Leaves.

A scientist writes: "The essential quality for which tobacco is smoked or chewed lies not really in the leaves themselves, but is contained in thousands of hollow knobbed hairs which cover their surface. The vital nicotine is garnered in these pear-like balls, but as it is impossible to shave off these hairs and would be a scarcely commendable achievement if it could be undertaken it becomes necessary to preserve the whole foliage for commercial purposes."

Where the Money Came From.

Batchellor—That's a good cigar you're smoking. Popley—Yes, that's a fine ten-center you gave me. Batchellor—I gave you? I guess not. Popley—Oh, yes, I'm sure it was your money paid for it. The only money I found in our baby's bank this morning was the dime you put in yesterday.—Catholic Standard and Times.

The One Rule.

At a club where card playing was prohibited four members smuggled in a pack and, calling the waiter aside, asked him if he had ever known the rule broken. His reply was, "All the years I have been here I have known every rule broken except one—that of giving of tips." The game proceeded.

What Makes the Trout Shy?

The shyness of the summer trout of the still springhole is due not entirely to his keen eye trained by the quietude of transparent waters. It is to be credited more to his gregariousness. The cool places and deeper pools of the trout stream are apt to be few and hive the fish in schools. If the school number, say, fifty fish it means a hundred watchful eyes and a collective shyness adjusted to that of the most timid fish of the fifty, whose sudden dash to safety gives the warning signal to all. A single nervous trout—and there are usually several—is thus enough to scatter a big school in a flash and baffle the hopes of the angler.—Clarence Deming in Outing Magazine.

Didn't Wait.

"Were you frightened when you arose to make your first speech?" "What should frighten me?" "The audience." "The audience left as soon as my name was announced."

MAKE MONEY.

Here is an interesting study: Make out a list of all the people you know, and estimate the amount of money each one earns in a year. Total it up. The amount will be surprisingly large. Now, of all those people, only the few who SAVE SOMETHING really MAKE anything at all. Simply earning money isn't making it; what slips through the earner's fingers is finally "made" by somebody else. Don't forget to count yourself in on the list, and if you are not "making" money, begin now to save with us. One dollar will open your bank account.

Editor Banner—Please allow me a small space in your paper, I want to say a few words in regard to cotton and its price. I think it is too cheap, I don't think farmers ought to sell for less than ten cents. I heartily endorse what Mr. Gulledge said in last weeks paper about holding our cotton, I think we should be proud of the Farmers Union and Cotton Association though I am not a member of either, but I think we should hold our cotton instead of selling, for if we sell it will help to tare down what they do, I think we should fall in line with the Farmers Union and Cotton Association and help them to bear the burden. It has cost a good price to produce cotton this year, labor is high, provisions and everything else that we use and ten cents is not too much for cotton. Hoping to hear from others I will close.

Dear Editor—Please allow me a small space in your valuable paper to say a few words as I have not heard anything from this place in sometime.

Our Sunday school is moving along nicely. Rev. Robert Jones preached his farewell sermon at this place Sunday to a large congregation, we will miss him a great deal and the children especially, for he was interested in them so much, but we trust he may continue his good work wherever he goes. We have called Rro. Vandiver for the insuing year.

Mr. Frank Foshee and Miss Rosie Broadhead, were pleasant visitors to Mr J. D. Deason Saturday.

On last Saturday night at the home of Rev. J. D. Deason, Mr. Jim Abbott and Miss Nettie Pool were happily married. We wish the young couple much sunshine and happiness.

The wedding of Mr. W. H. Pierson to Miss Lula Moore which occurred in Montgomery Monday evening was one of the happiest events I ever witnessed. The wedding took place at the home of Rev. After the ceremony the entire party retired to the home of the groom, where an elegant repast was served. The writer wishes them a long and happy wedded life.

The opening exercises of this school, were held in the large hall of the school building on Monday, at 10 a.m., and gave evidence to convince the most skeptical that Chilton county has an Educational Institution, with a faculty in charge that is worthy of the confidence and support of every citizen who appreciates the value of a higher intellectual training that our public schools afford. The principal, Prof. Wm. J. Lamkie, and his assistants, Rev. Samuel B. Groves and Mrs. Groves, are University graduates and experienced teachers of a high order, and fully competent to uphold the standard established by the Board of Trustees, namely, a school of high grade and up to date methods that can take the boys and girls as they come from our public schools and prepare them for teachers or for college under christian but not sectarian influences.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

FOR SHERIFF.

I hereby announce myself a candidate for Sheriff of Chilton County, subject to the action of the people at the November election, 1906.

Rolleffe F. Bates.

CLANTON GIN COMPANY.

CLANTON, ALA.

As cotton ginning season is on hand again, we wish to call the attention of the farmers of Chilton county to the excellent equipment of our new ginnery. In erecting the building we spared neither money nor labor to make it the best in the county, and we think it is conceded to be so. In purchasing the machinery, we took advantage of the experience of gin manufacturers, thereby getting the very best machinery: and we feel that, as a result, we have an outfit that is likewise unexcelled in the county. Not claiming, as some of our ungracious competitors have in the past to have a cotton thrash and a score of other things unknown to cotton ginning, but claiming to have a simple system outfit, as most of our ginneries are, although in this outfit claiming to have the best that money can buy, all its parts being heavy and able to stand any strain to which they are subjected in making turnout and sample. We proposh to give as good work as is possible on modern ginning machinery.

Someone with more regard for his own selfish ends than for the truth has circulated the report that we would raise the price of ginning to 40 cents per hundred this season, we emphatically deny this, and will say for the benefit of those who may have believed this report, that when we have raised the price of ginning, be assured our competitors have gone up too.

We are now perfectly ready for work, having ginned several bales, and heartily solicit the patronage of cotton growers, and as some of you perhaps have seen in the past, we stand head in the seed market, and entreat that you give us a call when you have seed to sell.

PETITION GRANTED.

Provisional Concessions Made to Cotton-Carrying Roads on Freight to Be Exported.

Washington.—The interstate commerce commission rendered its decision on the petition of the Southern railway and other carriers operating in territory east of the Mississippi river and south of the Ohio and Potomac rivers for permission to equalize export rates on cotton, cotton seed and its products and lumber, and thereby make changes in their export rates on these commodities without the thirty days' notice required by the new rate law.

The commission holds that carriers may legally issue through bills of lading from the interior point of shipments to a foreign destination which specify the railroad rate to the port of export and the ocean rate from the port of export, even though no joint through rate is published.

The commission orders that "no published rates on cotton shall be advanced except upon thirty days' notice; that from and after this date and until March 1, 1907, carriers may reduce their published export rates on cotton to the various ports of export upon three days' notice, and that until November 4, 1907, carriers may continue to equalize export cotton rates through the various ports by applying the lowest combination through all the ports, thereby making the said rates without publication and filing as required by law, provided that they post in two conspicuous places in the station where cotton is received for shipment notices of the rates so made as soon as they are made and mail copies of the same to the commission, said notices to specify the rate and the time during which the rate will continue in effect.

As to cotton seed and its products and the lumber, the petition is denied.

Plan Big Coal Merger.

Boston.—The Herald says: A coal merger whose scope is said to be the largest in the history of Cape Breton is engaging the attention of New England and English capitalists. The men behind the movement are Henry M. Whitney, of this city; B. F. Pearson, of Halifax, and Graham Fraser. When the merger is effected, which will be in the near future, it is said it will equal, if not surpass, in commercial importance the Dominion Coal Company, which has hitherto dominated the Cape Breton colliery business.

New President of Shoemakers.

Brockton, Mass.—John F. Tobin, for seven years general president of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union in the United States and Canada, has been defeated for re-election by Thomas P. Hickey, business agent of the Brockton Lasters' Union, according to returns received in this city.

Buildings at Jamestown.

Norfolk, Va.—Three states will on Wednesday inaugurate work on the buildings to represent them at the Jamestown exposition here next year. These are Maryland and Missouri, which will break ground, and Virginia, which will have corner-stone laying exercises.

American Officers Return.

Berlin.—The American army officers, including General Barry and General Duvall, who have been attending the German maneuvers, have returned. General Barry said he was charmed with the emperor's courtesy and cordiality, and that the most complete facilities had been given the observers for professional duty.

Three Street Cars Collide.

Seattle, Wash.—Three street cars, one loaded to the guards with passengers, collided in First avenue and more than a dozen passengers and car employes were injured. Three of the passengers are not expected to survive. Bush Hall, manager of the Seattle baseball club, was a passenger and was cut about the head and bruised.

Steam Engineers Adjourn.

Milwaukee.—After a session lasting from early in the afternoon until late at night the International Union of Steam Engineers' convention adjourned sine die. Philadelphia was selected as the place for the next convention.

Prohibition Unconstitutional.

Tuscaloosa.—Judge Brown has issued a decision stating that the prohibition election, which was to be held on September 20, is unconstitutional, and for this reason it has been annulled. For some time a great wave of the prohibition movement has swept the county, but nothing more will be done until certain state laws have been changed.

Hot Winds in Minnesota.

News from Minnesota is that hot winds were shrinking the wheat kernels.

HEAVY FIGHTING

Battle on Ten Miles Southwest of the Cuban Capital.

ANXIOUS FOR INTERVENTION.

President Roosevelt's Letter Received as Welcome News.

Havana.—The American cruiser Des Moines has arrived here. All on board are well.

Heavy fighting is reported near El Cano, ten miles southwest of Havana. No details have yet been received.

Government forces have won a victory over the rebels at a point close to Havana.

General Roriguez, with 400 guardsmen, attacked the rebels under General Del Castilio and Colonels Asbert and Acosta, 1,000 strong, at Wajay, twelve miles south of Havana. After a stubborn fight the rebels were dispersed. Eight of their number were killed and twenty-three wounded. Of the guardsmen one was killed and thirteen were wounded.

General Rodriguez returned to Havana. There is considerable speculation as to why the enemy was not pursued.

Both Sides Claim Victory.

Reneral Rodriguez, with a force of 1,000 men, encountered Generals Castilla and Asbert with forces of about the same number near Wajay. The government claims the insurgents were dispersed, while rebel and other accounts say the government forces were driven back and retreated. General Rodriguez returned to Havana during the night and his troops are encamped a short distance outside the city. The government lost three killed and several wounded. The insurgent loss is unknown.

The letter of President Roosevelt to Senor de Quesada, the Cuban minister, is the great topic of the day among Cubans and foreigners alike. Far from considering his references to American intervention as something to be dreaded, it is almost universally regarded as the most desirable consummation possible of the trouble. There are some persons who do not agree with this view, but they are very rare. All the business men are anxious for intervention, and even the politicians admit that this would be the best outcome.

Information is had to the effect that some of the governmental officials who are closest to President Palma privately welcome the idea and that the President himself desires protection, although not permanent intervention.

The general opinion among Cuban business men is that intervention is the most desirable thing which can be suggested, and ther only fear is that it may be only temporary.

There is a somewhat marked feeling of disappointment among the veterans that intervention is possible or imminent. The veterans, for sentimental reasons, would regret to see Cuba sacrifice her sovereignty in even a small degree. This feeling, however, is offset by the universal desire for a permanent settlement of the trouble and for a government which can be relied on for peace under all circumstances.

Stone Bridges Destroyed.

Havana.—A force of rebels destroyed two stone bridges over a highway near Cabanas.

The commander of the Cespedes, a coast guard vessel, has been arrested for negligence in allowing ammunition for the revolutionists to be landed near Rio Sud.

Held Chancery Court.

Columbiana.—Chancery court was in session here Thursday, Chancellor Whiteside presiding. The docket was light, and was gone through with and the chancellor went on on an afternoon train.

Cotton Case Continued.

Washington.—Hearings by the interstate commerce commission of rates on freight, begun in this city last Wednesday, were continued in Chicago. Five members of the commission, Chairman Knapp and Commissioners Prouty, Clements, Lane and Clark, left Washington for Chicago. On Monday the hearings began in the United States court rooms. It is likely they will continue for several days. The hearings in Chicago will deal not only with the export and import rates on cotton, which were under consideration here this week, but with rates on grain and perhaps on other freight.

Mueller Law Supported.

Chicago.—Judge Windes, in reading his decision upon the constitution of the Mueller law, under which the advocates of municipal ownership of the street railways believe the city can purchase the different companies, declared that the point raised by the opponents of the bill in declaring that the law enables the city to take private franchises without due process of law is not well taken.

Wreck of Ocean Steamer.

Seattle, Wash.—A dispatch from Valdez says:

The steamer Oregon hit the rocks on the beach of Hinchin Brook island at the entrance to Prince William sound. She was trying to find the entrance in the darkness when the headland loomed up, and although she reversed the engines, the vessel struck hard enough to tear the bottom off. The Oregon struck at low tide and later water soon filled the engine room to the second grating. A crew of five men left immediately for Valdez to get assistance.

The revenue cutters Rush and McCullough left to take off the passengers. There was no sea running at the time of the wreck, but the position of the steamer is exposed to the full force of the swell and if the wind rises she is in a precarious position. The wreck occurred seventy miles from Nuchek. The passengers are all safe. The vessel will be a total loss.

Criticism of Wernz.

Berlin.—Count Von Hoensbroech, a member of a Catholic family, has written a letter to the Liepsig Nuesta Nashrichten concerning Father Wernz, the newly elected general of the Jesuits. The count says he was a pupil of Wernz in the early eighties and that the convictions and beliefs of the new general are those of the middle ages. He quotes largely from Father Wernz' "Ins Decrecalion," which was published in 1892, in which the author avers that the state should rest under the jurisdiction of the church.

The comment in Germany on the new general of the Jesuits ridicules the view which is apparently current in France, that the selection of a German as head of the order was influenced by the vatican's relations with France.

Four Drowned.

New York.—Four persons whose names are unknown were drowned from a launch in the lower bay when the launch was overturned in a collision with a scow. Four other members of the party in the launch—three men and a woman—clung to the bottom of the craft until they were rescued and brought to Stapleton, S. I., by the steamer El Paso.

At quarantine station they refused to give their names or to tell those of the persons drowned.

The steamer El Paso took the survivors off the launch while passing west bank in the main ship cannel at 5:30 a. m. The woman was exhausted and in a dangerous condition from cold and exposure and the men declined to talk about the accident in her presence. The survivors were taken ashore at Stapleton for medical treatment. The name of their launch was not disclosed, but a quarantine steamer went down the bay in search of it.

The launch was found to be the Sausage, belonging to W. W. David, of Jamaica, L. I. David was among those rescued. It was said by those who picked up the little boat that it must have been dangerously overloaded. It seemed incredible that eight persons would entrust their lives to such a small boat on a stormy night.

In Idaho Mountains.

Wallace, Idaho.—To avoid taking Steve Adams out of the state, Sheriff Sutherland is traveling overland from Meadows to Stites, a distance of 150 miles, through the roughest part of Idaho. Adams' attorneys challenged the jurisdiction of the officer in going out of the state and stood ready to serve legal process the instant this should be done. Adams was held as a witness in the Steunenberg case and is being brought to Wallace to answer to the charge of murder. The sheriff went through Meadows Thursday, but all trace has since then been lost of the sheriff and his charge.

Stewart for Governor.

Denver, Col.—By disposing of the nomination for governor in the selection of Philip B. tSewart, of Colorado Springs, the naming of Alfred E. Bent for treasurer, and the adoption of a platform, the republican state convention of Philip Stewart, of Colorado work quickly.

Frost.

Ballston, N. Y.—The mercury dropped forty degrees during Friday night and was followed by the first frost of the season here.

Overcome by Flames.

New York.—Ida Peterson, 25 years old, and three children, living on the top floor of a tenement in the rear of No. 80 York street, Jersey City, were overcome by smoke and severely burned in a fire which started from an overturned lamp. Frank Peterson, 5 years old, died in an ambulance on the way to the hospital. Mrs. Peterson and her infant child are expected to die.

Washington.—John G. Barrett American minister to Colombia, has sent a dispatch to the state department announcing his arrival at Guayaquil, after forty-one days and 1,600 miles of travel on muleback over almost inaccessible mountains. He will await the arrival of Secretary of State Root. Mr. Barrett says he regards the region traversed by him as possessing the best undeveloped opportunities of all South America.

SEEDS ADULTERATED

Firms Selling Seeds Made Public by Agricultural Department.

SAMPLES BOUGHT IN MARKET.

Out of 352 Samples of Alfalfa Seed 160 of Them, or Nearly Half, Are Found to Be Adulterated.

Washington.—The department of agriculture has made announcement that a number of additional firms selling adulterated seed had been discovered by the department under the terms of Representative South Trimble's amendment to the agricultural appropriation bill of three years ago.

In carrying out the provisions of the act 352 samples of seed of alfalfa were obtained in the open market. Of these 160, or nearly one-half of the samples, were found to contain seed of the destructive parasatic plant, dodder; nine samples were found to be adulterated with seed of yellow trefoil, and nine samples adulterated with bur clover.

Yellow trefoil is not used to any extent as a forage plant in the United States, but the seed is imported from Europe at about 5 cents a pound for use as an adulterant of red clover and alfalfa seed.

Although bur clover is cultivated in the Gulf states, the seed found mixed with that of alfalfa is not the commercial bur clover seed of this country, but a by-product secured in cleaning South American wool, and is imported from Germany in low-grade alfalfa seed. In accordance with the provisions of Representative Trimble's amendment the secretary makes publi cthe names and addresses of seedsmen who offered for sale the lots found to be adultaerated.

Will Reopen Universities.

St. Petersburg.—At a great "skhodka," or meeting, attended by thousands of students, it was resolved to reopen the universities and begin actual academic work, thus putting an end to the paralysis in the educational system of Russia, which has endured for the last two years.

Gold for Import.

New York.—The National City bank announced that it has engaged $1,775,000 in gold for import from Paris, Sydney and Buenos Ayres. This makes the National City bank's total engagement of gold on the movement this month $18,822,000.

Peace Congress in Session.

Milan—The fifteenth universal peace congress met here with delegates from all parts of the world standing. Those representing America are Benjamin F. Trueblood, secretary of the peace society; Lloyd Chamberlain, of Brockton, Mass.; W. H. Tolman, of New York, and J. E. Dunning, American consul here. Consul Dunning read the following message from President Roosevelt:

"Giving utterance to the aspirations of the American people that the great cause of peace among nations shall prevail and sharing the hopeful desire of my countrymen that the labors of the present international peace conference at Milan will mark a further advance toward realizing the aims of advocates of univeral peace, I congratulate the conference upon its auspicious meeting.

"THEODORE ROOSEVELT."

President Roosevelt's name was loudly cheered.

Five Children Drowned.

Whitehead, N. S.—Five children, aged from 9 to 14, were drowned in a lake at Port Felix, a village near here. The children had spent the day picking blue berries on an island and on their return, their small boat sprang a leak and sank.

Ten Drowned.

Toledo, O.—Six bodies have been recovered and at least four more are being searched for in the Maumee river as a result of the accident, when a handcar plunged through an open draw of the Maumee bridge. The men were track hands of the Wheeling and Lake Erie road, according to the time checks found on the bodies that have been recovered.

Johnson Nominated.

Nashville.—The Sixth district republican congressional convention was held here and nominated J. W. Johnson, of Davidson county, for congress to succeed Hon. John Wesley Gaines.

Badly Scalded.

Florence.—William McKinney, engineer at the Florence ice factory, was dangerously scalded by falling into a tank of boiling water. He was walking beside the condensing tank when his foot slipped and he was precipitated into the boiling water. He was immediately rescued, but not before he had been badly scalded about the arm and shoulder. He will recover.

Riot Among Miners.

Steubenville, O.—Six men and one woman were stabbed and hacked in numerous places in a riot between Polish and Austrian miners in a boarding house at Long Run, where they were drinking. Three of the men will die, Saintly Ragarski, Tom Suiskly and John Rogowski. The other four are seriously wounded. The interior of the house was wrecked and the riot was only stopped by a large posse of constables hastily sworn in. Four of the rioters were lodged in jail.

Mission Goes to Fez.

Tangier, Morocco.—The American mission left here for Fez. Minister Gummere is the head of the embassy and he is accompanied by Commander J. C. Fremont, American naval attache at Paris, and Captain William S Guignard, the military attache. Mr Gummere is the first American minister to visit the court at Fez. It is a significant fact that Raisuli, the bandit chief, sent presents to the Fez camping place, where the embassy will spend the night.

Pleads for Canteen Restoration.

Washington.—Brig.-Gen. Theodore J. Wint, commanding the department of the Missouri, has reported to the war department that in his opinion the canteen should be restored at army posts. He says:

"The demoralizing influence of the resorts surrounding posts cannot be too strongly emphasized, giving rise as it does to a large proportion of the most serious offenses and practically all those with penitentiary confinements, a condition chargeable in a great measure, in the opinion of the judge advocate, to the prohibition placed upon the post exchange."

Four Are Killed.

Chihuahua, Mexico.—In the collapse of the walls of the Hotel Gomez Farias, in this city, four persons were killed and many others injured. The dead have not as yet been identified. The hotel was well known and popular among the poorer class of travelers, and on the night preceding the catastrophe the place sheltered more than forty people. The walls gave way without any warning and at a time when all were asleep.

The dead were taken in charge by the city authorities and the wounded were sent to the Porfirio Diaz hospital, where some of them are in a serious condition and may die.

Workers Will Go on Strike.

Chicago, Ill.—A general strike of all shop employes on the Wabash rialroad system has been ordered to take effect Monday morning at 10 o'clock. The order affects 1,500 skilled mechanics, including machinists, boilermakers and blacksmiths.

James O'Connell, president of the International Association of Machinists, before leaving Chicago for Washington, said that everything possible had been done to avert a strike and that a walkout of all the employes in the repair and mechine departments of the road could not be avoided unless the railroad company should agree to the terms of the men.

Magazine Explodes.

Nashville, Tenn.—The power magazine located four miles north of this city and owned by the Keystone Powder and Manufacturing Company, in which was stored ten thousand pounds of dynamite, exploded. The report was heard at points forty miles from Nashville. Considerable damage was done to the houses in the neighborhood and hundreds of fowls were killed. It is not known whether any person was killed. The loss is placed at $2,500. Incendiarism is suspected. The company is an independent concern.

Explosion at Mill.

Mount Sterling, Ky.—The Riley Waters mill at Mariba, Menifee county, exploded, killing instantly John Hale and Ross Byrd. Three other persons were burned so they will die. The mill was blown to pieces.

Durnovo in Berlin.

Berlin.—M. Durnovo, formerly Russian minister of the interior, is at present in Berlin. He declares his visit is of a strictly private nature.

6 New York Schools Crowded.

New York.—Statistics assembled by the board of education and made public show that there are 82,625 part time public pupils, so crowded are the schools. A total number of 609,778 children are registered in Greater New York, an increase of 20,269 over last year.

Killed on Account of Cow.

Monroe, La.—Because he remarked that he hoped another man's cow would die, Ed Caldwell, a farmer, was stabbed in the heart and almost instantly killed near here by Marshall Johnson, another farmer, who had just purchased the cow in question.

Furnace Will Blow In.

Gadsden.—It was announced that the charcoal furnace of the Quinn Furnace Company in this city would be blown in either Saturday or Sunday, everything being in readiness. The furnace has a capacity of seventy-five tons and has been idle several years Since it has been out of commission the furnace has been completely relined and overhauled.

ALABAMA GL

Items of Interest Gathered They Transpire Over Entire State.

Convict Earnings.

Montgomery.—The receipts of state convict department for month of August, as given out by Shirley Bragg, president of the board of convict inspectors, show during the thirty-one days ending August 31, the prisoners of the added to its revenues the sum of 045.16. This mark, according to Bragg's figures, is a record-breaking being larger than the receipts of one month ever returned. The receipts for the same month last were $60,334.67.

Figures taken from the books of state auditor show that during the cal year from October 1, 1905, to evening of August 31 this year, convict department has turned the coffers of the state $699,576.66. amount, by the evening of Septem 13, had been increased to $706,820. The entire receipts for the fiscal closing September 30, 1905, from department, were $561,077.18.

Fro mthis showing it is estimated that the receipts for the present year will exceed those of last year from $80,000 to $100,000.

Assessment of County.

Montgomery—Tax Assessor has finished the assessment of county for 1906. According to the port there is now $6,843,706 of property in the county. This assessment is final and standing, as both circuit and commissioner's have passed upon all suits filed against the assessor. The assessment for was $6,385,604, showing a gain of 303 for the present year. The gain more remarkable from the fact $171,000 of mortgages are not included in this year's assessments, the preme court having recently declared the mortgage tax unconstitutional.

National Guard Resignation.

Anniston.—The resignation of Paul M. Eichelberger, Company N. G., has been accepted and an election ordered for next Tuesday to fill the vacancy. There seems be no question that First Lieutenant Huey Bullard will be promoted to captaincy, Second Lieutenant Roberts will be made first lieutenant and Sergeant Frank Foberts will second lieutenant. This will the Calhoun Rifles officers who maintain that high standard of lence for which the company is Business Men Boost Fair.

Huntsville.—The monthly meeting the Huntsville chamber of commerce was held and an encouraging was received from T. W. Pratt, man of the railroad committee. Pratt reported that the railroad subscription has almost been made and he expects work to begin new Nashville and Huntsville within the next few weeks. The ber of commerce boosted the Tennessee Valley Fair, which will be here the first week in October and business men are advised to do they can toward advertising the Engineers Resign.

Birmingham.—Practically the corps of engineers at the big plant of the Tennessee Coal, Iron Railroad Company has resigned new men are being put in their It is understood that the old claim that they are being discriminated against and that they dence that they are to be planted by new men brought from other sections of the country.

A big banquet was given at the ence hotel by the old engineering force at the steel plants at There was a change of management at Ensley several weeks ago and resignations of the engineers lieved to be one of the results of change.

Murdered and Robbed.

Gadsden.—News was received of one of the boldest robberies murders ever committed in this tion, at Leath's Gap, on the Sand Mountain, near Mountain and about twelve miles northwest this city.

A MINE ER

All John Carstair's money was made from mines, and was still coming out of mines in a golden stream From "Old John's" point of view this was a very pleasant fact, indeed Mrs. Carstairs was enabled to shine in all the brilliance of New York season and Newport indolence

But Frances, embellished with all that Parisian costumes and the skill of French maids could possibly add to the beauty of her graceful figure, and the witchery of her wavy brown hair and deep brown eyes, had grave doubts as to the unalloyed desirability of this wealth. For there was Dick to be considered.

Dick was not rich; not exactly poor, but certainly not rich And when one is wealthy and beautiful and twenty-one; and when one's mother thinks it is time to consider one's marriage, and so many youths with all the necessary banknotes and bonds have expressed their adoration and been refused; and all this with the result that one's mother is becoming impatient, while Dick is the only one that will suit but is not rich, naturally the problem assumes serious proportions.

Of course Dick was also a doubter. To keep himself at all cheerful he had day dreams of becoming suddenly wealthy and boldly demanding Frances' hand from "Old John." Frances, from a comfortable and becoming position on Dick's shoulder, would agree that such an event "would be perfectly lovely."

"But how are you going to make it happen, Dick, dear?"

Now that was just what Dick didn't know himself.

Then came a time when Mrs. Carstairs' coming softly into Frances' room at night introduced another factor into an already perplexing problem.

"Frances, dear, it is time you were thinking of marrying and having a house of your own."

"I suppose so, mother."

"Now, of course, Frances, I can quite understand all this foolishness and sentiment about Dick Leigh It is all very well for a young girl just out of school, but when a girl comes to your age, Frances, she must look at things sensibly."

Mrs. Carstairs continued: "I will admit Dick is a very fine young man and I have no doubt would make a model husband. But, my dear, he has no money and is never likely to have. You must forget all about this boy-and-girl affair. Several young men of admirable character and with the necessary means to make you happy have spoken to your father, and we expect you to make a choice before long."

"Yes, mother," almost inaudibly from the cushions.

The new developments in the case having been tearfully reported to Dick, that young man was more perplexed than ever, but could offer no advice except to wait for a while. The "waiting" lasted for nearly three months, until Mrs. Carstairs announced to Frances that her hand had been promised to Mr. Wyndham, whose money was also obtained from mines.

"My dear! it is now March, and since Mr. Wyndham as well as your father and I would like you to be married quietly at our country house I have fixed the date for September."

After a short pause she continued "Now, Frances, I have given Dick Leigh to understand that you are engaged to Mr. Wyndham and are to be married in September, and he has, I believe, left the city for the West this morning. I expect, Frances, to hear nothing more about this old love affair. If I do, you will regret it."

She swept out with the full consciousness and pride of victory. But as she departed Frances' maid now came with a letter from Dick. Shorn of endearing epithets and caressing phrases, the letter said that he was off to the West, the land of the mines, and was determined that "a mine will soon be mine, and then you shall be mine again. Always and forever thine. Dick."

Frances spent an hour in reading those portions of the letter which we have omitted, and then plunged into the delights of shopping with her mother, for Dick would find his mine and she might as well prepare for the wedding now, and while her mother shopped with Mr. Wyndham in mind, she could feel it was for Dick.

Such implicit confidence in Dick was flattering, but it was doubtful if such faith in abilities reposed in his own mind. Equipped with prospector's pack and guide, he arrived at the little hotel near Carstairs Mine. He decided to explore the country five miles to the north of "Old John's" mine, and so informed a miner who had struck up an easy Western acquaintance with him.

"Prospect them there hills to the north. Why, by the six-shooter of Moses, yer crazy, pardner."

A MINE EPISODE.

All John Carstair's money was made from mines, and was still coming out of mines in a golden stream. From "Old John's" point of view this was a very pleasant fact, indeed. Mrs. Carstairs was enabled to shine in all the brilliance of New York season and Newport indolence.

"But how are you going to make it happen, Dick, dear?"

Now that was just what Dick didn't know himself.

Then came a time when Mrs. Carstairs' coming softly into Frances' room at night introduced another factor into an already perplexing problem.

"Frances, dear, it is time you were thinking of marrying and having a house of your own."

"I suppose so, mother."

"Now, of course, Frances, I can quite understand all this foolishness and sentiment about Dick Leigh. It is all very well for a young girl just out of school, but when a girl comes to your age, Frances, she must look at things sensibly."

Mrs. Carstairs continued: "I will admit Dick is a very fine young man and I have no doubt would make a model husband. But, my dear, he has no money and is never likely to have. You must forget all about this boy-and-girl affair. Several young men of admirable character and with the necessary means to make you happy have spoken to your father, and we expect you to make a choice before long."

"Yes, mother," almost inaudibly from the cushions.

The new developments in the case having been tearfully reported to Dick, that young man was more perplexed than ever, but could offer no advice except to wait for a while. The "waiting" lasted for nearly three months, until Mrs. Carstairs announced to Frances that her hand had been promised to Mr. Wyndham, whose money was also obtained from mines.

"My dear, it is now March, and since Mr. Wyndham as well as your father and I would like you to be married quietly at our country house I have fixed the date for September."

I expect, Frances, to hear nothing more about this old love affair. If I do, you will regret it."

She swept out with the full consciousness and pride of victory. But as she departed Frances' maid now came with a letter from Dick. Shorn of endearing epithets and caressing phrases, the letter said that he was off to the West, the land of the mines, and was determined that "a mine will soon be mine, and then you shall be mine again. Always and forever thine. Dick."

Frances spent an hour in reading those portions of the letter which we have omitted, and then plunged into the delights of shopping with her mother, for Dick would find his mine and she might as well prepare for the wedding now, and while her mother shopped with Mr. Wyndham in mind, she could feel it was for Dick.

Such implicit confidence in Dick was flattering, but it was doubtful if such faith in abilities reposed in his own mind. Equipped with prospector's pack and guide, he arrived at the little hotel near Carstairs Mine. He decided to explore the country five miles to the north of "Old John's" mine, and so informed a miner who had struck up an easy Western acquaintance with him.

"Prospect them there hills to the north. Why, by the six-shooter of Moses, yer crazy, pardner."

"Why?" demanded the crestfallen Dick.

"There ain't no gold rocks there, naw, not even good buildin' stone. A man's plumb leery-eyed foolish to prospect them hills. Better strike a job workin' in the mines for Old John Carstairs. Yer a chunky looking specimen, pard, and $3 a day's good pay. Come in," with a jerk of his dirty thumb over his shoulder. "Come in, pardner, the drink'll be on me."

It was not long before Dick discovered that he couldn't tell gold ore from a macadam roadway, and decided to take the advice of his hospitable friend with the thirst. Working in the mines, he would learn enough about ores to continue his prospecting trip. Therefore, it came about that Dick Leigh, sometime suitor for the hand of Frances, was wielding the pick in her father's mine.

Dick spent all his idle time wandering about the property adjacent to the Carstairs mine, and discovered one day that it had been staked out as a claim. Bill, the friendly miner with the thirst, hastened to reassure him.

"Don't you worry, pardner, you ain't lost nuthin'. I knows all about that there claim, for I've broken more'n one hammer tinkerin' round them rocks, and by the bronco of 'Bimeelech there's no gold on the top of that claim. Naw, nor for a long trail down into the ground neither. But, pardner, yer a good friend of mine. I likes yer ways, d'ye see, and I'll tell yer what'll be between yerself and me. 'Old John's' mine,'" lowering his voice cautiously, "is likely to have a vein run down underneath that there new claim."

"Well, then," said Dick, "we are too late."

"Naw, nary a bit. 'Taint likely anything will happen for three or four months yet, and they'll get enough of that claim 'fore then."

This conversation occurred in late April, when men were boring in the new claim. There was excitement in the camp, however, when it was rumored that some paying ore had been struck. It was later announced that Wyndham, the mine owner, was talking of buying the property as soon as an official essay of the ore had been made.

These were bitter days for poor Dick. Old Bill would reassure him in his hours of despondency. "That there ore won't assay worth a floor-scrubber's cuss, yer'll see."

Even Bill was nonblussed by the later news, that the ore had assayed remarkably rich and that there was a rush to buy. "I don't see how it happened. That there assayer must be gone luny. I saw some of that ore myself and it ain't worth a quid of chewed baccy."

CHAPTER II.

The great event of the mining season was the collapse of the Wyndham Mining Company. The mine has not proved as rich as the assay had shown. In fact, as old Bill had said, "it warn't worth much more'n good buildin' stone." The bankruptcy of Wyndham provided good "copy" for the New York and Chicago "yellows," which irregularly reached the camp. Dick read to Bill with great inward satisfaction, the news that the engagement of Miss Carstairs and Mr. Wyndham had been broken off by Mrs. Carstairs, on account of Wyndham's disastrous failure.

There came a day when Bill no longer went to the mine, but tossed about in the delirium of a fever. The young doctor told Dick that "it was just drink. Constitution wrecked by liquor. He won't last very long."

"Dick, old pardner, I'm off on the last trail. It's time for me to pull stakes, y' see. Y've been a good pal, Dick alright and I'm sorry to leave yer. But 'fore I go, I'll tell yer to watch the north end of the mine. And in the old box, yer'll find a packet 'dressed to the old mother in Wisconsin." He paused for breath as Dick supported his head and wet his lips with the medicine. "I'll surely send it on to her," said Dick.

"Thanks, pardner, yere were always a good pal. So long—pard—watch the north end. The vein may run——"

The rest of the sentence was lost in a mutter as old Bill crossed the great divide.

Bill's mates in the mine all attended the simple funeral and erected a rough cross at the head of the grave.

The days passed into weeks and Dick worked on in the Carstairs mine. The machinery on the Wyndham property still lay idle, a monument to hasty judgment. The whole story of the failure was now known. The original owners of the claim has followed the assayer's clerk who was carrying samples of ore to the assay office. Finding him asleep, with the ore in a leathern bag under his pillow, they forced the sharpened point of a syringe through the leather and sprayed the samples of ore with chloride of gold.

Toward the end of August Dick was working in the north of the Carstairs mine. He was feeling particularly despondent, and was considering leaving the mine, drawing the few thousand he had left in the bank at Chicago and again going back to the humdrum of a Wall street clerkship. He was wielding his pick almost automatically, scarcely heeding where he struck.

A new deep vein of ore had been laid bare for some minutes before he was aware of the fact. Then he dropped his pick, and groping on hands and knees, he carefully examined the vein. A few more strokes of his pick and he had grasped the situation.

Carefully covering up the vein again, he worked hard for a few minutes breaking up worthless rock with his pick and carrying it over to the new vein. Piling rock paintakingly upon it, he worked away till the bell rang for the end of the eight-hour shift. The cage seemed to Dick to be crawling up to the top, and when it had deposited its load on the surface he hurried to his tent. Dressing himself in the raiment of former days, he hired a "buckboard," and drove off to the town.

"Reckon young Dick must be going to see a gal over to Charville," remarked an astonished spectator.

"Naw, he don't go anything on gals," commented Si, the saloon keeper. "He's more likely goin' over after some books or magerzeens. He's a queer cuss, is Dick."

Dick further astonished the mining community by quitting work at the mine.

"Allers thought yer'd quit," sententiously remarked Si, "yer ain't the pick and shovel sort. But it's been good experience for yer. Better come into the s'loon, I need a new hand and yer'd be husky enough to keep the boys straight."

Dick reported that he needed a rest and change and was going away in a few days.

But it was many days before he left. For the next day the management of the Carstairs mine discovered that their latest and richest vein ran straight through into the abandoned Wyndham property. "Old John" made haste to buy, but was informed that the deeds of the land were in the possession of one Richard Leigh, Esq., of New York, who had bought the abandoned machinery a few days previously for some thousand dollars and had had the deeds of the property thrown in.

"Old John" was wise and as yet scarcely any one had been allowed to hear of the new vein. His agents approached Dick and offered him an extra thousand for the machinery and land. Dick dismissed them with the information that he would speak to Old John himself. That elderly mine owner was much surprised to find that Dick had inside information as to the vein and that Dick was further prepared to begin mining operations himself.

It was about a month after the new mining firm of Carstairs, Leigh & Company has been incorporated that Frances, from her old position on Dick's shoulder, was talking over old times.

"And I said you would find the mine, didn't I, Dick, dear?"

"Of course you did, Frances," answered the man of mines, "mine at last by a mine."—A. J. Thomas, in Canadian Graphic.

At the Stamp Window.

She was dressed in white from head to foot and wore elbow sleeves. Her hat was poised at a dangerously wicked angle, and it was evident she was conscious of the attention she attracted as she walked up to the stamp window, boldly assuming the right of way over others.

"A two-cent stamp, please," she said, sweetly, at the same time placing her quarter on the counter.

The clerk gave her the stamp.

"Won't you kindly attach it to the letter?" she asked.

A shade of annoyance passed over the clerk's face. "We don't generally do this," he said.

"I know," she said sweetly, "but the taste of stamps doesn't agree with me at all. Thanks, awfully. I'll drop it in the box myself."—Milwaukee Sentinel.

THE PULPIT.

A BRILLIANT SUNDAY SERMON BY THE REV. D. H. OVERTON.

Subject: God's Obligation to Man.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—The Rev. Daniel H. Overton, pastor of Greene Avenue Reformed Church, preached Sunday night in the Bushwick Avenue Reformed Church at the union services with His own congregation. The subject was, "God's Obligation to Man." The text was from II. Timothy, 1:9: "Who saved us, and called us with a holy calling, not according to His own purpose and grace, which was given us in Jesus Christ before times eternal, but hath now been manifested by the appearing of our Saviour Jesus Christ." Mr. Overton said:

There is the law of God and there is the gospel of God. Often have I spoken of the law of God, now I would speak of the gospel of law. The law of God may be defined as that which expresses man's obligation to God, and the gospel of God as that which expresses God's obligation to man. The Old Testament and the New Testament unite in this, that they give not only the law of God, but the gospel of God. It is this fact that makes the Hebrew religion and the Christian religion different from all the other religions of the world. Many other religions give directly or indirectly the law of God, but none of them gives the gospel of God as thus defined as the obligation of God to man. The gods of the heathen nations round about the Hebrew nation were of such a nature that they must be appeased and pleased by worship and sacrifice on the part of man or they would torment and crush man. The law of the gods must be obeyed, but only that man might escape the punishment of the gods, and not from any particular love of man for the gods.

It is strange how this heathen conception of the gods has crept into the thought of so many about the true and living God. He, too, in the thought of many, is a God that must be appeased and pleased by worship and sacrifice or He will punish and torment and crush men. Men must obey the laws of God or perish by them. This is, of course, true as far as it goes. "The soul that sinneth, it shall die." Men cannot sin with impunity. Man is responsible to God, and under obligations to Him to keep His law and do His will. We must never forget this, nor get far away from this in our thought of God. But we must not stop with this thought. If we do we will have only a partial view of God—we will have only a heathen god.

And if we have only a partial God or a heathen god, then we shall have only a partial or a heathen religion. If fear is our only motive in religion or worship, then our religion and worship will be for the purpose of escaping the wrath of an angry God, and it will find expression in our attempts to appease and please an angry God by propitiations and atonements, and sacrifices, and servile obedience to His laws. We must rise above fear, and even above the thoughts of future rewards, to love, and to the thought of loving, loyal service, and present rewards in doing something to hasten the coming of God's kingdom upon the earth. We must rise above the obligation of man to God, as expressed by law, and think of the obligation of God to man as expressed by love and the gospel of love. We must think of the gospel of God as well as of the law of God. This will not belittle our respect for the law of God, nor in any way lower our sense of obligation to Him.

Daniel Webster, when asked what was the greatest thought that ever entered his mind, replied, you remember, that it was the thought of man's responsibility to God. That certainly is a great thought, and yet the one I bring you to-day is greater. God's obligation to man is, I believe, the greatest thought that can enter the mind of men.

This thought of God's obligation to man is newer than the thought of man's obligation to God. It may be new to many of you who are here to-day. There are some, I expect, who will deny that God is under any obligation to man whatsoever, and some of you may be among that number, but I believe that the thought is true, even if it is new, and that is why I proclaim it to you to-day.

God's obligation to man is the great gospel of God to man. The gospel is good news, and what better news is there in all the world for man than this—that God, the God of infinite love and Fatherhood, is under obligations to him? Let us see if this is a fact, and if we find it so, let that fact rest in our minds and bless our lives evermore.

First, look at our human relationships for proof of the fact. Children have obligations to their parents, but parents have obligations to their children also. My boys are under obligations to me, but I am under obligations to my boys also. Why? Because I am their father, with a father's heart and a father's interest. I cannot leave them to perish until all my fatherly resources are exhausted for their good. So God, by becoming the Father of the human family, has placed Himself under obligation to the whole human family. The very meaning of the word religion implies this. Religion, true religion, is that which binds a man to God in right relationship. Which is it that binds a man closest to God? Is it man's obligation to God, or is it God's obligation to man? I believe it is the latter. Close as the law may bind man to God, love binds him yet closer.

Now, all true human relationships involve obligations on both sides, and from both parties to the relationship. God has always acknowledged His obligation to man, even if man has not always acknowledged his obligation to God. What is a covenant but an obligation on the part of two or more people? God has made many covenants with individuals and with His chosen people. He made covenants with Abel, Noah, Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Moses, Elijah, Elisha, David and with many others that we might mention. He made covenants with the nation of Israel and of Judah again and again. These covenants implied the obligation of God to man, as well as man's obligation to God, else they would not have been covenants, but simply laws. These covenants are the gospel of the Old Testament and of the Hebrew religion. This gospel of God's obligation to man unites the Old and New Testaments as one book and as the book of one true religion, and the revelation of one great gospel, the gospel of God as a covenant making and a covenant keeping God, loving man and doing all that infinite love can do for man's salvation. Says Dr. Abbott: "The Old Testament is the gospel of the obligation of God to man in the bud; the New Testament is the gospel of God's obligation to man in the flower."

There is no doubt, I think, about the fact of God's obligation to man. It is really the central fact of the Old and New Testament alike. It is the very gospel of God in His great book from beginning to end, if only we interpret that book aright!

But before we boast of that gospel, or pride ourselves that God is under obligations to us, let us seek to know the ground of that obligation. Let us know that we have not put God under any obligation to us by anything we have done. "Not according to our works, but according to His own purpose and grace," Paul says in the text. It is therefore God's own purpose and active love, for grace is love in action, that has put God under obligation to man. "God so loved"—and there it all began—this gospel of God's obligation to man. God so loved that He voluntarily and out of His great love, and for no other reason, placed Himself under obligation to the whole world of humanity, so that whosoever in that world would believe in that love, and would let God fulfil His obligation toward him, should not perish, but be saved. This is John iii:16, in the light of our text and in the words of our theme. This is the gospel that Jesus Christ came to proclaim and to live. He came to tell every man that God so loves him that He is willing to place Himself under obligations to him. It was for this reason that God gave us His greatest gift—the gift of Himself in Jesus Christ—as much of Himself and even more than man would or could comprehend and believe in. It is because He is the great loving universal Father that He has placed Himself under obligation to every child of His, to every man and woman in all the world.

Be this our boast then: not that we have put God under any obligation to us by anything that we have done, but that God out of His infinite love for us and according to His own loving and eternal purpose has placed Himself under obligations to us. This purpose was given us in Jesus Christ, "before times eternal," Paul says. That is, it was born in God's eternal Father-Heart before time came to be reckoned or counted. God ever a Father must ever have had a Son, else He would not have been ever a Father, and in that love for that eternal Son we see God's purpose for all His sons in all the world. And this purpose has now been manifested to the world and to us by the appearing of our Saviour, Jesus Christ. That is, Christ came to show God's, the Father's, eternal purpose to the world. He came to tell the world that He has been willing to place Himself under obligation to every one in all the world. This is the gospel that Christ came to proclaim. This is the gospel that shines forth in all that He said or did.

And now we are ready to see what this obligation of God to us and His eternal purpose, has led Him to do for us, or the result of His obligation to man. What is the issue of this gospel of God's obligation? What has it led God to do for us? It has led and it will lead God to do everything that infinite love can do or that we will let Him do for our salvation. The first part of the text gives this answer: "Who saved us, and called us with a holy calling." He has called us to salvation and to holiness through faith in Him, as the loving Father, and in His Son, as the revealer and example of the Father's love and character. This is the covenant that God waits and wants to make with every one of us. It is not His will that any should perish, but that all should receive the light of life, and live the life that is abundant and eternal. It was God's obligation to us, born of His love for us, that led Him to send Christ to suffer and die for us, in order that He might become our Saviour and lead us to salvation and to holiness. It was this that led God to do the very best that He out of His infinite power and love could do for us and for all of His children of the earth. Ah, yes, we may be sure of this—God has kept, and God will ever keep, His part of the covenant that He has made with us and for us. He has fulfilled and He ever will fulfil, His full obligation to us.

This is the gospel of the Old and New Testament that I proclaim to you to-day. This is the gospel of Jesus Christ—the gospel of God's obligation to man born of God's great love for man.

The Sinfulness of Sin.

Unhappily that "secularization of morals," which the late Herbert Spencer proclaimed to be imperatively necessary, has already made some progress. The tendency to minimize sin—by characterizing it, not as a personal crime against God, but rather as "indiscretion," a "disease," or as the inevitable result of "heredity" in irresponsible persons—is developing in quarters where there ought to be clearer and more accurate views of life. There can be no successful sin." It may be hidden from man, and only from man, but in the divine order its inevitable result is death (Rom. 6:23), and no preacher can be true to his Master who fails to declare that immutable truth.—London Christian.

How to Understand.

Obey Jesus with cordial loyalty and you will understand Jesus. Not by studying Him, but by doing His will, shall you learn how divine He is. Obedience completes itself in understanding.—Phillips Brooks.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR SEPTEMBER 30.

Review of the Quarter—Read Matt. xxii., 34-46—Golden Text: Luke iv., 18—Topic: Christ's Last Messages—Summaries.

Lesson I. Topic: Lessons from a "child" text. Place: Capernaum. Soon after the transfiguration; Jesus in Capernaum for the last time; a question asked: Who is the greatest? A little child called: to enter the kingdom of heaven it is necessary to "become as little children;" those who offend a little one will suffer punishment.

II. Topic: Forgiving one another. Place: Capernaum. Peter came to Christ; asked how often he should forgive; Jesus said until seventy times seven times; Jesus spoke a parable to fully illustrate the duty of the Christian.

III. Topic: Love to our fellow men. Place: In Perea. A lawyer (or scribe) asked Jesus what he must do to inherit eternal life. Jesus asked him how he read the law; the lawyer replied, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart." Jesus told him he had answered right, the lawyer said, "Who is my neighbor?" Jesus spoke a parable, a man traveling from Jerusalem to Jericho fell among thieves; a priest passed by on the other side; a Levite did the same; a Samaritan helped the man, "Go, and do thou likewise."

IV. Topic: Jesus teaching how to pray. Place: In Perea. When Jesus had ceased praying in a certain place one of the disciples asked Him to teach them to pray; Jesus gave them a form of prayer.

V. Topic: The believer's social duties. Place: In Perea. At the house of a chief Pharisee, Jesus sees a man with the dropsy, it is the Sabbath day; Jesus asked them whether it was lawful to heal the man on that day; they refused to answer; Jesus healed the man; He then asked them if they would not take an animal out of a pit on the Sabbath day, call the poor and not the rich neighbors.

VI. Topic: Blessings and conditions of salvation. Place: In Perea. Jesus is still at the Pharisee's house; one at the table thought it would be a great privilege to sit at a banquet in the Messiah's kingdom; Jesus spoke a parable to show that although the blessings of the gospel would be offered them, yet they would refuse the invitation.

VII. Topic: God's great love for the sinner. Place: In Perea. The parable of the two sons; the younger left home after receiving his portion of the inheritance; went into a far country and wasted his substance in riotous living; decided to return and confess his folly to his father; he did so and the father received him joyfully and made a feast; the elder brother came from the fields and was angry; the father entreated him.

VIII. Topic: Characteristics of effective prayer. Place: In Perea. A parable on prayer; a widow asked a judge to avenge her; the judge refused; the widow urged him; the judge finally did as he was requested; the Lord will avenge those who call upon Him; another parable: the Pharisee's prayer; the publican's prayer.

IX. Topic: Great facts connected with salvation. Place: In Perea. A rich young ruler came running to Jesus and asked what he must do to inherit eternal life; Jesus said, Keep the commandments. He asked, Which? Jesus mentioned several; the young man had kept these; he asked what he still lacked; sell what you have and give to the poor; went away sorrowful; the rich are saved with great difficulty.

X. Topic: Finding salvation. Place: Jericho. A great number of people; blind Bartimaeus by the highway, begging; hears it is Jesus passing; calls loudly for mercy; is rebuked by those standing near; cries louder; his cries reach Jesus; He stops; commands Bartimaeus to be called; Bartimaeus went; made known his request; Jesus heals him; his faith has made him whole; he follows Christ. Zacchaeus was a rich publican who sought to see Jesus; was small of stature and climbed into a tree; Jesus saw him and told him to come down; Jesus went to his house; the Jews murmured; Zacchaeus truly repented; gave half of his goods to the poor; confessed his sins; restored fourfold; Jesus forgave and saved him; the Son of Man came to save the lost.

XI. Topic: The kingship of Jesus. Place: In and near Jerusalem. Jesus and His disciples journeying toward Jerusalem; two disciples sent to Bethphage to secure a colt; the prophecy of Zech. 9:9 is fulfilled; a great multitude shout "Hosanna!" and spread garments and strew branches in the way; Jesus cleanses the temple; the chief Pharisees and scribes are sore displeased.

XII. Topic: Christianity's conflict with the world. Place: In Jerusalem, in the temple courts. The Pharisees and Herodians try to catch Christ in His words; He answers them wisely; they marveled at Him; they ask whether it is lawful to pay tribute to Caesar; He says, "Render to Caesar the things that are Caesar's, and to God the things that are God's;" the Sadducees come to Him and ask Him a question dealing with our relation after death; seven brothers, in turn, married the same woman; in the resurrection whose wife will she be? Jesus said that when they rise from the dead they neither marry nor are given in marriage.

An Ingenious Accusation.

"The favorite horse of the Chinese Emperor Tai," said a Chinese statesman, "died through negligence on the part of the royal master of the horse. The emperor was so enraged at this that he drew his sword and would have run the careless functionary through the body.

"But the learned mandarin, Yen-tse, struck up the emperor's sword, saying:

"'Sire, this man has not yet been formally accused of any crime. He deserves to die, but his accusation should come first. It is the law.'

"'Well,' said the emperor, 'tell me what he has done.'

"'Listen, you rogue,' said the mandarin, turning to the trembling master of the horse—'listen to a catalogue of your heinous offenses. In the first place, you have allowed a horse to perish that his majesty had intrusted to your care. In the second place, it is on your account that the emperor became so exasperated that he was actually on the point of disgracing himself in all his people's eyes by killing a man for the sake of a horse.'

"'Enough,' said the emperor, appreciating the rebuke. 'Let him go. He is pardoned.'"

Paying Him Back.

"Will you please pull the bell?" said an elderly woman in a car to a young college looking fellow hanging to a strap in front of her.

"No, madam, but I shall be glad to pull the cord which rings the bell," he answered.

"Oh, never mind," she said. "The cord is connected with two bells—front and back—and you might stop the wrong end of the car."

PAIN'S FIREWORKS AT THE MONTGOMERY FAIR

The coming production of "The last days of Pompeii," which will be shown during the State Fair in Montgomery, October 22 to 27, is under the personal direction and control of Henry J. Pain, the noted New York and London pyrotechnist, and his general manager, H. B. Thearle, which should be a guarantee of the merit of the exhibition, and should settle any impression that the use of Pains reputation and name has been acquired in this instance by any other than the real Pain. Mr. Pain is known on two continents as the "King of pyro technists," and in his long career has never allowed his name to be used by any production not controlled by him.

"Pompeii" comes to Montgomery direct from the great Pain amphitheatre at fashionable Manhattan Beach, New York, and both Mr. Pain and Mr. Thearle give assurance that the production will be the same as that given in that place.

In connection with, and as an important feature of the fete day festivities in the "Pompeii" spectacle, Mr. Pain has introduced a marvelous fire ballet of amazing grandeur and novelty. Eight beautitul girls costumed in hundreds of yards of flaming silk appear enveloped in a furnace of flame and go through the wonderful Pompeiian dances, which were a part of the ceremonies of the fete days in acient Rome. This fire ballet is one of the greatest achievements of the "Pyrotechnic King," and causes a decided sensation everywhere. The costuming of the "Last days of Pompeii," is the finest money can produce, and the new "Pompeii" is gorgeous beyond description.

The following program has been arranged for the Fair week, October 22—27.

Monday—Southern Cotton Association and Farmers Union Day. Addresses by Hon. Harvie Jordan, Hon. W. M. Morris and Hon. E. D. Smith.

Tuesday—Editors Day.

Wednesday—Farmers Day. Address by Hon. Samuel Wilson Secretary of Agriculture.

Thursday—Railroad Day. Address by Mr. Samuel Spencer, President Southern Railway.

Friday—Immigration Day. Address by Hon. Frank P. Sargent, U. S. Commissioner of Immigration.

Saturday—Negro Day. Address by Dr. Booker T. Washington.

THE PRICE OF COTTON.
How Growers May Unite to Get a Fair Price for the Staple.

First—Assuming that 100 represents a perfect yield of cotton in quantity and quality per acre, what figure will represent your judgement as to the yield and quality of this year's cotton crop in your section?

Second—What price should the grower receive for his cotton ginned and delivered at his nearest shipping points?

Third—What proportion of the cotton planters from your vicinity are in debt and obliged to sell their cotton for whatever the early market may offer?

Fourth—What assurance will the other planters give that they will hold their cotton until they can get the farmer's price for it?

Fifth—Describe any organized effort now under way in your county whereby farmers hope to have some say about marketing their cotton and some influence in fixing its price, getting advances on it, construction of local farmer's warehouses etc.

Let every planter in the south answer the above by number as briefly or fully as he will. Do this at once so as to promote concerted action. Sign your name, postoffice, county and state; and mention the number of acres you raise of cotton yourself. Address your reply to Editor Farm and Home, New Orleans, La.

Order to Hear Guardian's Petition to Sell Lands.

The State of Alabama, Chilton County.
Probate Court, September 19, 1906.

On this, the 19th day of September, 1906, came Thomas A. Curry, as Guardian of said minors, and filed his petition in writing and under oath, praying for an order and proceeding to sell certain lands described in said petition, property of the said minors, for reinvestment in other lands or property.

It is ordered that said petition be set down for hearing on the 8th day of October, 1906, and that notice of said petition, together with the said day for hearing the same, and the nature thereof, be given by publication for three successive weeks in The Banner, a newspaper published in this county, calling upon all persons interested to appear and contest the same, if they think proper.

It is further ordered that said minors also have notice of this proceeding and of the day set for hearing the same, by citation to be personally served on them ten days before said day appointed for said hearing.

It is further ordered that A. C. Smith, who is, in the opinion of the Court, a suitable and competent person therefor, and who is not of kin or of counsel to the petitioner, be and he is hereby appointed Guardian ad litem to represent and protect the interests of said minors in the matter of said proceeding, and that he have notice of his said appointment.

L. H. REYNOLDS, Judge of Probate.

Wilkinson certainly is a worker for God We had some welcome visitors from Clanton, Judge Reynolds and wife, and also some welcome visitors from Birmingham attended the meeting. Mr. R. W. Taylor and Miss Jessie Baker, and some from Salem, Providence and Concord. and to our surprise Mr. Alfred Popwell appeared at our meeting one day for which we were proud of his presence, so I will close with best wishes to the Banner and its many readers

TERESA MIMS.

Lawley.

Dear Editor—It has been some time since I have seen anything from this place.

I would like to ask you a few questions about what kind of persons do we need for county officers. Now, in the first place, do we need a gentleman, a man that is upright and honest, a man that will touch not, handle not, the unclean things of this world, is he the one we need or do we need a man that will go out to the house of God with his buggy full of beer and whiskey and envite his friends to partake with him, and shall he also visit our baptisings tempting the christian people to partake of his devil? Is he the one that we need, and do you think that he would make us a good judge or sheriff? Do we want a man that will get down dog drunk and wallow like a hog and get out and gamble, curse and swear? Just drink up the countys money and not give half the value received, is he the one we want?

Now, I wish to state right here that we had a man with us at our baptising and he was seen by a crowd of small boys drawing a bottle of beer or whiskey from his buggy, carrying his friends off to one side and inviting them drink with him. And while they were off, the boys looked in his buggy and found eight bottles more in there. Now, was this setting a good example before those boys? Do think it would be a good idea to vote for him, and if he has such conduct now, don't you think that he will have worse if elected?

Now, I have never seen this with my own eyes, but my father said he did offer him a drink while in his company and two of my brothers saw the bottles of beer in his buggy at the baptising.

Respectfully,
ARTHUR D. LATHAM.

Letter to B. E. Jones & Co.
Clanton, Ala.

Dear Sirs: If you could get the exclusive sale of a sweeter sugar for five miles round—½lb as sweet as a pound of usual sugar, and cost no more—you'd jump at it, wouldn't you?

There wouldn't be 100lb of any other sugar sold in a year in your town; you'd gobble the trade; and it wouldn't hurt your whole business.

Devoe is like that among paints; it is twice as sweet as some, it is sweeter than any; not one exception; one gallon is two or one-and-a-half or one and-three quarters.

Better than that; paint has to be painted; that cost $2 to $4 a gallon. A gallon saved is $2 to $4 saved in labor, besides the paint.

Even that isn't all. A gallon Devoe put-on wears as long as two gallons put on at the cost of $2 to $4 a gallon and two gallons more put-on at $2 to $4 a gallon. Count all that. The paint that wears donble costs less by 3 gallons of paint and 3 gallons of painting; that's about $15 a gallon for those superfluous gallons.

That's as good as a double sweet sugar, isn't it?

Yours truly

A REMARKABLE SKIN BEAUTIFIER.

Health, Beauty and a Clear, Complexion Through Laxakola Tonic Tablets.

"In all the years we have been in business," say Florence Drug co., "we do not recall ever selling anything that has aroused so much interest among our lady customers, and not a day passes but we hear of some one greatly benifitted through using Laxakola Tonic Tablets," Clanton ladies who have been troubled with pimples, blotches, moth spots and other skin affections, now pride themselves on the fresh, healthy complexion obtained through using this mild tonic laxative.

"And it is not surprising. They are different from anything you ever heard of." Laxative Tonic Tablets are a perfect combination of dandelion, cascarin and other laxative remedies known, to have a peculiar and beneficial influence on the skin. They open the pores, enrich the blood, stimulate the liver, freshen the skin, and cure chronic constipation by toning up the intestines and encouraging the natural action of the bowels. Once tried they inspire perfect confidence and Florence Drug Co. return your quarter if you are disapointed.

HERBINE

The Popular Liver Medicine Will Keep You Well

A GUARANTEED CURE for all diseases produced by TORPID LIVER and IMPURE BLOOD. Do not fill your system with Arsenic, Calomel and Quinine. They act as rank poisons which vitiate the blood, debilitate the system, and leave a trail of bad symptoms which require years to obliterate. HERBINE is purely vegetable and contains no mineral or narcotic poisons, is absolutely harmless and is the simple remedy of nature. It carries off all poison in the system and leaves no injurious effects.

CURED BY HERBINE AFTER OTHER REMEDIES FAILED

Mr. L. A. Hicks, Iredell, Texas, says: "I was sick in bed for eight months with liver trouble, the doctor seemed to do me no good. I was told to try Herbine, and it cured me in a short time. I cannot recommend this wonderful medicine too highly."

THE LAND OF "I FORGOT."

Little Trit-trot was a poor little slave
In the land of "I forgot."
He ran and he ran the livelong day,
Did little Trit-i-ty Trot,
Who lived with his mama just over the way,
In the land of "I forgot."

It was "Where is my hat and where is my cap,
And where is my brand-new ball,
And where is my bat and my catching glove?
I cannot find them at all."
And he hunted and looked upstairs and down,
In kitchen, chamber and hall.

The hat was found in the top of a tree,
By the side of a tattered kite.
The cap was left in old Blackie's nest,
When he gathered the eggs at night.
The hat was wet and the cap was torn,
And both were a sorry sight.

The ball and the bat and the catching glove
Were down in the pasture lot,
And the slate and sponge and strap and books
Had hidden under the cot.
For this is the way things lose themselves
In the land of "I forgot."
—Mary Morrison in Youth's Companion.

WHERE JIM'S MONEY WENT.

Jim's father was dead; there were only he and his mother to earn for the little ones.

Mrs. Knowles helped at the Day Nursery and Jim tended the babies at home.

Jim did other things, too; he sold papers along the street where he lived, he took up ashes and carried coal upstairs for several neighbors, he ran lawn mowers in summer and shoveled snow in winter; he did everything that came to hand, either keeping his brothers and sisters with him or putting them in carge of the eldest girl.

Jim was really a remarkable boy, and none knew it better than good Mrs. Knowles herself. So when he asked hesitatingly for the share of his earnings that his mother had said must go for new clothes for himself, his request was granted.

"He's old enough to buy his own things," his mother said. But when the new suit did not appear she wondered, especially as dollars were scarcer than usual, and scrimping was in order.

"Could he be spending foolishly?" she thought.

One September night Jim asked his mother, "Do you know what day it is?"

"Why, my birthday, sure!" she exclaimed. "I'd been so busy I'd forgotten it!"

"I though I'd clean up the cellar to celebrate," observed Jim.

"And we helped," piped Philip.

"Yes, you did," Jim agreed. "You worked hard."

"And there's somethin'—" giggled Mary.

"I want you to go down to see the cellar," Jim said, and after tea the family went downstairs.

It was a very neat apartment that Mrs. Knowles looked upon, and she said such a tidy place was as good a birthday present as she wanted.

At that the children broke out in little exclamations and smothered bursts of laughter, which made Jim hurry past the woodpile to the bin beyond.

"Mother," he said, "here is your real present!"

Then the youngsters squealed and shrieked with delight as Mrs. Knowles cried out in genuine astonishment:

"Why, Jim! Jim—a ton of coal!" Then more soberly, "But, my boy, your new suit?"

"My old one is good enough," Jim said.—New York News.

A WOUNDED GRIZZLY.

A wounded grizzly is a mean thing to fight, and if there is a tree handy it is a pretty good thing to climb if anything gets wrong with your shooting irons. I do not think a grizzly will climb a tree, though brown and black bears will. Any bear is pretty sure to fight if crippled, but I know there is this difference between a black or brown bear and a grizzly. If you meet a black bear face to face unexpectedly, give him five seconds and he will be out of sight, but meet a grizzly the same way and give him five seconds and you will be out of business.

About the most fascinating way to hunt bear, which is even better than night work, is to trail him right to his home, and meet him in broad daylight on his own door-step, as it were. It can be done, but everything must be just right. The ground might be covered with a light fall of snow, and the snow ought to be melting. Then the twigs won't break. One has to be very careful, and when bruin is found, which is generally at the foot of a large tree, one must never forget that instead of one there may be two, and in that case, one must be able to shoot fast and straight, and implicit confidence in the gun he carries is about the best stock in trade a man can possess. About the surest place to shoot a bear to stop him quickly, to my way of thinking, is directly in the brain. It is really not a hard shot, usually at short range, and it puts him out mighty quick.—Field and Stream.

From the Fish-Eye View.

It occurred to Prof. R. W. Wood recently to try to represent by under-water photography the appearance of the out-of-water world as viewed by the eyes of fish. The results are very curious, depending on the refraction of light by water. For instance, with a box filled with water, having a photographic plate at the back and a pinhole covered with glass at the front, the situation of a fish looking out of the side of an aquarium is imitated. With such an arrangement Prof. Wood found that all three sides and the complete ceiling and floor of a room could be photographed at one view. Placed at a point where three streets meet at a right angle, it gave a view looking down all three streets, including the ground up to the base of the tripod and the sky from the horizon to the zenith. From a balloon such a camera would photograph the whole visible surface of the earth out to the horizon on all sides.—Youth's Companion.

BE KIND TO ANIMALS.

Keep not the helpless animals in insufficient shelter, and leave no crevice through which the wintry air, perhaps driven by a biting wind and laden with driving snow, may penetrate. Animals insufficiently housed require more food. Nature is not deceived. Forthwith she takes a due portion of the food consumed, and which otherwise would be converted into strength-giving muscle and converts it into a fuel food, the purpose of which is to keep the body warm.

A horse needs rest the same as a human, and that rest he cannot get any more than a human being can if he is insufficiently sheltered, underfed or overworked, even. He becomes crabbed, just as would a human being under like conditions. His power to work is materially lessened; he wears out faster than if properly taken care of; he deteriorates in value.—The Occident.

FRIENDSHIP BETWEEN BIRDS.

A curious case of friendship between birds most strangely assorted is reported in the London Globe from Rosenberg, in Prussia. A hen had just hatched a single chicken, when one morning, nobody knows how, there appeared in the nest a young sparrow, just beginning to wear its first fluff of feather. The chick and the sparrow became fast friends at once, and the parent hen, taking kindly to the changeling, gave equal care to both alike, the sparrow hopping about the nest at first, and the hen never going far away, and sheltering both her young at night, until, as the sparrow's wings grew stronger, he at first indulged in little flights, returning to the sheltering wings at night, and finally disappeared altogether into the sparrow world.

DO THEY PLAY MARBLES

Perhaps the strangest material ever used in building a school is that found cheapest in the town of New England, N. D. The structure is built entirely of agates. Of course, we do not mean such agates as small boys use in playing marbles. It is wholly of petrified wood which there is very plentiful upon the prairies. It is said that the material has been put together in most artistic fashion, so as to bring out its beauty, and that "when the sun shines the building glistens like crystal." Where the school house is so hard, probably the hardest of lessons will by contrast seem not really hard at all. But, on the other hand, with so bright a school house, how dull must the brightest scholars appear!—St. Nicholas.

FISH CANDLES.

Did you ever hear of fish being used as candles? I daresay not, but they are so used sometimes all the same, and not in Fairyland, but in that country called Alaska, which you can easily look up in your map if you don't know where it is.

You ought to know, so I am not going to tell you, but I'll just say that if you look at a map of North America I suspect Alaska will 'hit you in the eye" at once, as school boys say, says Home Notes.

In Alaska is found a kind of fish that makes a capital candle when it is dried. Then the tail of the fish is stuck into a crack of a wooden table, to hold it upright, and its nose is lighted. It gives a good, steady, light of three-candle power, and considerable heat, and it will burn for about three hours.

FUN WITH MELON SEEDS.

When you have a melon don't forget to save the seeds, for they make very pretty necklaces when they are strung together with a needle and strong cotton. You can make bracelets by threading the seeds point to point and putting gilt beads between them. When you are working with melon seeds be careful that the mice do not nibble them up.—Home Notes.

A Dying Profession.

According to an ex-president of the Royal College of Veterinary Surgeons there will, in three years' time, only be employment for three hundred vets, in London. The remainder will have to follow the horse. In London alone, before the introduction of motor cars and motor omnibuses, there were six thousand veterinary surgeons in regular employment.—Motoring Illustrated.

For Fumigating Plants.

At the present time the scientific study of the propagation of flowers is receiving the attention of the foremost citizens of the world. One of the greatest problems to be solved is the extermination of the many insect pests which infest the plants, retarding their growth or killing them outright. Many systems have been tried in the hothouse, but a than ordinary merit. Broadly, his process consists in exposing a vaporizable liquid insecticide in a finely subdivided condition to the action of a stream of superheated steam flowing through a conduit. This mixture is then discharged into the atmosphere which surrounds the plants to be fumigated. Superheat- process recently patented by a Cleveland florist seems to contain more ed steam is formed by means of the coiled superheater, under which is the gas burner, the supply being furnished from a generator (not shown). In the centre of the illustration is shown a tank containing vaporizable liquid insecticide, such as a solution of nicotine. In the enlarged section of pipe directly below the tank is placed a crumpled-up mass of fine wire gauze, which will cause the liquid insecticide which drops to spread out in thin layers, coating the wire. It is then picked up by the superheated steam and carried through the pipes to the greenhouses.—Philadelphia Record.

Telegraph Lines For Europe.

Among the European States Russia has the longest telegraph lines, a total of 175,000 kilometers (109,375 miles). Next is France, with 150,000 kilometers (93,750 miles); Germany, with 134,000 kilometers (83,750 miles); Great Britain, with 79,000 kilometers (49,375 miles). More than twice as many telegrams are sent in Great Britain as in Germany, and nearly double the number sent in France.

Flaw in Casting.

The collapse of the roof of the Charing Cross railway station, London, was caused by a "pocket" formed in the casing of one of the iron tie rods. The weight of a staging on which carpenters were working broke it. There was no way of detecting the fault, experts said at the inquest.

An Echo Alarm Clock.

President Murphy, of the Chicago National League Club, told at a baseball dinner a remarkable echo story.

"There was a man," he began, "who had a country house in the Catskills. He was showing a visitor over his grounds one day, and, coming to a hilly place, he said:

"'There's a remarkable echo here. If you stand under that rock and shout, the echo answers four distinct times, with an interval of several minutes between each answer.'

"But the visitor was not at all impressed. He said, with a loud laugh:

"'You ought to hear the echo at my place at Sunapee. Before getting into bed at night I stick my head out of the window and shout, "Time to get up, William!" and the echo wakes me at 7 o'clock sharp the next morning.'"

Vacuum Preserving Jar.

A vacuum preserving jar is a recent invention of an Illinois man. The invention relates primarily to jars or other vessels for hermetically sealing and preserving fruits, foodstuffs, beverages and so on. The cover is held on by atmospheric pressure and readily released without injuring the cap, so that the vessel can be refilled and used an indefinite number of times, thus adapting it for household as other purposes. In the illustration it is shown in connection with a jar, the upper end of which is formed with a flange, upon which rests a cap so shaped as to form a tight connection. Around the edge of the cap is a rubber gasket. The centre of the cap is formed with a small vent, closed by means of a rubber valve. A vacuum or partial vacuum can be created by bringing the contents to a boiling temperature, which will cause the outside atmospheric pressure to tightly close the rubber valve in the cap; or the air at the top of the vessel can be exhausted by means of a simple pump. In the latter event the invention can be used for preserving materials without cooking. This invention is adapted to the use of any other material than glass for jars, and the form is not necessarily limited to that indicated in the drawing. Both the jar and the cover are made entirely of glass, making it non-poisonous, with the advantage that it can be used again and again.

What Noon Means in Law.

When is it legally noon? Fire insurance policies expire at noon, and the word is admitted to mean exactly at 12 o'clock midday. But standard time has not been adopted in all communities. Many small towns cling to the sun time, which may be from a few minutes to nearly an hour earlier than standard. In one State a fire occurred at two minutes past noon, sun time, and the insurance company held that the policy had expired before the fire. Sun time is used in that town, but the insured sued the company, holding that local customs did not run the policy, and that he was entitled to his insurance. The State courts sustained him. In another State a similar contention was taken to the courts and just the opposite decision given. Several conflicting precedents have been established in State courts, and it is said the question can only be decided for good and all when a case has been carried into the United States courts and passed upon by the Supreme Court.—New York Press.

Big Demand For Alligator Hides.

Shoe and Leather Reporter says that the consumption of alligator leather is greater now than ever before, the output of tanneries in America being approximately 280,000 hides annually, worth about $450,000.

LEGENDS OF TREE OF DEATH

LIFE ENDS FOR ALL WHO STEP WITHIN ITS SHADOW.

It Stands on a Mexican Farm, Whose Owner Would Gladly Have it Blown up or Removed in Any Way—Planted by a Wicked and Irreverent Man.

Prospero Garcia, the owner of a ranch situated in the Zamora district, State of Micjoacan, Mexico, upon which grows a strange tree that is called by the natives "tree of death," is said to have offered a liberal reward to any one who has the courage to blow up the cursed tree with dynamite or who will remove it from his ranch by any other method.

The tree is supposed to be over seventy-five years old, and is said to have been planted by a man, who, because of his numerous crimes and his forgetfulness of the divine laws, was swallowed up by the earth. That man, according to tradition, was "un hombre muy malo." He never went to mass, never confessed, did not have the image of a saint in his house, did not carry a rosary around his neck and never made the sign of the cross.

It was rumored that he was responsible for many murders, but he was never in jail, neither could he be incarcerated, because he had a compact with the devil.

Two things he loved—birds and trees. He planted numerous trees and fed big flocks of birds that knew him and came to his home every morning to pick the crumbs of bread which he threw in the patio.

Many years ago (and this is well remembered by the peasants), it was Good Friday. Everybody in town had attended the religious services of the morning and were going to their homes, when a terrific noise was heard. They rushed to the street where it came from to find out what it was and saw how the earth had opened under the cursed man's feet. He was enveloped by thick flames and smoke, and disappeared beneath the surface of the earth.

This was regarded as a most deserved punishment. While the faithful were in the church the cursed man was loafing around, and, having seen a big crucifix upon an altar erected on the street, as was done in those days, he placed a burning cigarette in the lips of the image.

Scarcely had he made eight or ten steps when he was engulfed by the inferno.

That very day all the trees that he had planted, except the cursed one, dried up, and all the birds he had fed, died.

An attempt was made to cut down the tree, but the man who made the attempt dropped dead, stepping on the shadow of the foliage. The man's body had to be left there to be eaten by the crows, because nobody had the courage to approach and remove it.

Since that day, numerous persons have met a tragic death under that tree. A pedestrian who went under it for shade on a hot summer day, was bitten by a snake and died in two hours. Three men, on different occasions, sought shelter from rain under its branches, and were struck by lightning. A woman who was hanging some clothes to dry from the trunk of the tree was attacked and killed by a billy goat that came from nobody knows where and that was never seen again. Two years ago a little boy who was riding a burro, innocently led the animal to the tree. The animal threw him off and kicked him to death. The last victim was struck by lightning while under the tree.

The horror that peasants have for this tree is so great that peons refuse to work on the fields half a mile around it.

AGRICULTURE IN HAWAII.

Soil and Climate Adapted to the Cultivation of Tobacco.

Tobacco growing and other agricultural pursuits in Hawaii are treated of in a report that has just been issued by the Department of Agriculture. The report goes into great detail as to the growing of tobacco and the preparation of the soil and the curing of the crop. The results of a number of experimental plants are given, and the conclusion drawn is that the soil of Hawaii and he climate and rainfall are all adapted to the cultivation of a high grade of tobacco on a paying basis. It is said that there are one hundred thousand acres of land adapted to tobacco growing in Hawaii, with considerable tracts in the adjacent islands. The cost of producing tobacco is put as low as from two to two and one-half cents a pound for the green leaf. It is said, however, that the fields have to be poisoned before planting, owing to the prevalence of the cutworm, Japanese beetle and other insects. Directions are given in detail for doing this, and the process is said not to be expensive.

Considerable attention was given by the experiment station to the growth of rubber. It is thought that, owing to the sub-tropical character of the climate, probably only two varieties of rubber will thrive—the Assam and the Ceara trees. Both of these are doing well, and one company on the island put in one hundred thousand seed trees last year, and expects to have half a million growing in two years.

The bee keeping industry in the Hawaiian Islands represents an investment of approximately $150,000. With the exception of a few Japanese who are engaged in- dividually on a tain others who for local consump is in the hands of three one of which equals in the combined produc two. It is apparent completion of the plans now under way by these the next year or so will ous honey producing islands well covered and production attained.—W Star.

PRESERVE THE BUFFALO.

Ernest Harold Baynes Talks on "Our Grandest American Animal."

Ernest Harold Baynes gave a talk before the Society of Arts on the "American Bison: Our Grandest American Animal." Mr. Baynes is secretary of the American Bison Society, president of which is Theodore Roosevelt and which count among their members the governor general of Canada. The object of this society is to promote a public sentiment that will influence congress to provide for the perpetuation of the American bison. At present there is a bill before Congress providing for the appropriation of $15,000 for the maintenance of a herd.

Mr. Baynes said that the bison was the most numerous of all mammals of modern times. The numbers that at one time lived on this continent was in the millions and it seems remarkable that they could have become almost exterminated in so short a time. There are but two wild herds of buffalo in existence today, one in the Yellowstone National Park and another in Canada. There are a few private herds, but all of these are, without exception, for sale to anyone who will pay a reasonable price.

Before the white men who are responsible for this depletion invaded the West the Indians killed the buffalo themselves, and depended upon the buffalo generally for their living.

When the white men came they began killing the buffalo, and the Indians were instructed to kill as many as possible and to bring their hides to the trading stations. The white hunters also took up the slaughter and there are white men living today who have killed 10,000 buffaloes with one rifle. There is on record a case where 1500 buffaloes were killed in fifteen minutes by a hunting party. Whole herds were exterminated at one time by driving them over precipices, and by coralling and slaughtering them by the wholesale.

Many people ask if the preservation of the buffalo is of any practical value. In an attempt to answer this question satisfactorily, Mr. Baynes has trained two buffaloes to work in harness or under yoke. These animals were exhibited at the Sportsman's Show last fall and are doubtless remembered by many people. They have been found to be very tractable and fully as strong as oxen.

Mr. Baynes showed various lantern slides of the domesticated buffaloes drawing various wagons and carts, and in one case drawing a snow plow through snow up to their shoulders. The buffalo hide is very much more valuable than cow hide, and it has been found possible to weave their fur or wool into coarse cloths. Another valuable use for buffalo is in crossing them with our cattle, and so forming a race that is much stronger, healthier and less susceptible to cattle diseases. The hair of these crosses is also valuable, resembling very closely fine bear fur.—Boston Transcript.

A LOCAL MANAGER WANTED.

Charleston's Remarkable Taxpayers.

The number of delinquents on city taxes when the tax-year closed last November was 424. By the end of December this number had been reduced to 141, and today there are only 19 persons in the city of Charleston who have not paid their taxes for last year, the amount due the city by them aggregating only $449.76. At the close of the tax year on the first of November the total amount of city taxes uncollected aggregated $3,907.79, or eight-tenths of 1 percent.

The amount of city taxes collected up to that date aggregated $477,027.86, or 99.2 percent of the total taxes due the city. We do not believe that there is another city in the country that can make anything like so good a showing, and the credit is largely due to the efficiency with which the city tax department is managed.

The total amount of state and county taxes in Charleston county is $233,058.44. At the close of the last county tax year the amount of uncollected taxes turned over to the sheriff for collection was $6,005.54. The amount collected without resort to the sheriff for the state and county was $227,052.90.—Charleston (S. C.) News and Courier.

Carlyle's Bad Shilling.

A farmer in Manitoba wears on his watch chain a blackened metal disk with an interesting history. Thirty years ago the farmer was a ticket agent in the railway station in Dumfriesshire, England. One day Thomas Carlyle took a ticket for a short run by rail and laid down a shilling. The clerk, eager to obtain a souvenir of the famous countryman, secured the coin. Ultimately, although sorely against the grain, he was driven to part with the treasured Carlyle shilling. But it would not stand the ring test. Somebody had palmed off on the "sage of Chelsea" a spurious shilling.

Black Splotches All Over Face—Affected Parts Now Clear as Ever—Cured by the Cuticura Remedies.

"About four years ago I was afflicted with black splotches all over my face and a few covering my body, which produced a severe itching irritation, and which caused me a great deal of annoyance and suffering, to such an extent that I was forced to call in two of the leading physicians of my town. After a thorough examination of the dreaded complaint they announced it to be skin eczema in its worst form. They treated me for the same for the length of one year, but the treatment did me no good. Finally my husband purchased a set of the Cuticura Remedies, and after using the contents of the first bottle of Cuticura Resolvent in connection with the Cuticura Soap and Ointment, the breaking out entirely stopped. I continued the use of the Cuticura Remedies for six months, and after that every splotch was entirely gone and the affected parts were left as clear as ever. The Cuticura Remedies not only cured me of that dreadful disease, eczema, but other complicated troubles as well. Lizzie E. Sledge, 540 Jones Ave., Selma, Ala. Oct. 28, 1905."

Divorce Among the Burmese.

The marriage customs of the Burmese are simple in the extreme. A man and woman are married or are not married, according to whether they live as husband and wife or not. A man may have several wives, though in practice he rarely has more than one.

A woman may have only one husband. Divorce is a matter for the village elders. No court is necessary, no decree, no appeal to legal or ecclesiastical authority. Divorce is but the breaking of a status. A wife retains control of all her property when married; she has a half share in all property acquired during marriage. If she is divorced, she takes her own property and half that jointly acquired. There is no blending of her authority with that of her husband. She may do what she will with her own.

There is no rule of primogeniture and no power of bequeathing property by testament. All the children inherit equally. No Buddhist may make a will. Whatever a man or woman dies possessed of must be divided according to the rules of consanguinity. There is no preference of either sex. All children are equal in this matter. The eldest son shares alike with the youngest daughter.—Lahore Tribune.

Webster's Retainers.

Edward M. Nason, superintendent of buildings for the state of New Hampshire, tells the following anecdote of Daniel Webster:

One day a man came to Webster's office and consulted him in regard to a prospective lawsuit. At the close of the conference he paid the attorney a retainer of $100 to look after the matter. Upon returning to his place of business he found that his partner had already settled the suit, obtaining the sum demanded without an attorney. He thought $100 was altogether too much for an office fee, so he dispatched his clerk to look after the subject.

"Mr. Webster," said the young man, "my employer thinks you should return a part of your retainer. That case has been settled."

"Young man," said the lawyer, "you go back and tell your employer than a retainer is something to be retained."—Boston Herald.

Mrs. Remethe Myers, of 130 South Tenth St., Ironton, O., says: "I have worked hard in my time and have been exposed again and again to changes of weather. It is no wonder my kidneys gave out and I went all to pieces at last. For five years I was fading away and finally so weak that for six months I could not get out of the house. I was nervous, restless and sleepless at night, and lame and sore in the morning. Sometimes everything would whirl and blur before me. I bloated so badly I could not wear tight clothing, and had to put on shoes two sizes larger than usual. The urine was disordered and passages were dreadfully frequent. I got help from the first box of Doan's Kidney Pills, however, and by the time I had taken four boxes the pain and bloating were gone. I have been in good health ever since."

Even-Handed Justice.

Frank Smith has a number of mail-carrying contracts in San Francisco. His wagons take the mails to and from the postoffice and trains. He was not able to operate his wagons on the day of the earthquake, but he got them going the second day. The Postoffice Department complimented him for getting his wagons out the second day, but fined him for not having them at work the first day.

That reminds one of a mail carrier in Maine who took the mails part of the way in a canoe. One day the canoe upset and the carrier was drowned. The Postoffice Department sent an inspector up to the route, found how much of his route the carrier had covered up to the time he was drowned, and pro-rated his pay to that point.—San Francisco Argonaut.

Try W. L. Douglas Women's, Misses and Children's shoes; for style, fit and wear they excel other makes.

If I could take you into my large factories at Brockton, Mass., and show you how carefully W. L. Douglas shoes are made, you would then understand why they hold their shape, fit better, wear longer, and are of greater value than any other make.

Wherever you live, you can obtain W. L. Douglas shoes. His name and price is stamped on the bottom, which protects you against high prices and inferior shoes. Take no substitute. Ask your dealer for W. L. Douglas shoes and insist upon having them.

Fast Color Eyelets used; they will not wear brassy.

AN UNUSUAL OPPORTUNITY.

Florence Drug Co. Will Pay Back Your Money if Pepsikola Fails to Cure Your Indigestion.

"Never in the history of this store," remarked one of the above druggists to an interested customer, "has there been so great a demand for a new remedy as there is just now for Pepsikola Tablets. Clanton people are coming in every day inquiring if it really is true that we sell Pepsikola with the understanding that it will cure dyspepsia or pay back the money. "Not one person in fifty has asked for their money, and it may surprise you to know that at least a dozen within the last ten days have been in to tell us how much they have been relieved and how glad they are to know at last there is a remedy that really will cure indigestion and dyspepsia." Pepsikola braces up and tones every nerve and fibre, helps digest the food, puts new life into the digestion, improves the appetite, cures coated tongue, dizzy spells and sour stomach.

Try it for ten days, and if you don't see a big improvement step in and tell Florence Drug co., and they will hand back your quarter cheerfully and without argument.

NOTICE.

This is to certify that the books of the town of Clanton show that Mrs. Belle George paid the said town the sum of five dollars as license for running a boarding house in said town of Clanton. The entry on the books show that said license was paid on the 6th day of March, 1906

Starving to Death.

Because her stomach was so weakened by useless drugging that she could not eat, Mrs. Mary A. Walters, of St. Clair St., Columbus, O., was literally starving to death. She writes: "My stomach was so weak from useless drugs that I could not eat, and my nerves so wrecked that I could not sleep; and not before I was given up to die was I induced to try Electric Bitters; with the wonderful result that improvement began at once, and a complete cure followed." Cured Hay Fever and Summer Cold.

A. J. Nusbaum, Batesville, Indiana, writes: "Last year I suffered for three months with a summer cold so distressing that it interfered with my business. I had many of the symptoms of hay fever, and a doctor's prescription did not reach my case, and I took several medicines which seemed to only aggravate my case. Fortunately I insisted upon having Foley's Honey and Tar in the yellow package, and it quickly cured me. My wife has since used Foley's Honey and Tar with the same success." Upchurch Drug co.

Sour Stomach

No appetite, loss of strength, nervousness, headache, constipation, bad breath, general debility, sour risings, and catarrh of the stomach are all due to indigestion. Kodol cures indigestion. This new discovery represents the natural juices of digestion as they exist in a healthy stomach, combined with the greatest known tonic and reconstructive properties. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure does not only cure indigestion and dyspepsia, but this famous remedy cures all stomach troubles by cleansing, purifying, sweetening and strengthening the mucous membranes lining the stomach.

Mr. S. S. Ball, of Ravenswood, W. Va., says:—"I was troubled with sour stomach for twenty years. Kodol cured me and we are now using it in milk for baby."

TYNER'S DYSPEPSIA REMEDY.

A Guaranteed Cure. Many Have Dyspepsia and Don't Know It.

The purchase price (50c) of Tyner's Dyspepsia Remedy will be returned if it fails to cure or relieve dyspepsia or indigestion in any form. Take as directed on label. Many people have fluttering of the heart, risings or pimples on the skin, dizzy feelings, aches and pains in the side or back, weak kidneys, constipation, belching of wind, blurred eyesight, tainted bad breath, hawking and spitting, headaches, acid stomach, pale skin, and don't know it's dyspepsia. If you have any or all of these symptoms take Tyner's Dyspepsia Remedy, and a cure is certain, sure and lasting. Tyner's Dyspepsia Remedy strengthens weak stomachs, helps digest your food, stops aches and pains, (stops colic immediatey). It tastes good and warms your stomach from the first dose. Cures where all else fails. Try it. Druggists, 50c. a bottle. Sold in Clanton by Florence Drug store; call or write; remedy sent by express.

The Caserta Camellia Tree.

In the days of its glory the palace at Caserta of the king of Naples had among its features a so called English garden, made in 1782 by order of Marie Caroline of Austria. It was bright with flowers and wonderful rare oriental plants and trees, so that it was renowned throughout the world, but the crown and glory of all consisted in a camellia tree, a plant then unknown in Europe. The seeds were collected as though flakes of gold, and the queen used to give them and cuttings of this camellia as presents to her friends. These cuttings were most highly prized, and thus it has become a European flower, so much so that the exportation of camellias is an extensive industry in central Italy, and in Germany there are vast fields of them. In its palmy days the Caserta plant had eight branches, the largest of which was twelve inches in diameter, the whole being thirty feet high. This mother plant was in a flourishing condition up to a few years ago, but lately the gorgeous garden has been allowed to fall into decay, and with it the glorious camellia.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Rewards of Literature.

A very talented and well known writer—successful, too, in the popular estimation—tells me: "I know a man who spent fifteen years' leisure in getting the material for his best book and writing it over three times, then offered it to almost every publisher in America, meeting with refusal by all, and finally sold it to a London publisher for £30, had it republished in America some years afterward, got a few dollars before the publishers failed and as his last royalty received just 2 cents, which was exactly 10 per cent of the last sum due him. I am the man, but I don't publish the fact nor feel inclined to brag about it nor to complain, for that would be useless and would only cheapen my wares in the literary market. The book paid me, by accurate calculation, 33⅓ cents a week for the fifteen years' work."—Papyrus.

A Continuous Feast.

They were from the country, on their first visit to London, and a notice in their hotel puzzled them considerably. It ran: "Breakfasts, 8 to 11; luncheons, 12 to 2; teas, 3 to 5; dinners, 6 to 8; suppers, 8 to 11." "Say, Garge," said one to the other, "'cordin' to this yere, there bean't so vary much toime for soightseein.'"—St. James' Gazette.

Birds Have Favorite Plants.

Like man, birds have their favorite plants. It has been discovered that the goldfinch is passionately fond of apple blossom. This may be because its favorite building site is in the lichen covered forks of apple trees, but apart from such attachment the bright little finch frequently spends hours tearing the petals into tiny fragments. Though the nightingale never builds in the thorn boughs, it loves to sing on may laden branches, often in the very midst of the fragrant blossoms. It is somewhat peculiar that most birds avoid the cow parsnip, owing, no doubt, to the unpleasant greenish smell emitted by this umbelliferous plant. Small birds very often build in less secure places, but the parsnip, gigantic and strong as it is, is left severely alone.—London Opinion.

Thoughtful.

"Are you sure the sick man wanted me?" asked the physician, reaching for his hat.

"He didn't mention your name, but he's screamin' for some one that'll put him out of his misery, and I thought of you right away."—Houston Post.

An Insidious Danger

One of the worst features of kidney trouble is that it is an insidious disease and before the victim realizes his danger he may have a fatal malady. Take Foley's Kidney Cure at the first sign of trouble as it corrects irregularities and prevents Bright's disease and diabetes. Upchurch Drug co.

A Lesson In Health.

Healthy kidneys filters the impurities from the blood, and unless they do this good health is impossible. Foley's Kidney Cure makes sound kidneys and will positively cure all forms of kidney and bladder diseases. It strengthens the whole system. Upchurch Drug co.

MAKE MONEY.

Here is an interesting study: Make out a list of all the people you know, and estimate the amount of money each one earns in a year. Total it up. The amount will be surprisingly large. Now, of all those people, only the few who SAVE SOMETHING really MAKE anything at all. Simply earning money isn't making it; what slips through the earner's fingers is finally "made" by somebody else. Don't forget to count yourself in on the list, and if you are not "making" money, begin now to save with us. One dollar will open your bank account.

West Chilton.

Editor Banner—As the tax assessing is now near at hand, I wish to say to all the land owners of Chilton county to take your land deeds with you when you go to meet your assessor and be sure and have him to assess your land right off the face of your deeds to prevent trouble and botheration hereafter. "A burnt child dreads the fire." The world is getting full of sharpers Just how the great blunder of 75,000 acres being assessed wrong last year came up in Chilton I am not able to understand. It was never that amount before. Where are we drifting to? So be up and doing, meet your assessor at his appointed place with your land deeds, and assess your land right and there will be no more after-claps about it, and by all means don't let your assessor and collector get a fee on you; meet them with your money and land deeds and attend to it right.

Old Mike.

Thorsby, Sept 23, 1906

Editor Banner—Being a long time since I wrote to the Banner, will write a few lines, promising to do better next time if these few lines don't find the waste basket. Mr. Editor, did you hear about the Republican meeting at Thorsby last week? Oh my! what a thing it was, too rotten for the people to notice. Yes, they think they are going through, but my, if they do what a mess things will be in when they get through and go into office. We can't expect nothing but infidelity in all of their administrations, such as was carried on at the baptising place spoken of by our friend Latham in last week's issue. Yes, Mr Latham, that's the way they are all doing it. Away with such rotten stuff and the man with it; the man or party is what they are wanting, not the principle of things. "For the drunkard and the glutton shall come to poverty." Prov. 23:21. The devil is a roaring lion, going about seeking whom he may devour, and if you want to see the devil just look into the face of a drunken person and you see him as big as a mule; that's the way the devil does his work, through such agencies as a drunken man. No, my good brother, we don't need such men in office, and if people will study the laws Christ laid down in Holy Writ, we won't have such men in office. No, not as long as Pat stayed in the army. The very idea of such a thing as going to such a sacred place as the water's edge and find a buggy full of whiskey there to tempt the good people with. Such a curse; away with such a man; may the time soon come when such men's deeds will sink beneath the sea and forgotten for all time to come.

Now, Mr. Latham, just watch them and see if they don't uphold him in such deeds as he carried on at the baptising. Some Republicans will say before a week, I don't believe it; say, boys, don't talk it and things will soon die out, and may be we can get him in the sheriff's office and things will cease then. Respectfully,

Just Billie.

Notice.

Everybody is invited to attend the Farmers Institute to be held at Cedar Grove on October 12, 1906, under the direction of the Chilton County Farmers Union.

Each local Union will be expected to send as many delegates as to a County Union.

Col. J. M. Thornton of Talladega, and Dr. C. A Cary and others of Auburn have agreed to lecture for us, also Hon. P. F. Parker has been invited to address us on that day. All local secretaries and lecturers, especially, should attend.

Billingsley.

News is scare at Billingsley. The best we have is in regard to the Farmers' Union. After so long they have organized here with a membership of 20, with prospect of others soon. Farmers' Union, that is a good word. In union there is strength. The farmers feed the world, and the absence of thorough organization is the prime cause of their drifting away from prosperity and pleasure. Get the statistics of this grand organization and you will see what it means to unify and harmonize. Yes, smooth down the rough places and get instructions one from another, just like a well trained family gets help day by day. Farmers everywhere get your eyes open so as to see your own interests, trust companies are not going to help you, only into the ditch and leave you to scramble out or stay there and starve. Look out for yourselves, and Sallie and the babies. I. C.

Card of Thanks

I wish to thank our friends and neighbors for the kindness shown us during our baby's sickness, and I certainly do thank God that she is improving.

Sorry to say that the infant of Mr. Luke Garner's is very sick; hope it will soon recover.

Glad to say Mr. Bill Smith's baby is well again.

Martha Lawrence.

Rushton, Sept 26, 1906

Editor Banner—Please allow me space in your paper to express my thanks to the good people of Rushton for their kindness in helping and waiting on my little baby during its illness; words can't express how thankful I am to them; but it has gone to the great beyond. Now let us pray that we may all meet in the great judgment with it. I also thank the good people of Providence community for helping in putting it away; it was the last respect we could ever pay it; Bro. Willie Robinson preached the funeral at Providence church, Monday, Sept. 24, 1906.

Significant of France's weariness of top-heavy militarism is the growing demand of Radicals and Socialists that the term of military service be shortened from three to two years.

The canteens in the soldiers' homes were nothing more than social clubrooms where the veterans were privileged to gather for sociability, remarks the Worcester Post. The influences which secured their abolition were sincerely devoted to the welfare of the veterans, but unfortunately their efforts were decidedly misdirected.

An admirable act of corporate courage and business conscience has come to light in England, notes the Youth's Companion. The terrible railway wreck at Salisbury, in which so many Americans were killed, is still fresh in memory. At the official inquiry into the cause of the accident, officers and employes of the company came forward and testified in the frankest possible way, without regard as to whether their testimony would hurt the company or not; and before a verdict had been rendered, indeed, before the inquiry had been completed, the directors of the company issued a formal statement that they "took full responsibility for the accident and for all the legal consequences of it."

If one could carry an electric light into all the dark corners of the minds, of even very intelligent men and women, some surprising superstitions would be discovered. Belief in witchcraft, astrology, alchemy, possession of the devil and innumerable relics of old notions concerning the heredity of diseases and magical remedies, would be found. In every mind of large capacity there are rooms seldom opened, and some that are concealed beyond the knowledge of their owners. Hence, some of the surprising things that are said and done in times of great excitement by even strong-minded men and women. The scientific psychologists are doing much to dispel old superstitions, although some of them seem to be bringing in new ones. We need not be surprised at any outbreak of evil passions or absurd practices when there is sufficient occasion, with motives strong enough to cause the hidden forces of human nature to break forth and manifest themselves, each after its kind.

Says Collier's Weekly: Lives are wasted wholesale in our American cities on the cynically false theory that it is cheap to let people die. Rochester, New York, has been making some experiments which show, in startling figures, how inexpensively human life, at the most perishable period, may be preserved. Several years ago the Health Bureau which has made that city a standard in American municipal hygiene began to demand of itself some explanation of the high mortality among children under five years of age, particularly marked in July and August. Suspicion was directed to the milk supply. Investigation confirmed this. Failing to obtain any guarantee of better conditions from the milk venders, the Health Officer, Dr. Goler, and his deputy, Dr. Roby, practical enthusiasts both, set about the establishment of stations where the mothers of young children could be supplied at cost, during the hot months, with milk that was clean and free from disease-producing bacteria. At each station a trained nurse in charge gives the patrons simple instructions in the special care of children during the hot weather. The results of nine years of this method are now at hand. In that time there have been saved, as nearly as may be reckoned, one thousand children; more than one hundred children every year in a city of 185,000 inhabitants. The cost to the city has averaged $1000. It is a temptation to print this fact in large, black tpye. One thousand dollars' investment keeps one hundred and ten children alive in Rochester every year, a little less than $10 per life. Any city, says Dr. Goler modestly, can do the same thing. Perhaps. At any rate, every city should try. Add to this saving of lives, the saving in doctors' and druggists' bills, in hospital expense to the city, in pain, anxiety, and grief, and the progressive western New York city seems to have found about the best investment for its money that ever gave returns.

WELCOME TO BRYAN

Destinguished Private Citizen Is Greeted by Crowds In Birmingham

TRAIN WAS DELAYED BY WRECK.

Bijou's Capacity Taxed by the Throng Which Crowded to Hear Address.

Departed for Jackson, Miss.

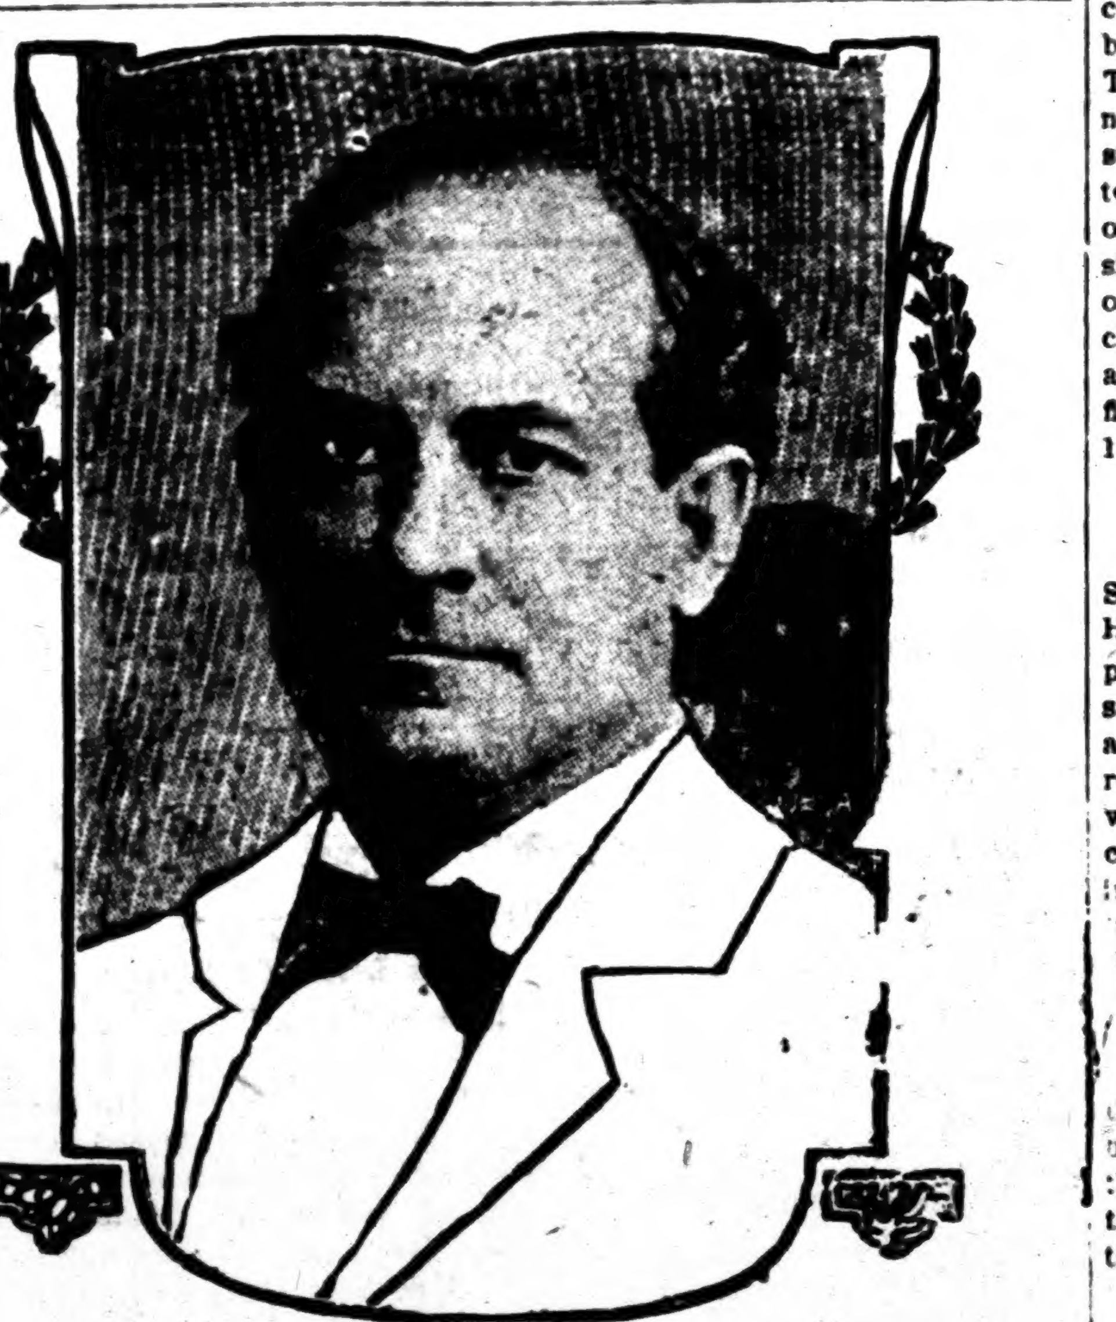
Birmingham, Ala.—William Jennings Bryan was Alabama's guest last week, and the occasion will be memorable.

On a train two hours late the democratic leader arrived at 2:20 p. m. He was accompanied by Mrs. Bryan and also by the Birmingham committee which went to Anniston to meet the great commoner on his way from Atlanta.

The train was delayed by a wreck near Anniston.

At the station Mr. Bryan was greeted by a throng that had been waiting for his arrival since long before the scheduled time at five minutes past noon. Amid cheers and hurrahs and a waving of hats, Mr. Bryan stepped from his car, smiling and happy, as one returning to his friends. Mayor Ward grasped his hand and welcomed him to Birmingham.

Then came Mrs. Bryan, and in honor of her another volume of cheers. She bowed cordially in gracious acknowledgment. Escorted to the station entrance by J. A. Rountree, chairman of arrangements, she was immediately driven to the Hotel Hillman with Mrs. John W. Tomlinson.



HON. WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN,

Bryan Takes Carriage.

Mr. Bryan and Mayor Ward, with Congressman H. D. Clayton and Colonel Tomlinson, made their way to the first of the long line of carriages, all of which by now were crowded with members of the reception committee—some three to the seat.

First in the column came platoons of mounted police, next Memoli's band and Troop D and Howard College cadets.

Then to the music of the band the parade moved off.

Thousands upon thousands of men were lined up on the streets to greet Mr. Bryan and witness the parade.

After a short line of march the column reached the Hotel Hillman in good order.

At the hotel a general reception, to last one hour, was to have been held, but owing to the lateness of arrival the reception was dispensed with and Mr. Bryan and those holding tickets to the luncheon were ushered into the dining hall.

The Luncheon.

Three hundred persons, including many fair women, sat at the festal board. While the event was entirely informal and altogether democratic, the flower of the chivalry of Alabama and many of the most charming of the gentle sex were present. It was a most delightful repast, and in genuine enjoyment surpassed any social feasting of recent years.

From the hotel Mr. Bryan and his escort proceeded to the Bijou Theatre for the public speaking. The doors of the Bijou were thrown open at 3 o'clock and the house was quickly filled. It was after 4 when Mr. Bryan arrived. The house was packed, and although the crowd had waited more than an hour it was good natured and gave the distinguished guest a splendid ovation when he hove in sight.

Mr. Bryan's Speech.

After the introductions by Mr. John W. Tomlinson and Congressman Heflin Mr. Bryan among other things said:

Ladies and Gentlemen—I regret that the delay of the train has shortened by some two hours the visit which I am making to you. I cannot express the appreciation that I feel for the kindly greetings that Alabama has accorded us.

I appreciate the fact that you have gathered from all over this state to make glad the coming of one who needs no additional testimonials to your good will, and who comes not so much with the expectation that he can do you good as with the confidence that I can gather inspiration here for work in other portions of the country. It is pleasant to meet again the faces with which I have become familiar; it is kind of our member of the national committee to be here to welcome me, and kind of that good friend, who can be counted among the original Bryan men, Mr. Tomlinson, to represent you.

In the time that I have to speak to you it is not possible to discuss all that I would like to discuss. So many things crowd for utterance on such an occasion I need not argue questions with you, for you are already convinced. Let me bring you rather words of encouragement. In this state you feel satisfied that democracy can triumph, and you feel satisfied also with the quality of the democracy that triumphs here.

I am proud of Alabama, proud of the type of democracy that she presents, but possibly it may encourage you to know that the democracy for which you fight is not confined to Alabama. The great underlying principles for which you contend are not confined even to the United States. The democracy idea is a world-wide idea, and there is not a nation in the world where that doctrine is not at work.

The Trusts.

I deny that a trust is an economic advantage; I deny that it is a gain to the public, even from the point of cheapness to have all these industries under a few men. Today a man working for wages has a hope of independence; he hopes to make a little progress this year, to stand higher next year, and he tells his wife that they will economize and save and lay away, and that after a while he will start a plant of his own and be his own master. But you put everything under one head, and then the man at the bottom cannot see as far as the top. He does not have the encouragement to save, he does not have the ambition to strive, and I believe if we took this hope and ambition out of the heart of our workingmen we would degrade our laborers to the condition of industrial inactivity. But if you could convince me that I could buy cloth cheaper if I would consent to the establishment of these great monopolies, I would refuse the cloth at the price, because you cannot have this cheapness without having a destruction of industrial independence.

The trust representatives have talked so frankly that you all ought to know what is in prospect. The son of John D. Rockefeller, defending the trusts, used the best illustration that has yet been used. He said that as the American Beauty rose could only be brought to its perfection by pinching off ninety-nine buds, that the strength of the bush might flow into the remaining bud, and so it was impossible to bring great industrial enterprises to perfection without the pinching off of the weaker ones and smaller ones—a frank illustration—a candid statement—a brutal illustration. I had rather have a hundred flowers, that they might give fragrance to a hundred homes, than just have one flower with its fragrance monopolized by one home. And instead of a few great trusts, whose managers would send unearned wealth from generation to generation, while other people toiled without prospect of rise, I had rather have hundreds and thousands and tens of thousands independent industries each one giving hope to thousands of men daily.

Mr. Bryan also spoke at considerable length upon government ownership, besides many other important question of the day, and closed his speech with a discussion of imperialism.

Mr. Bryan went from the Bijou to Gelders' Hall, where he addressed a group of wage-workers, and after dining quietly with Colonel and Mrs. Tomlinson at 8 o'clock left at midnight for Jackson, Miss.

Big Sale.

Gadsden, Ala.—Deeds were filed in the probate office transferring an entire block and a half in the business center of the city. The property embraces the block between Second and Third streets and Chestnut and Broad now occupied by the car barns of the street railway company, the Ward-Walter Manufacturing Company and the old Central Foundry Company. The size of the lot is 400x250 feet. On the opposite side of Second street the purchasers acquired a strip 250x50 feet, and on Chestnut street, opposite the first block, another piece of property 150x125 feet, fronting on Chestnut.

Statement on New Railroad Plans.

Huntsville, Ala.—Capt. Thomas M Stegar, president of the Nashville and Huntsville railroad, has issued a prospectus of his company, showing the status of the matter, the connections at both terminals, the value of the road and the probable business that will be done. The company will be capitalized at $3,000,000, and a bond issue of $2,000,000 will be made. The trust company that has agreed to take the bonds requires that $250,000 of the stock be subscribed by people in Huntsville and Nashville and along the line between the two cities. When this is done work of construction will begin. The projected route passes through one of the richest sections of the south that has no railroad facilities.

State Normal School Opens.

Jacksonville, Ala.—The twenty-fourth session of the Jacksonville State Normal School opened Tuesday, the 18th, with the largest enrollment in the history of the school, being 60 per cent over that of last year. Over fifty counties are now represented, with students daily arriving, and the school will be taxed to its full capacity. The opening exercises were informal. Several leading citizens and business men of the town delivered welcome addresses to the student body, and all are enthusiastic over the bright outlook for this session.

Two Cotton Conventions.

Montgomery, Ala.—Two cotton growers' conventions will be held in Montgomery Tuesday.

The convention of the Alabama division of the Southern Cotton Association will be followed by a called meeting of the Montgomery county division of the association, at which several important matters will be taken up, including the project for the construction of co-operation cotton warehouses in Montgomery county.

"The county division will hold a meeting after the state convention adjourns Tuesday," said County Secretary Charles L. Gay. "Rapid progress is now making in the warehouse movement, and we have a good man in view whom we wish to place in charge of this work. This will all be brought before the county convention."

President W. H. Seymour, of the Alabama division, was busy completing arrangements for the state convention. He is urging every county to send a large delegation, as he believes the occasion does not often occur when the people have the opportunity of hearing such well-informed and earnest speakers as President Harvie Jordan, E. D. Smith, of South Carolina, and S. A. Witherspoon, of Mississippi.

Dr. Jackon Is Dead.

Montgomery, Ala.—Dr. Walter C. Jackson, one of Montgomery's oldest and best known physicians, died at 1:45 o'clock Sunday morning after an illness lasting only three days. Notwithstanding his age, until a few days ago Dr. Jackson was able to walk about, and his death comes as a great surprise to the many people of the city who have known and loved him.

New Province.

Rome.—The propaganda has issued a proposal for the formation of a new ecclesiastical province, to be composed of the diocese of Galveston, Dallas and San Antonio, and the vicariate-apostolic of Brownsville, Tex. The new province will be created "Diocese of the new province of Texas," with headquarters at Galveston. Nicholas A. Gallagher, bishop of Galveston, is to be made archbishop of the new diocese.

Postmasters Appointed.

Washington, D. C.—Postmasters appointed: Arthur, Lauderdale county, John A. Green; Goethite, Tuscaloosa county, Robert E. McCormick; Granger, Houston county, Felix S. Long; St Elmo, Mobile county, R. M. Dodge.

Mission Goes to Fez.

Tangier, Morocco.—The German mission to the Sultan at Fez, headed by Dr. Rosen, the German minister, left here for the capital.

Hobson at Jasper.

Jasper, Ala.—Capt. Richmond Pearson Hobson, candidate for congress from the Sixth district, spoke to a good sized audience at the court house here. Captain Hobson was introduced by Jack Moore, chairman of the Walker county democratic executive committee. The speaker was given close attention and his remarks were received with the enthusiasm usually accorded them.

RACE RIOT

Negroes Dragged From Street Cars and Beaten to Death. Citizens Are Furious.

EIGHT COMPANIES OF MILITIA

Called Out by Governor, but They Are Only Jeered at by Crowds as They Appear on Streets.

Atlanta, Ga.—Four attempts at assault on white women by negroes within or near the limits of the city wrought white citizens here to a high pitch of excitement Saturday night. The assaults of Saturday followed two others of a similar nature within the past week, and at least half a dozen others within the last two months, and brought a climax Saturday night.

At midnight Governor Terrell issued an order calling out eight companies of the Fifth Infantry and one battery of light artillery. This order was not issued until three negroes had been killed and fifteen taken to the hospitals, five of whom will die. These include only those cases of which the police have official knowledge.

The local newspaper men claim the number of dead is larger.

Pull Negroes From Street Cars and Beat Them.

The mob began its work in the evening, pulling negroes from street cars and beating them with clubs, bricks and stones. Black men and women innocently riding to their homes after the work of the day were ruthlessly torn from the cars or attacked on the streets. In a few cases negroes retaliated during the early part of the night, but after 10 o'clock they were scarce in public places.

The fire department was called out to disperse the mob on Decatur street, a street most frequented by negroes, and for a time seemed to hold the crowd at bay. The police reserves were called out and held the fort until the troops could be mobilized.

The mob seemed to lack leadership, and this doubtless prevented greater slaughter.

Takes Form of Active and Bitter Race War.

The disturbance here has taken the form of an active and bitter race war. The incidents of the day, which were given in numerous extras by the local papers early Saturday evening, added immensely to the usual Saturday night crowds on the streets. A negro walking along Whitehall street, the principal shopping section, was attacked about 7 o'clock, beaten and escaped with few clothes.

The news of this attack spread rapidly, and within a few moments the appearance of a negro was the signal for a riot. The negroes scattered from the streets, going to their homes by back alleys, or flocked to Decatur street, the home of the tougher negro element.

Barber Shop Stormed and One Man Killed.

Soon street cars were attacked and negroes going to their homes were taken from the cars and beaten, stamped upon and in several cases fatally hurt. The barber shops where negroes were employed next became objects of attack. One of the hardest fights of the night took place about the postoffice. A negro barber shop across the street was the object of attack, and in less time than it takes to tell the shop was wrecked and the negroes were beaten, one to death, the other proprietors escaping by aid of the police.

Hard Fight Near Terminal Station.

On Peters street, near the Terminal railroad station, a hard fight took place. This was started by a negro shooting at the crowd below from a second story window. A brick hit him and he fell back and died in a few moments. One negro who was found with a pistol in his hands was beaten to death on the Forsyth street viaduct, in the center of the city and a block from the Associated Press office.

At 1:30 a. m. the down-town streets are quiet, occasionally a member of the local militia passes and is jeered and hooted by the mob. The possibility of retaliation by the negroes is among the serious things discussed in the streets and newspaper offices.

Tobacco Growers Meet.

Nashville, Tenn.—Between 25,000 and 30,000 people are attending the annual rally of the dark tobacco growers of Tennessee and Kentucky at Guthrie, Ky. A barbecue and speechmaking were the features of the day. In the parade there were 1,500 negro tobacco planters in line.

Newfoundland Fishermen Aroused.

St. Johns, N. F.—The reported determination of the imperial government to override the colonial authorities and concede to the American commission the more liberal construction of the herring fishery laws asked on behalf of American fishermen has evoked much criticism here. Canada, it is said, may be a factor in the dispute, as she has for years enforced against Americans the law that Newfoundland now seeks to make effective.

FROM CANADA TO MEXICO

Harriman Plans System That Will Traverse the Entire Pacific Coast.

San Francisco, Cal.—It has been apparent for some time that Harriman was seeking to control the Pacific coast, and the Southern Pacific has announced the plans of the new coast line from Portland to San Francisco by the way of Eureka. The magnitude of the plans of Harriman have just been made public. When all has been completed he will have a railroad extending from the border of Canada to the heart of Mexico. It is announced that Harriman has succeeded in securing terminal right in the cities of Seattle and Tacoma.

The road from Portland to Seattle is now being built and will be completed in a year. This part of the line will compete with the Hill lines running from Portland to Seattle.

From Portland south along the coast the plans for a road have been in preparation by the officials of the Southern Pacific for some time. The line from San Francisco to Los Angeles is now in operation and will form another link in the long chain. From Los Angeles south the Sunset route will be used to Yuma, where the trains will turn along the shore of the Gulf of California to Guayamas to Gualayjara, which road is now building, and orders have been received to rush construction as much as possible. From Guadalayjara the next step will be to the City of Mexico, and Harriman will have a line down the entire length of the Pacific coast.

Will Enter by Force.

San Pedro, Cal.—A fleet of eight gasoline launches started for Avalon, Catalina Island, having on board several hundred passengers who are going over with the avowed intention of making a landing on the island without paying the $2.25 per head which the Banning Company, owners of the island, demanded.

Commodore H. B. Keller, owner of the launch San Diego, is in command of the expedition and it is in the nature of a retaliatory measure, as the Southern Pacific Company and the Banning Company, who control the wharves here, have refused to give the San Diego a berth. The men on the launches are armed with wire nippers to cut the barbed wire fences which the Banning Company has placed along the shores at Avalon.

The matter of making Avalon an open port has been in the courts for over a year.

Will Fight for Money.

New Orleans, La.—A letter stating that about half a dozen of Colonel Roosevelt's former Rough Riders now at Phoenix Ariz., wish to enlist in Cuba to fight in the present imbroglio was made public here by Sam H. Selp, of Chicago, owner of a Cuban tobacco plantation. Mr. Selp said that the letter came from a former captain of Rough Riders, who commanded the men now seeking to enlist, and that requested information as to which side paid the largest bounty for hired soldiers, the men having declared their intention to fight for the party paying the most money.

Weekly Holidays for Railroad Men.

Paris.—Although the railroads of France are specifically exempt from the operation of the Sunday rest law, the chairmen of the six leading railroad companies have notified Minister of Public Works Barthou that they have arranged to grant within eighteen months fifty-two holidays a year to their entire staffs, numbering 28,000 men.

The chairmen pointed out that it is impossible to make this day of rest fall on Sunday, but that it would come for the different men in rotation. The new system will place the railroad man on an equality with other workmen in the matter of holidays.

Mystery of Stolen Box.

Birmingham, Ala.—It is learned from an authentic source that the Jefferson county grand jury will continue the investigation of the stolen Lewisburg ballot box, containing the votes cast for Stiles and Higdon, candidates for sheriff.

According to this authoritative source the grand jury has investigated the matter to a certain extent, and the facts leading to a true bill are said to be fast crystallizing. During the recess this probing and investigating will be continued, and the jury expects to arrive at a conclusion immediately after reconvening, November 5.

Troops for Bulgarian Frontier.

Salonica.—Altogether 40,000 troops will be stationed along the Bulgarian frontier in the direction of Pal vith headquarters at Istip, ostensibly for maneuvers. Another army corps will concentrate at Damum and three battalions of artillery will be sent to Serres.

Four Executed.

Moscow.—Four young men who attempted to rob a store last Th and were condemned to death by drumhead court-martial, were The fifth member of the gang was sentenced to hard labor for life.

Riga.—A bomb was thrown from a window at General Sollogub, governor-general of the Baltic provinces. No one was injured, considerable property was Life.

By Mortimer Lewis.

Life's a thing of go and bustle, life's a thing of rush and bustle,
Life's a play of brain and muscle, life's all jump and buzz and whirr;
Life's a game at whose beginning all the world is set a-spinning,
That the very thought of winning is itself a splendid spur.

Life's a thing of rough-and-tumble, life's a thing of laugh and grumble,
Life's a thing of grab and fumble, life's a thing of jolt and jar;
Life's a stretch of daisied meadows, life's a place of giants and shadows,
Life's a thing of maids and widows, smiles and tears and [illegible] are.

Life's a thing of [illegible] millionaires and [illegible] ners,
Men who have and haven't [illegible] thing of riff-raff steal and [illegible]
Men who go their ways a-singing, men who go their ways a-scoffing,
Men who go their ways a-quaffing, men whose only thought is spoil.

Maidens wise and maidens witty, maidens beautiful and pretty,
Painted women—oh, the pity!—always changing yet the same.
Thing of low and high endeavor, thing of push and pull forever,
Game for dolts and players clever, thing of love and glee and shame.

But who plays the game a-loving, lifting, helping, never shoving,
Laughing, singing, turtle-diving through its jars and outs and ins,
With a wife and little laddie or wee lass to call him daddie,
Doesn't do so very badly, he's the chap who truly wins.

THE "WIDOW."

A Story of the Love of a Bird For Its Mate.

BY HOMER DAVENPORT, CARTOONIST.

By Homer Davenport, Cartoonist.

My farm has gotten so big that I am looked upon by all of my near and dear relatives as an object of pity. They think 200 acres devoted to the breeding of wild game birds is a little heavy. We try to console ourselves sometimes by the stories we get off from the farm, and think in a way that some of them may pay for the heavy loads of bird seed that drive in the gate.

The wild wood duck, the most beautiful of all ducks that fly the North American continent, migrate in Winter into Central and South America. They are trapped there in large numbers and shipped to Europe, and it is easier for you to purchase them in any numbers in Europe than it is in America. We have a rule at the farm, when shipments of water fowl arrive, the foreman takes and counts off the seven flight feathers at the point of one wing; then with a stout pair of shears he clips off that joint known as the flight joint. It doesn't disfigure the bird and they never make an attempt after that to fly, and can therefore be kept in open top fields or ponds, or aviaries as the case may be.

In pinioning a shipment of wood ducks that arrived one day, he neglected to hit the bone of one of the male's wings, just clipping off the feathers instead, so that when it shed out those stubs during the summer and new feathers grew in the fall, he was once more full winged. At that time Prof. Woods, of the Smithsonian Institute, Washington, was our guest; he had been there for several days studying the habits of the birds and animals; hurrying home one fall evening, the professor asked me if I knew that there was a wood duck there with full wings, a male. I told him that I did, and we walked down to the edge of the pond, a few feet from the house, to watch him as he was flying over the pond, evidently exercising himself, training for the migratory season.

I said, "Professor, I have been watching him for some days, and it has given me a new line of thought. I am wondering if the migratory habit or season is stronger than true love, because he is very happily mated with a little duck with a pinioned wing." Prof. Woods said, "That's strange, I have been thinking on the very same thing today, and I believe he will leave her in the fall a little later." I asked the professor if he thought it would ever come back, and he said he might, but if he did, he would likely come with some other fellow's wife.

When Prof. Woods left for Washington a few days later, he asked me to note carefully what did happen, and let him know. I am sorry that I don't know the exact day he left, although I was keeping a close watch, but on the 17th of November I noticed this very beautiful little widow floating around over the pond, melancholy and alone. Her plumage had actually taken on a darker cast, giving her the effect of widow's weeds. There were many other varieties of ducks

Harriman Plans System That Will Traverse the Entire Pacific Coast.

San Francisco, Cal.—It has been apparent for some time that Harriman was seeking to control the Pacific coast, and the Southern Pacific has announced the plans of the new coast line from Portland to San Francisco by the way of Eureka. The magnitude of the plans of Harriman have just been made public. When all has been completed he will have a railroad extending from the border of Canada to the heart of Mexico. It is announced that Harriman has succeeded in securing terminal right in the cities of Seattle and Tacoma.

The road from Portland to Seattle is now being built and will be completed in a year. This part of the line will compete with the Hill lines running from Portland to Seattle.

From Portland south along the coast the plans for a road have been in preparation by the officials of the Southern Pacific for some time. The line from San Francisco to Los Angeles is now in operation and will form another link in the long chain. From Los Angeles south the Sunset route will be used to Yuma, where the trains will turn along the shore of the Gulf of California to Guayamas to Guadalayjara, which road is now building, and orders have been received to rush construction as much as possible. From Guadalayjara the next step will be to the City of Mexico, and Harriman will have a line down the entire length of the Pacific coast.

Will Enter by Force.

San Pedro, Cal.—A fleet of eight gasoline launches started for Avalan, Catalina Island, having on board several hundred passengers who are going over with the avowed intention of making a landing on the island without paying the $2.25 per head which the Banning Company, owners of the island, demanded.

Commodore H. B. Keller, owner of the launch San Diego, is in command of the expedition and it is in the nature of a retaliatory measure, as the Southern Pacific Company and the Banning Company, who control the wharves here, have refused to give the San Diego a berth. The men on the launches are armed with wire nippers to cut the barbed wire fences which the Banning Company has placed along the shores at Avalon.

The matter of making Avalon an open port has been in the courts for over a year.

Will Fight for Money.

New Orleans, La.—A letter stating that about half a dozen of Colonel Roosevelt's former Rough Riders now at Phoenix Ariz., wish to enlist in Cuba to fight in the present imbroglio was made public here by Sam H. Selp, of Chicago, owner of a Cuban tobacco plantation. Mr. Selp said that the letter came from a former captain of Rough Riders, who commanded the men now seeking to enlist, and that it requested information as to which side paid the largest bounty for hired soldiers, the men having declared their intention to fight for the party paying the most money.

Weekly Holidays for Railroad Men.

Paris.—Although the railroads of France are specifically exempt from the operation of the Sunday rest law, the chairmen of the six leading railroad companies have notified Minister of Public Works Barthou that they have arranged to grant within eighteen months fifty-two holidays a year to their entire staffs, numbering in all 28,000 men.

The chairmen pointed out that it is impossible to make this day of rest fall on Sunday, but that it would come for the different men in rotation. This new system will place the railroad man on an equality with other workmen in the matter of holidays.

Mystery of Stolen Box.

Birmingham, Ala.—It is learned from an authentic source that the Jefferson county grand jury will continue the investigation of the stolen Lewisburg ballot box, containing the votes cast for Stiles and Higdon, candidates for sheriff.

According to this authoritative source the grand jury has investigated the matter to a certain extent, and the facts leading to a true bill are said to be fast crystallizing. During the recess this probing and investigating will be continued, and the jury expects to arrive at a conclusion immediately after reconvening, November 5.

Troops for Bulgarian Frontier.

Salonica.—Altogether 40,000 troops will be stationed along the Bulgarian frontier in the direction of Palanka, with headquarters at Istip, ostensibly for maneuvers. Another army corps will concentrate at Damumumal [illegible] and three battalions of artillery will be sent to Serres.

Four Executed.

Moscow.—Four young men who attempted to rob a store last Thursday and were condemned to death by drumhead court-martial, were executed. The fifth member of the gang was sentenced to hard labor for life.

Riga.—A bomb was thrown from a window at General Sollogub, governor-general of the Baltic provinces. No one was injured, but considerable property was damaged.

Life.

By Mortimer Lewis.

Life's a thing of go and bustle, life's a thing of rush and bustle,
Life's a play of brain and muscle, life's all jump and buzz and whirr;
Life's a game at whose beginning all the world is set a-spinning,
That the very thought of winning is itself a splendid spur.

Life's a thing of rough-and-tumble, life's a thing of laugh and grumble,
Life's a thing of grab and fumble, life's a thing of jolt and jar;
Life's a stretch of daisied meadows, life's a place of glints and shadows,
Life's a thing of maids and widows, smiles and tears, and there you are.

Life's a thing of self-styled winners, millionaires and saints and sinners,
Men who have and haven't dinners, thing of riff-raff, steal and toil;
Men who go their ways a-laughing, men who go their ways a-chaffing,
Men who go their ways a-quaffing, men whose only thought is spoil.

Maidens wise and maidens witty, maidens beautiful and pretty,
Painted women—oh, the pity!—always changing yet the same;
Thing of low and high endeavor, thing of push and pull forever,
Game for dolts and players clever, thing of love and glee and shame.

But who plays the game a-loving, lifting, helping, never shoving,
Laughing, singing, turtle-doving through its jars and outs and ins,
With a wife and little laddie or wee lass to call him daddie,
Doesn't do so very badly, he's the chap who truly wins.

THE "WIDOW."

A Story of the Love of a Bird For Its Mate.

BY HOMER DAVENPORT, CARTOONIST.

By Homer Davenport, Cartoonist.

My farm has gotten so big that I am looked upon by all of my near and dear relatives as an object of pity. They think 200 acres devoted to the breeding of wild game birds is a little heavy. We try to console ourselves sometimes by the stories we get off from the farm, and think in a way that some of them may pay for the heavy loads of bird seed that drive in the gate.

The wild wood duck, the most beautiful of all ducks that fly the North American continent, migrate in Winter into Central and South America. They are trapped there in large numbers and shipped to Europe, and it is easier for you to purchase them in any numbers in Europe than it is in America. We have a rule at the farm, when shipments of water fowl arrive, the foreman takes and counts off the seven flight feathers at the point of one wing; then with a stout pair of shears he clips off that joint known as the flight joint. It doesn't disfigure the bird and they never make an attempt after that to fly, and can therefore be kept in open top fields or ponds, or aviaries as the case may be.

In pinioning a shipment of wood ducks that arrived one day, he neglected to hit the bone of one of the male's wings, just clipping off the feathers instead, so that when it shed out those stubs during the summer and new feathers grew in the fall, he was once more full winged. At that time Prof. Woods, of the Smithsonian Institute, Washington, was our guest; he had been there for several days studying the habits of the birds and animals; hurrying home one fall evening, the professor asked me if I knew that there was a wood duck there with full wings, a male. I told him that I did, and we walked down to the edge of the pond, a few feet from the house, to watch him as he was flying over the pond, evidently exercising himself, training for the migratory season.

I said, "Professor, I have been watching him for some days, and it has given me a new line of thought. I am wondering if the migratory habit or season is stronger than true love, because he is very happily mated with a little duck with a pinioned wing." Prof. Woods said, "That's strange, I have been thinking on the very same thing today, and I believe he will leave her in the fall a little later." I asked the professor if he thought it would ever come back, and he said he might, but if he did, he would likely come with some other fellow's wife.

When Prof. Woods left for Washington a few days later, he asked me to note carefully what did happen, and let him know. I am sorry that I don't know the exact day he left, although I was keeping a close watch, but on the 17th of November I noticed this very beautiful little widow floating around over the pond, melancholy and alone. Her plumage had actually taken on a darker cast, giving her the effect of widow's weeds. There were many other varieties of ducks on the pond, and among them many wood ducks, and among the wood ducks were four males with pinioned wings without wives, whose only show in life lay if some fellow was kind enough or thoughtful enough to die or desert. This was their opportunity, and they swam up by her and showed off their finest plumage, to which she returned not a glance.

All winter long this went on. She wouldn't eat with the common herd, and had to be fed alone. She was waiting, waiting like Madam Butterfly, for one to return. I had forgotten about her, almost, when spring came.

On the tenth of April, peacocks and many of the varieties of pheasants gave the cry of hawks. Looking up we saw a speck in the sky, and as it came closer, the wild ducks on the pond and the cranes made loud noises, calling, circling closer and closer, and finally skating out on to the water surface, we saw, just as he raised his crest and whistled, that it was a large, wild wood duck. Hurrying across the pond, about a sixteenth of a mile away, came, as fast as she could scramble over the surface of the water, this beautiful little widow, until she left a crease on the surface that I don't think was obliterated for some days.

Such happiness, and demonstrations of affection, I doubt if you have ever seen in the human race. They climbed into one of the little rustic houses provided for them to nest in just above the water's surface. They couldn't find a house beautiful enough to build the nest they evidently had in mind. A new idea came to him, and he turned in and whipped every duck, goose and crane on the pond, and came back to her and stuck out his little red, speckled chest, and told her how easy it would be if she would only let him winter in the south.

It was in July, when a very dear friend of mine came to the farm, Mr. Hatch, the proprietor of Lord & Taylor. He said to me, "before you show me anything, I want to see that little widow." I said to him, "Mr. Hatch, I am satisfied that that's her in this bevy of wood ducks that's swimming towards us. I think that's her whose husband is so polite, who is bowing in front of her. I'll toss a clod and if he should fly up then the duck that he has left at his side is the little widow." I tossed the clod, and sure enough it was. He flew up eight or ten feet, and lit and hurried to her side, and apologized for being away from her for a second, and from what I have seen I don't believe she has even ever asked him a question.—Spot Light.

AN HEIRESS SELLS HARDWARE

A New Type of the Female Drummer Has Struck Denver.

There have been drummers of the female persuasion in Denver before, but Miss Sally Whitaker of St. Louis is the first of the "family" that ever struck town selling heavy hardware. Heavy hardware is made up of ugly pieces of steel and long strips of steel, and chunks of iron and the like. Miss Sally Whitaker thinks there is nothing quite so cute as heavy hardware. She just loves it. She says so herself. She would rather sell a man seven carloads of heavy hardware than go to the swellest function in her home town, in the swellest gown that the swellest modiste in town could make. Miss Sally makes this remarkable statement in great earnestness, but it cannot help being noted by anyone within sight, that Miss Sally believes in pretty dresses built in the latest mode.

"Selling heavy hardware is just the best of fun I ever had," continued Miss Sally. "You see, I began it all in a joke, and since have more than 'made good,' as you men say. And as I like the experience, traveling around the country for once without a chaperon, and I am at the same time making a good salary, I am just keeping it up.

"It was the greatest joke, the way I started. You know, my papa is a director in a hardware company in St. Louis. He has charge of all of the road salesmen. One day he came home all out of humor. I wanted a new hat and I didn't dare ask him for it. In the course of the dinner talk he said something about one of his salesmen resigning at the very last minute before going out on a trip. The trade all along the route had been informed that on such and such a date a representative of the firm would be in to see him.

"'Papa, why not let me go in his stead? I bet I could sell as much as he would,' said I. Papa wouldn't hear of such a thing at first. Neither would mamma. But I just argued them into it and I left the very next night. Papa says I made a record for the western territor felt very proud of myself and papa asked me if I wanted to another trip, this time east, I yes. And so that is the way I ed. I won't keep it up always; I haven't grown tired of the li far, and probably won't until I seen most of the country."—De Republican.

THE PULPIT.

A SCHOLARLY SUNDAY SERMON BY THE REV DR. F. W. GUNSAULUS.

Subject: The Shut Door.

New York City.—The Rev. Frank W. Gunsaulus, D. D., LL.D., of Chicago, is filling Dr. Donald Sage Mackay's pulpit in the Collegiate Church of St. Nicholas, and Sunday morning, to a very large congregation, he preached on "The Shut Door." His text was Matthew vi:4, "Shut the Door." Dr. Gunsaulus said:

I wish I could by some contrast impossible for me and possible only in the experience of your own hearts emphasize the difference between this command, as it comes to us loaded with infinite love, and the commands that come out of recollections of our childhood, that might give us some idea of the different texture of life, the life from which the heart is always moving into the infinite ranges of God's life, into which we are invited day by day. "Shut the Door." I think the instant demand, especially upon American life, with its swollen veins and arteries, its various confusions and starry look and stumbling feet, is to get out of the whirl and hear a voice speaking with deep, fine authority, saying to us as we go through life, with its cares, duties, amusements and contradictions, "Shut the door." This is the voice of Jesus. He is telling us the secret of prayer, in the closet—secret prayer in which the human soul comes alone into the presence of God; prayer in which man finds his true altitude and attitude; prayer in which alone a man is able to look into motives, perceiving the values of life, in which he gains his spiritual heredity and in which he assumes his sonship unto God through God's grace.

The one thing that Jesus seems most intent about, that you and I should enjoy the privilege of prayer and receive its benefits, is all explained and emphasized in these words, "Shut the door." We are living at a time when prayer is a fact and a force. The world of the materialist has passed: the world of the idealist is here. The scientists of today are telling us, "Let us pray." It is not strange that we should begin to realize the unifying and exalted influence of prayer upon man's mental life. What, after all, is there today in life, when life's issues are so profound and even tragic, that will unify all one's powers—the powers of the mind and of the affections—as will prayer? When I pray in secret I am unified as a man. If man is to be re-made, if he is to be made whole so that his various parts shall be no longer fragments, each afar from the other, he must be divinely unified. But, my brother, if that is to be your experience, "Let us pray." Here is the Master coming quietly from the fields of Galilee into your heart and mine, urging upon us, as the old, deep harmonies of the religions of all ages sweep into His soul, urging us, not only that we should pray, but pray alone. We see Him at Gethsemane, at the very crisis of His life, leaving Peter and James and John behind, and going alone to pray. I think the most significant announcement with regard to Saul, who was to become Paul, and his experience on the road to Damascus was made unconsciously by the one who said: "Behold, he prayeth." What an entire transformation! What a prophecy of his future!

Do you think that Christ is calling you to an easy task when He says: "Shut the door?" Do you even know the pathway back to the old closet of early days? The road is now all overgrown. But since that day there have grown up brambles over the pathway. First of all, we must find this path, if we are to find our manhood and womanhood. Is it not an astounding fact how little secret prayer there has been in our lives? How this passion for publicity has linked itself to our willingness to remain away from the secret place. True, a while ago, when we were in trouble, we found our way back. How sweet it was! But that was not secret prayer, for we did not "shut the door." It was prayer with the door wide open, through which we were looking back at the things from which we were trying to escape. You say, "I can get back to that place." Are you quite sure that you can? If so, "shut the door." How we like to peek out and see what the majority are thinking—how our neighbors feel about things. How we want the door just a little way open in order that we may hear the sounds of the claims of good causes, in which we are interested! Surely, there is nothing wrong about that. "Shut the door." Let us take the words of Jesus into our hearts to-day as simply as we can and sincerely accept them. "Shut the door." "Why, surely," you say, "that is something I can do with one hand, while I grasp other things with the other hand." No, both hands must be inside. There must be no effort to grasp things without. "Well," you say, "what shall I shut the door against, there are so many things [illegible]

[illegible] it will be because you neglected to put the anchor on board and your ship is at the mercy of the waves. "Shut the door."

After all the limitations of life that are serious are the limitations that come to us through loved ones. If there is one thing that a man needs, it is in some holy and grand way to be separated from these friends. I know of no other right, gentle and loving way but the way of prayer, and as I shut the door. Inside of that door I will never lose my power of friendship, my soul's friendship is real, lighting her altar fires for her friend, and when the prayer is over and the door open my friendship will be tenderer and deeper and I shall say, "My own, dear friend, I come back to you with a friendship that is all divine. Thou art my friend. I have been inside where the door was shut."

I wonder where this door is to be found. I wonder, sometimes, when I try to have a secret moment in my own life, if there might not have been a second meaning in the word when He said: "I am the door." For surely there is nothing in this universe responsive enough, great enough to shut everything else out and to shut the soul in—great enough in tenderness—so that the slightest touch of an infant soul will "shut the door." Here is the authority of Jesus Christ. No one knew the world outside as He knew it; no one knows the world inside as He knows it; no one else will take my thoughts, my feelings, my soul; no one else can shut the world out and the soul in. Here is a man who has been trying to pray and shut the door as Jesus told him to do. It takes more intellect to shut that door than to write Hindustanee or Shakespeare; more character than to marshall an army and lead it to battle. No muscular power will do it; no intellectual refinement or process of philosophical investigation, no wealth. Ah, you will have to leave your wealth outside. "Shut the door." It is only the man in the grandeur of his solitude, in the presence of God, when he means more to God than ever before, it is only then that finally he gets the door shut—just because Jesus is our entrance. He is the door. I realize, day by day, how finite He is when I touch Him; how infinite He is when He touches me.

How about that past? There it is. Nothing rankles more than man's past, that will lift its head up and say: "Ah, here I am. Look at me. I know you. I have heard you pray before. Those hands, I know where they have been. That heart. I know how dark it is." Have you ever tried to shut the door against a past like that? Have you ever known what it is to have the past hiss and sting? Sometimes you think you have the door shut, but oh, how that past, that seems a giant, fully armed, too big to get into the door, suddenly transforms, flattens itself out, lies like a serpent, and by and by you hear it wiggling at the door, hissing. Oh, I must have a door accurately fitting, that whether the past slithers like a serpent or comes like a giant, I can shut that door. Oh, how at last the soul takes hold of one thing and severs all from the past, and that one thing is Jesus Christ.

I am interested in men's problems. Do you know anything that is interesting enough in this world to keep the past out, except Jesus Christ? Is there anything that so appeals to your interest that you actually turn your back upon the past and say: "I have a present. Thank God. I have a present. I am looking to Him who says, 'Follow Me.' He has never yet told us we have followed Him too far. Since He says that, and as long as my heart pulses and as long as my will keeps in harmony with Him, I have a future." Your past is out of doors; your present and your future here, simply because you have "shut the door." I tell you, brethren, the manliest, the grandest, the greatest thing you can do this morning is simply to accept Jesus Christ as the door into the communion. The door moves upon such hinges of love that you need but to say: "I am a sinner: I want to be alone with God," to start it moving—to get in, with the past outside. My friends I will look for them by and by. And my enemies? I want to conquer only one of them. I want to be alone. I will "shut the door." May God's holy Spirit, who is here this morning, quicken every heart. Get back this very day—now, and "shut the door." You need not be afraid that the world will lose anything. You will be a better man when you go out, with a whiter face, cleaner hands, a more loving and a braver heart. "Shut the door."

Dependence on God.

Our heavenly Father keeps us constantly in the condition of uttermost dependence on Him. Were it otherwise with us how wanton would we become. Therefore, He writes the sentence of death upon ourselves, and also upon our choicest temporal mercies—not that He always means to remove them, but to hold them as a special gift from Him; and, despairing of all succor but His own, that we should place our trust not on self, not on valued fellow-creatures, but on God, who can raise up to help us even the very dead (2 Cor. 1:8-10). He is considering our weakness, and our need, and our work; and in perfect wisdom and love has already arranged for the very best.

The Only Hindrance.

What hinders that you should be a child of God? Is not salvation free? Is not the invitation to it hung out to you on every page of the New Testament? Is not Christ offered to you in all His offices, and are you not welcome to all His benefits if you want them? Is not the Holy Spirit promised to them that ask Him? Nothing can hinder you from being a Christian, but your own worldly, selfish, proud, obstinate, unworthy and self-righteous heart.—Ichabod Spencer.

Take God With Us.

To enjoy God and heaven it does not require that we wait till the last touch of death reveals all things in the light of eternity. We may take God and heaven along with us every day, and carry their peace and glory into all the dull and prosaic scenes of earth.—Thomas Lathrop.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR SEPTEMBER 30.

Temperance Lesson, Gal. v., 15-26, Gal. vi., 7, 8—Golden Text, Prov. xx., 1—Memory Verses, 7, 8—Topic: Life Contrasts.

I. The Spirit and the flesh at enmity (vs. 15-18). 15. "If ye bite and devour." In contrast to the love of verses 13, 14. These are terms drawn from the habits of wild beasts in the order of climax. Bite designates the momentary outbursts; devour, the steady purpose of injury; consume, the final result probable to both parties. "Take heed," etc. As wild beasts contend sometimes until both are slain. The idea is that in their contentions they would destroy the spirituality and happiness of each other; their characters would be ruined; the church would be overthrown.

16. "This I say then." Having pointed out the effects of violating the law of love, the apostle now proceeds to show how this law may be obeyed. "Walk." This word is often equivalent to "live." "In the Spirit." This is differently explained: 1. By, or according to the rule of the Spirit. 2. By the guidance of the Spirit. 3. By the help of the Spirit. Notice. 1. The antagonism between the Holy Spirit in all that he is and produces, and the flesh with its appetites and works. 2. The certainty of victory over the flesh to all those who walk in or by the Spirit. "Shall not fulfil." The strongest negative possible. Ye shall in no wise fulfil. If the Spirit of God dwell in and rule your heart, the whole carnal mind will be destroyed; and then, not only carnal ordinances will be abandoned, but also the works and propensities of the flesh. "Lust." Desires. "Flesh." That is, the evil impulses which have their seat in the body. 17. "Flesh lusteth against the Spirit." The two are antagonistic; each seeks to control the man and be supreme. One or the other rules in every soul.

18. "But." This internal strife may be ended. "Be led." By submitting to the Spirit and by following His drawings. "Not under the law." Not under the restraints of the Mosaic law or dispensation, but under the control of the Spirit.

II. The works of the flesh (vs. 19-21). 19. "Works of the flesh." The works which are done when the man exalts the flesh and its desires to a controlling influence.

20. "Idolatry." The worship of false deities. "Witchcraft." Or sorcery. The use of charms, incantations, etc., to produce preternatural effects. "Variance." Strife; a disposition to dissent. "Emulations." Jealousies, rivalry, endeavoring to excel at the expense of another. "Strife." "Factions." R. V. "Heresies." Parties. Nothing is more in line with the selfish, independent, fleshly nature than strife, contention, factions and parties in the church. 21. "Murders." Omitted in the Revised Version. But if not rightly in the text it is certainly one of the works of the flesh. "Drunkenness, revelings." These are the sins that follow the indulgence of appetite. Revelings include drinking, feasting, dancing, ribald songs and debauchery in general. The seeds or possibilities of all these sins are in every unregenerate heart. Many of them may lie dormant for a time; many may never come into actual life; but under favoring circumstances, away from restrains, they will appear in the life and character. Every one of these evils is promoted and encouraged by the use of intoxicating liquors. Intemperance excites every evil passion, arouses wrath and hatred, leads to murders, is the friend of revelings. Intemperance is a work of the flesh. It exalts the flesh above the Spirit.

III. The fruit of the Spirit (vs. 22-26). 22. "Fruit of the Spirit." The fruit of the Spirit is one, yet manifold. He who has the Spirit of Christ has in him the root of all Christian graces.

23. "Temperance." Self control in the gratification of appetites. While this includes the abstinence from strong drink it must not be limited to this. "No law." There is no law to condemn those whose lives are adorned by these virtues.

24. "Have crucified." The apostle uses the strong figure of crucifixion to show how completely Christians—those "that are Christ's"—have forsaken and renounced the old life. They are dead to sin.

25. "Live in the Spirit." The Revised Version has "by the Spirit" in both clauses. That is, if we have entered into a spiritual life, let us continue in that life. 26. "Let us not," etc. The apostle again points which were destroying their spiritual life.

IV. Sowing and reaping (vs. 7, 8). 7. "Be not deceived." This is a warning against self-deception, which, strange as it may seem, is common. "Not mocked." God is not deceived or deluded. "Soweth—reap." This is a universal law of God's government which He will not relax.

8. "To his flesh." He that gratifies his carnal desires and lives a life of ease and self-indulgence. "Reap corruption." A strong figure. He will reap ruin and spiritual death. A course of self-indulgence corrupts the moral nature and ends in destruction. "To the Spirit." He who follows and obeys the Spirit. "Life everlasting." In this promise is included all that God has provided for His people in the world to come.

$1,000,000 Loss From Rains.

Reports received from various points in northeast Nebraska show that the losses from the heavy rains may reach $1,000,000. Cattle and hogs were drowned, buildings swept away, railroad tracks washed out and much other damage done.

"A DANGEROUS PRACTICE.

Burning Off Paint Makes Insurance Void.

It seems that considerable danger to property exists in the practice of burning off old paint before repainting. The question has long been a subject of debate in the technical journals, and now house-holders and the newspapers have begun to discuss it. Those of us who, with trembling, have watched the painters blow a fiery blast from their lamps against our houses, and have looked sadly at the size of our painting bill because of the time wasted on this preliminary work, are interested in the investigation by the Greenfield (Mass.) Gazette and Courier, which gives considerable space to the reasons for the practice, questions its necessity and suggests ways to prevent the risk of burning down one's house in order to get the old paint off. It says:

"There is a good deal of discussion among house-holders as to the desirability in painting houses, of burning off the old paint, a practice that has grown very common of late in Greenfield and elsewhere. Insurance men are strongly opposed to this method. It makes void insurance policies for fires caused in this manner. Several houses in Greenfield have gotten afire as the result of this method, and in some places houses have burned as a result.

"It is undoubtedly true that when a house has been painted over and over again there comes to be an accumulation of paint in bunches. If new paint is put on top of these accumulations it is almost sure to blister. To burn it off is the quickest and cheapest and perhaps the surest method of getting rid of this old paint."

The Gazette and Courier quotes certain old patrons to the effect that accumulations of paint are unnecessary. These old-timers lay the blame partly on the painter who fails to brush his paint in well, partly on the custom of painting in damp weather or not allowing sufficient time for drying between coats, and partly to the use of adulterated paints instead of old-fashioned linseed oil and pure white lead. The paper says:

"Many of the older house-holders say that if care is taken at all these points, it is absolutely unnecessary to have paint burned off. They advise that people who have houses painted should buy their own materials, and to have them put on by the day, so as to be sure to get good lead and oil. Of course the burning off of paint greatly increases the cost of the job."

The trouble house-holders everywhere have with paint is pretty well summed up by our contemporary, and the causes are about the same everywhere. By far the most frequent cause of the necessity for the dangerous practice of burning old paint is the use of poor material. The oil should be pure linseed and the white lead should be real white lead. The latter is more often tampered with than the oil. Earthy substances, and pulverized rock and quartz, are frequently used as cheapeners, to the great detriment of the paint.

Painters rarely adulterate white lead themselves and they very seldom use ready prepared paints—the most frequent causes of paint trouble. But they do often buy adulterated white lead because the property owner insists on a low price and the painter has to economize somewhere. The suggestion is therefore a good one that the property owner investigate the subject a little, find out the name of some reliable brand of white lead, and see that the keg is marked with that brand.

The linseed oil is more difficult to be sure of, as it is usually sold in bulk when the quantity is small; but reliable makers of linseed oil can be learned on inquiry and, if your dealer is reliable, you will get what you want.

Pure white lead and linseed oil are so necessary to good paint that the little trouble necessary to get them well repays the house owner in dollars and cents saved.

According to Edwin Markham in Success Magazine, never before was there so much study of poetry and the drama. This is due to the modern extension of education and to the spread of reading matter among the masses. Poetry is not the fashion of an hour: it is an eternal need of the soul—a need that increases with the increase of intellectual light.

The New York World thinks the utmost vigilance in protecting the people from poisoning by adulterated food and drugs is needed. But the actual damage done by all other food adulterants and sophistications combined is perhaps less than that fairly ascribed to bad milk alone. With pure milk and a pure water supply the modern city community has gone a long way toward guaranteeing general health.

It is only Paris that could be expected to serve horse meat as lark pie. A man who can tell lark from horse after a Parisian chef has had his way with both would face no competition in a test to choose a universal taster.

Carl Daenzer is Dead.

St. Louis.—Carl Daenzer, the senior of the German-American press, died Saturday at the age of 86 in Germany, where he had spent the last few years since his retirement from the editorship of the Anzeiger Des Westens, the oldest newspaper in the West. He was one of the original incorporators of the old Western Associated Press, predecessor of the Associated Press of today.

EX-CONGRESSMAN Richard H. Clarke died of pneumonia at St. Louis on Tuesday.

THE cost of the election to Hon. B. B. Comer, candidate for governor, was $8 499.96.

THE Republican state executive committee, at a meeting at Birmingham, Tuesday, decided this was not an opportune time to put out a state ticket.

THE Alabama division of the S. C. A. held an enthusiastic meeting at Montgomery. Tuesday, presided over by Pres. W. H. Seymour.

A capital speech was delivered by E. D. Smith, of S. Carolina, and he was followed by Congress man J. T. Heflin.

It was decided to form a stock company to hold over the surplus cotton in order the staple may be sold at its real value. Nearly $9,000 was subscribed at the meeting, among the subscribers being P. D. Wilson, of Clanton, who subscribed $500, and W. W. Rutland, of Verbena, $10.

The Chilton county delegation embraced F. A. Gulledge, Judson Strock, W. W. Rutland, E. H. Parrish, M. J. Parrish, R. F. Killingsworth, W. H. Conway, P. D. Wilson and Frank Crichton.

THE city of Atlanta, Ga., last Saturday night suffered from a paroxysm of rage and for several hours the mob ran wild throughout the streets. Some sixteen colored men and one white man are reported dead, while about thirty more were injured. The numerous attacks recently of colored men upon white women in and around Atlanta has aroused a deep feeling of indignation and horror among the citizens which found its vent on Saturday night, and the fair city was for a time in the hands of a lawless mob. In vain Mayor Woodward appealed to the crowd; the fire brigade drenched them with water, and after several hours of lawlessness, quiet was restored.

OF all the horrors that can be imagined, the vile attack of a brute of a negro upon a helpless white woman is by far the worst. The black beast, in his lustful craving, has no thought of the terrible sin he is committing, no compunction for his victim, no pity for the defenseless woman, but heedless of consequences, attacks her, and too often accomplishes his purpose. White men, husbands, fathers and brothers of the loved ones dependant upon them, leaving them in fancied security at home, are goaded to desperation upon these villianous attacks upon their women, and losing all reason, give way to an ungovernable display of rage and hatred, and a race war is the result, in which the innocent suffer with the guilty.

The riot in Atlanta is a most deplorable affair, but so long as negro brutes give way to their bestral passion, so long will white men avenge their wrongs—regardless of law and order, regardless of consequences to themselves, regardless of the opinion of the world.

Maplesville.

On last Thursday morning our town was very much shocked to learn of the death of Mr. Wheeler Foshee of Belle Sumter, formerly of this place. His remains were brought here and followed to his last resting place by a large concourse of sorrowing relatives and friends. The funeral service was conducted by Bro. Connell of Stanton. Mr. Foshee was 26 years old; he was the son of Adline and the late N. W. Foshee of this place. He leaves a mother, two brothers, Messrs. Hill and Calhoun Foshee; and a sister, Mrs. Dr. Parnell, all of this place. Mr. Foshee was a young man of many sterling qualities; he was a splendid business man, of a genial and sunny disposition and made many friends. To his mother he was a most devoted son, always having her happiness and comfort in mind. He was a member of Mulberry church, having given his heart to God in early youth. The out of town relations who came to attend the funeral were Mrs. Sallie Snead and Mrs. Maggie James of Centreville, Mr. Joe Smitherman of Belle Sumter, Mrs. Jones of Bessemer.

On Saturday morning last we were again saddened to learn of the death of Mrs. Will Bolling. who, after an illness of several weeks, died at the hospital in Selma, where she had been carried for treatment. Mrs. Bolling was a most excellent woman, a kind neighbor, a devoted wife and mother and she will be greatly missed from among us. She was a member of Cox's Chapel M. E. church; was laid to rest at the Maplesville cemetery, the funeral services being conducted by Bro Davis of Plantersville. She leaves a husband and three daughters to mourn her loss, Mrs. Ike Guin of Wilton, Miss Mamie Bolling and Miss Nettie Bolling, both of this place. Among the out of town relatives who attended the funeral of Mrs. Bolling were Mr. and Mrs. Reubin Beardon, Mr. and Mrs. Tener Jones, all of Selma. SUBSCRIBER.

Maplesville, Sept. 25, 1906

Editor Banner—I ask a short space in your paper to make some remarks relative to an article which appeared in last week's Banner signed by Arthur D. Latham, of Lawley, Alabama. In this article Mr. Latham makes a savage attack upon the character of some man who is a candidate for sheriff by stating that the candidate was out at the baptising under the influence of strong drink and with a buggy full of beer and whiskey. Were I to act according to my own feelings I would treat this article with the silent contempt which it rightly deserves, but realizing that I was the only candidate for sheriff present on this occasion, and feeling it a duty that I owe to my friends throughout the county to clear up all charges which seemingly would put a stain on my character, I hereby denounce the article as maliciously false. I can and will establish by reliable men that I had neither beer nor whiskey in my buggy, with me on that day.

Another reason that causes me to give notice to this pernicious article is that after I had seen the publication I went to Mr. Latham and he admitted that it was directed at me. Latham admitted to me in the presence of George F. Stringer and Robert Hicks that he did not see me with any whiskey that day, or other intoxicants, and that he did not detect the fumes of whiskey on my breath or notice anything about me that indicated intoxication. He further admitted that he never in his life seen me take a drink; he said further that he based his statement upon what some small boys had told him and he regretted very much having written the article. I desire to state further that I was in the company of Mr. W. Y. Nix during the greater part of that day and he bears me out in the statement that the Latham article is false.

It would seem that a man who would walk so conspicuously the path of righteousness that Mr. Latham pretends to do would be slow to slander the character of any man especially when it is based upon the talk of idle boys. It is not my intention to have more to say about this matter and I am sure that this statement will satisfy the impartial voters of this county.

CLANTON GIN COMPANY.

CLANTON, ALA.

As cotton ginning season is on hand again, we wish to call the attention of the farmers of Chilton county to the excellent equipment of our new ginnery. In erecting the building we spared neither money nor labor to make it the best in the county, and we think it is conceded to be so. In purchasing the machinery, we took advantage of the experience of gin manufacturers, thereby getting the very best machinery: and we feel that, as a result, we have an outfit that is likewise unexcelled in the county. Not claiming, as some of our ungracious competitors have in the past to have a cotton thrash and a score of other things unknown to cotton ginning, but claiming to have a simple system outfit, as most of our ginneries are, although in this outfit claiming to have the best that money can buy, all its parts being heavy and able to stand any strain to which they are subjected in making turnout and sample. We propose to give as good work as is possible on modern ginning machinery.

Someone with more regard for his own selfish ends than for the truth has circulated the report that we would raise the price of ginning to 40 cents per hundred this season, we emphatically deny this, and will say for the benefit of those who may have believed this report, that when we have raised the price of ginning, be assured our competitors have gone up too.

We are now perfectly ready for work, having ginned several bales, and heartily solicit the patronage of cotton growers, and as some of you perhaps have seen in the past, we stand head in the seed market, and entreat that you give us a call when you have seed to sell.

Letter to T. M. Pyron.

Clanton, Ala.

Dear Sir: There's twice as much horse in one horse—it may be a mare—as there is in two or three others together.

So with paints too. If a painter can do your job with 10 gallons Devoe for $50; it'll take 12 15 or 20 of other paints; and the cost of a job is about $5 a gallon, whatever the paint may be.

There are paints adulterated three quarters—only one quart of paint in a gallon—he's got to paint four gallons of rubbish to get one gallon of paint. The worst horse you've got is as good as that paint, and he'll go as far.

The less-gallons paint is the paint, as the most horse horse is the horse.

Yours truly

In these days of rush and hurry courtesy is often forgotten. In the mad, pell mell rush of our life little things are done to offend that we rather remained undone. A hastily eaten meal and its resultant headache may cause us social or financial loss. The wise man or woman is the one who relieves little ills of this sort by a dose of Kodol For Dyspepsia. It digests what you eat and puts your stomach back into shape. Sold by Upchurch Drug co.

NOTICE.

To the Churches of the Chilton County Association—Greeting:

I have sent blank associational letters to the clerks of all the churches of this Association except two, viz: Pleasant Hill and Thorsby, not knowing the names of the clerks, I could not send the letters. If the clerks will write me, I will gladly send them. The Association meets at Pilgrim's Rest, near Pletcher on M. & O. Oct. 17 and 18. I earnestly hope that the churches will use the blanks, send up a full quota of messengers and endeavor to do all they can for the great work fostered by our denomination. P. G. MANESS, Mod.

The Breath of Life.

It's a significant fact that the strongest animal of its size, the gorilla, also has the largest lungs. Powerful lungs means powerful creatures. How to keep the breathing organs right should be man's chiefest study. Like thousand of others, Mrs. Ora A. Stephen, of Port Williams, O., has learned to do this. She writes: "Three bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery stopped my cough of two years and cured me of what my friends thought consumption. O, its grand for throat and lung troubles." Guaranteed by Upchurch Drug co., druggist. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

Congregational Church Appointments

Rev. A. T. Clarke will visit churches of the Clanton conference as follows:

Fourth Sunday, September 23, Mountain Springs church, Clanton, in the morning; Shady Grove, Verbena, at night.

Fifth Sunday, September 30, Kingston.

Firts Sunday October 7, Union church Lightwood, in the morning; Pleasant Hill church, Marbury, at night.

Second Sunday October 14, Pine Grove church, Deatsville, in the morning; South Calera, at night.

A REMARKABLE SKIN BEAUTIFIER.
Health, Beauty and a Clear, Complexion Through Laxakola Tonic Tablets.

"In all the years we have been in business," say Florence Drug co., "we do not recall ever selling anything that has aroused so much interest among our lady customers, and not a day passes but we hear of some one greatly benifitted through using Laxakola Tonic Tablets," Clanton ladies who have been troubled with pimples, blotches, moth spots and other skin affections, now pride themselves on the fresh, healthy complexion obtained through using this mild tonic laxative.

"And it is not surprising. They are different from anything you ever heard of." Laxative Tonic Tablets are a perfect combination of dandelion, cascarin and other laxative remedies known, to have a peculiar and beneficial influence on the skin. They open the pores, enrich the blood, stimulate the liver, freshen the skin, and cure chronic constipation by toning up the intestines and encouraging the natural action of the bowels. Once tried they inspire perfect confidence and Florence Drug Co. return your quarter if you are disapointed.

FARM AND GARDEN

NOTES FOR THE FARM.

The temperature of water for horses is not so much an object as the purity of it. While it is best to have the water cool, it is more important to have it free from all impurities.

While horses may gain flesh by being cooped up closely in the stables, they gain in strength. The flesh thus gained is too often a detriment to their usefulness.

To keep the feet in good condition, the shoes should be removed once every six months or oftener. The ruination of many horses' feet can be laid to the carelessness or penuriousness of the owner in not getting the shoes reset often enough.—Horse Breeder.

The mare that is suckling a colt is doing a double duty and should not be required to perform as much hard labor as the other horses.

All trouble in kicking, rearing and stubbornness generally arises from improper handling or not sufficient handling to adapt them to usage.

You can afford to starve your horses any other time than during the first year of their existence. A stunted colt seldom makes a well-developed horse.

Treatment that may entirely break one horse of a bad habit may entirely fail on another. It is hard to lay down rules that will work well in all cases.

When possible to avoid, never give a full draught of water within an hour after feeding. The effect is to carry much indigested food into the bowels, producing serious disorganization thereof.

On a very hot day keep a sponge—a towel—or your handkerchief soaked with pure cold water on the top of your horse's head.

If your horse's back is sore use pure cold water on it freely every time the saddle is removed. Try it and your horses will thank you.

Keep the foals growing. When the pastures begin to fail, increase the grain rations of the mares and place the grain within reach of the foals. There is nothing better to increase the flow of milk in mares than green corn fodder.—American Cultivator.

AS TO LEGUMES.

In reviewing the subject of inoculation for the growth of leguminous plants a writer in the Country Gentleman refers to the work of several experiment stations and says of that of Kentucky.

"In Kentucky the experiments show that when any newly-introduced legum is grown the second year on the same land, the root nodules are invariably produced without any inoculation, and in most cases, and on limestone lands they appear in the first crop. Here too it has been noted that the most vigorous plants are those having comparatively few root tubercles and that an abnormal development of these growths is at the expense of the plant as a whole. In the case of soy beans the roots of plants laden with nodules showed 5 1-2 per cent. more protein than the roots of uninfested plants, but this was believed to be at the expense of the top growth. This station has concluded that the benefits of inoculation are almost wholly residual—that is to say, that the warty roots liberate by their decay more nitrogen than clean roots, but the inference is that this residuum is largely deducted from the harvested portion of the plant—a condition of questionable advantage in these days when we are taught to feed all our nitrogen to farm animals."

MILK FOR POULTRY.

To place a pan of milk in the sun, and allow little chicks to help themselves is not the best method. For chicks the milk should be used for moistening the ground grain. Adult fowls may be allowed skimmilk, buttermilk, curds, or even whey, but the supply should be fresh every morning. One of the reasons why milk is said to cause bowel disease is that it is sometimes placed in open pans, to remain until all is used, during which period it becomes filthy, and is then an excellent carrier of disease. Milk should not be given to any flock that contains a single sick fowl, unless the sick bird is removed, as milk will more easily serve to distribute disease than water. If given under the supervision of a careful attendant and changed daily, the flock being free from disease, milk is one of the best and cheapest of foods, but it is not a substitute for water, nor will it take the place of meat.—Farmers Home Journal.

WEANING THE LITTLE ROOTERS.

Pigs are, or should be, grown for the profit they bring. The most critical time for them is when they are weaned. Taking the natural food supply away and placing before them instead only a trough with a limited amount of feed and no knowledge of what to make of it is hard on the little ones. It is easy to build a trough where the little fellows may be fed until ready to be weaned. Then they will have become almost independent, and taking away the mother does not interrupt growth. We have found it wise to supply at the weaning time an extra nice green pasture, which will furnish something for the uneasy young rooters to do. Knowing how to eat and having something to eat, there is nothing for the porker to do but go ahead. Our results certainly show benefits in these methods.—Farmers Home Journal.

ALFALFA.

Alfalfa is a silent, persistent and effective subsoiler. Under favorable conditions the roots of alfalfa will penetrate to a depth of twelve feet or more, instances being on record of roots being found more than thirty feet long. The size of the root varies with the age of the plant, the diameter at the crown varying from one-half to two and one-half inches. Under these conditions it is little wonder that land should be greatly benefited by the growth of alfalfa. It is manifestly superior to the subsoil plow or any other implement which human effort has devised for unlocking and bringing within the range of shallow-rooted plants the virtually inexhaustible supplies of plant food which are hidden deep in the bosom of the earth.—Northwest Pacific Farmer.

SMALL PEPPERS.

As a general rule, the smaller a pepper is in size, the hotter and more pungent is the flesh. With us in the northern states the small fruited varieties are chiefly grown for flavoring, or for using in mixed pickles, and a few varieties have been grown by florists for sale during the early winter, as decorative pot plants. The further south we travel the more general the use of these small, hot peppers becomes, and in Mexico, and other Spanish-American countries they form an ingredient of almost every dish prepared for the table. These very hot peppers have a longer season of growth before ripening their fruits than do our larger varieties and even with very early started plants, only a few of the numerous fruits ripen before frost.—Garden Magazine.

NEST FOR SUMMER LITTERS.

Avoid wooden floors to the nest. Remove the bottom box, and make nest on ground basin shape. Place amply dry pine needles or dry grass, especially when the earth is very damp. Should you use dry grass in the shed, place first a little green fresh grass and a layer of dry grass on top. This will cause moisture and will aid the proper development of the embryo chick. In midsummer it is well to allow the hen a damp dust bath. She will find it out if left within her reach and it will answer a double purpose i. e. it will keep her feathers damp and will prevent the vermin trouble.

FOOLISH EXPORTERS.

In 1880 the United States exported 39,000,000 pounds of butter and 12,000,000 pounds of cheese, says a consular report. Twenty-five years later, in the calendar year 1905, this country exported 16,000,000 pounds of butter and 8,000,000 pounds of cheese. This tremendous decline, notwithstanding the increased demand abroad, was due to the methods followed by some American exporters, who shipped adulterated butter, sold oleomargarine for butter and used similar methods in the exportation of cheese.

VALUE OF SKIM MILK.

According to the Year Book, United States Department of Agriculture, 100 pounds of skim milk contains .56 pounds of nitrogen, .20 of phosphoric acid and .19 of potash. The prices of these ingredients, as sold in commercial fertilizers, are 15 cents a pound for nitrogen, 5 cents for phosphoric acid and 5 cents for potash. This would make the manurial value of 100 pounds of skim milk 10.35 cents.

SHEEP AND SWINE.

Keep the pigs growing. Pumpkins are fine for them in September.

Separate, from the others, those you intend to fatten for early market. Feed the soft corn to these, with ground rye.

Provide warm quarters for the sheep. Turnips, with a little rye bran are good to eke out the pasture. Keep the ram with the flock for early lambs.

GRAVEL FOR HENS.

Hens often suffer in midsummer for want of gravel when confined in a yard. Throw in sods, cracked bone, shell or stone, and give water freely.

SPORT AND ADVENTURE

LOST ON ARCTIC ICE.

The life of a missionary in the Arctic Circle is one long adventure. The greatest danger that has to be guarded against is the cracking of the ice. I once had a perilous journey across the ice.

As the evening advanced we began to think about our sleeping quarters. No snow, however, suitable for our purpose could be found. A kind of small gully, with a sloping, grassy-looking side of ice, some fifteen feet high, presented, however, a possible ascent to the land, on which we knew plenty of suitable snow could be found. So we made for the gully. The dogs managed to climb some distance up the ascent, but could get no further. Muneapik (our dog driver) then made holes in the ice with a harpoon, which gave us a kind of footing. We then hauled away at the dogs' traces and finally succeeded in getting both dogs and sledge up the incline. Beyond the gully we built our house—a perfect "Jack-in-the-box" affair—not more than five feet high and some fifteen feet in circumference. Here the three of us—myself, my man and a boy—were closely packed together. I made coffee with a methylated spirit lamp, the steam from the water finally turning into a kind of hoar frost.

In this way we traveled about ninety miles in three days. At one time a pack of hungry wolves attacked a sledge, and the usefulness of guns and a good supply of ammunition was proved.

After supper we had prayer and I then managed, I hardly know how, to get into my sleeping bag, where I slept pretty well through the night.

During the last stage of the journey on the ice nothing could be seen for a long time on account of a dense kind of hoar frost which rose in clouds from the open sea. A gale of wind in such a position probably would have carried ice, sledge and all of us away. Our driver and guide kept the dogs well in hand. I felt half frozen and longed to get a glimpse of the land, so as to find our true position. Some three hours afterwards joyfully saw, through a break in the mist, a point of land.

Then we met some Esquimaux, who, with a few dogs, were wending their way over the gloomy waste looking for seal holes. They took me to their dwelling, right out on the frozen sea, some five miles from land, where I was welcomed to the comforts of a snow house.—Missionary E. J. Peck, of the "Farthest North" Station and Baffin's Bay, in the Chicago Tribune.

EXPLORER RIDES ON A TURTLE.

Six years ago M. de Rougemont appeared before the geographical section of the British Association at Clifton and described with much detail his remarkable adventures in the heart of the Australian continent. He included among them some striking reminiscences of the pearling industry in Australasia, and added that, having been wrecked, he occupied some part of his leisure by riding turtles in the lagoon of his desert island. Yesterday, after the lapse of many days, he appeared—in a striped bathing blanket and a bathing suit—before a British audience at the Hippodrome to demonstrate the truth of this part of his narrative.

There is no ground for supposing that it is the same turtle which shared M. de Rougemont's solitude in Australasia, or that it is a confederate in any way. Yesterday it lay placidly by the Hippodrome lagoon while M. de Rougemont lectured once again on his entertaining experiences, and it gave no sign of intelligence while he described the whole art of turtle riding. Suddenly the explorer flung off his blanket, and seizing the turtle unceremoniously by the scruff of its neck and the back of its shell hoisted it into the water. The turtle sank, but rose again. M. de Rougemont went in after it and in a moment was on its back. Down it went again and then once more rose. This time the rider grasped it firmly, crying, "Ta, 'Ra 'Ra!" and slapped it with some severity. It was an exciting and amusing entertainment from the spectators' point of view and M. de Rougemont also appeared to enjoy it very much. Of the turtle's enjoyment we have some doubt, but its general attitude was that of a passive resister. At any rate, M. de Rougemont did ride it.—London Daily Graphic.

SNAPPING TURTLE AND BIG BOY.

A Middletown (N. Y.) dispatch to the New York Times says that a turtle nearly drowned John Torrey, twelve years old, of Mechanicsville, while he was fishing in a pond near his home. He sat on the bank with his feet in the water, and a large snapping turtle seized him by his great toe. The boy was so frightened that he fell into the water. His screams attracted the attention of several laborers. They ran to the pond and succeeded in pulling the boy out. The turtle was still clinging to the boy's toe, and its head had to be cut off and the jaws pried open before the boy could be released from its grip. The turtle was one of the largest ever caught in this section. It weighed thirty-nine pounds.

OVER A CLIFF.

To go out after game in the hill country of India means that the hunter will find game, says Captain Glasfurd, the author of "Rifle and Romance in the Indian Jungle." One morning, followed by his shikarees, or native hunters, Captain Glasfurd was out looking over a rough hillside for bear. He had passed round the curve of a high ledge, when he found himself in front of a large, low roofed cave. On the sandy floor of the entrance to the cave were the fresh ingoing tracks of a bear.

Our position was a sufficiently hazardous one. The ledge was extremely narrow, overhung by rock, and on the verge of a perpendicular face of sandstone. We began quietly retracing our way. But scarcely had we taken one step when a horrible disturbance occurred in the depths of the cavern. This hastened our movements; but our haste was as nothing compared to the rapidity of the eruption that was going on behind us as the bear came yelling and scrambling out of the cavern. For me there was nothing but a swift whip round to face this horrid denouement, my rifle not even permitted to reach my shoulder.

To right, a blank wall of smooth cliffside; to left, a swift descent to the unknown over the edge of the cliff, and in front a raging, roaring mass of black hair shooting toward me with the speed of a runaway motor-car.

Bang! goes my rifle, and the next moment I am enjoying a strange, slow-moving nightmare, one of the most vivid of its memories being the smooth-brushed appearance of the bear's forehead as her jaws closed on my right thigh.

We bump and whirl swiftly downward. A semi-unconsciousness held me, and then came a shock. I saw the body of the bear hurled far from me into space, and I realized that I was clutching at something.

It was a little tree that I gripped in the strength of despair. I was hanging to it, head downward, on the face of the cliff itself.

My Jat orderly's voice sounded in my ear. The plucky fellow had crawled down that awful slope and managed to seize my hands. I was somehow drawn upward to the ledge. Then my gaze fell upon that solitary sapling, rooted in some mere chink in the rock. There was no other tree within many yards.

Two months on my back afforded scope for thought as to my extraordinary piece of luck.

BLOODYING THE HUNTER.

A correspondent of the London Field, who participated in an Austrian deer stalking expedition, relates this incident following the hunt:

"Before going to the house the keeper handed me a 'Bruch,' a twig off the nearest pine, which he first smeared in the wound, and I put it in my hat, as a victor puts laurels around his head. This is an old-established custom, the origin of which is unknown.

"When I returned it was already dark. On looking at the hats on the rack, I saw that three of the party had been successful. One of them, I found, had never killed a stag before, and had therefore to be what is in Scotland called 'blooded.' This ceremony was performed next day in the following manner. The whole party assembled at the front of the house; the victim was marched up to where his stag was lying, solemnly escorted by the keepers. He had to kneel down over the prostrate body of the fallen 'monarch of the glen.' A ring was formed round him, and the hostess struck him three times across the shoulders, saying, 'Der Erste Streich fur Kaiser und Reich, Der Zweite Streich fur's Ritter und Knecht, Der Dritte Streich fur's Waidmannsrecht.' The translation of this is The first stroke for Emperor and Empire, the second for Knight and Serf, and the third for the Sportsman's privilege. From this day onward the victim could hold up his head among sportsmen as their equal—a knight of the forest. People that object to this ceremony are looked down upon by Austrian sportsmen, and it is best to get through it as best one can, though it may not look very dignified while one is undergoing it."

ELEPHANT HIDE AND SEEK.

Captain Speedy, of the British army, writes in Harper's of some of his adventures while hunting elephants in North Africa. On one occasion he was chased by a huge one, in imminent danger of being overtaken, when he tripped and fell near a large tree trunk lying prone on the sand. He rolled under it just in time to escape the elephant, who ran from one side of the trunk to the other in pursuit of him. This game of hide-and-seek continued for some time, and Captain Speedy admits that, though it might have seemed funny to a bystander, it was far from amusing to him, as he expected each moment to be reached by the excited monster. The elephant finally gave it up and changed his method of attack, and though he was eventually shot by his victim, he gave a very bad half hour to a brave hunter and soldier.

A treasured relic at Penshurst Place, the seat of Lord de L'Isle and Dudley, is a stool covered in faded blue velvet, edged with silver cord, on which Queen Victoria knelt to receive the sacrament at her coronation.

..TRUTH ABOUT THE F

Some Crimes of the Commonest Invad of Your Home. ∴ ∴ ∴

Worse than the curse of frogs, worse than the curse of serpents or the rivers running with blood, was the "grevious swarm of flies" brought on the Egyptians by Moses the Israelite in that long struggle for freedom. In the simple and telling words of the narrative, "the land was corrupted."

I do not need to be told that this fly of Egypt was perhaps not the musca domestica, our common house fly, but some more noxious variety known to the East. It is enough to know that the house fly is found in every land and clime, and that it was quite capable of proving "grevious" and "corrupting" on that occasion. Because of its intimate association with man, it is the only variety worth considering in its relations to health—at least in our climate. Of 23,087 flies caught in dining rooms in the year 1905, 98.8 per cent. were found to be the common house fly.

This insect, with its air pump feet and its faceted eyes, may be a thing of beauty to the entomologist; its drowsy buzzing on the pane has even inspired poets; but we may be sure that the poet sang of some fly roused to life in early March by a day of premature heat. But taken collectively, and in summer, the fly is a hateful creature. Not only is it responsible for lines of worry in the housekeeper's face, but it has been proved to be a serious menace to health.

To begin with, its origin and habits are such as to put us on our guard. It lays its eggs in excrement, preferring horse manure, but if that does not offer readily using any other. It feeds on the same and on the sputum of diseased throats and lungs, on refuse of all kinds, and it bears on its hairy feet and legs particles of these substances.

Thanks to the science of bacteriology, our case against the fly is no longer guesswork—it has been made to walk across the sterile gelatine plate, and the microscope has later told us what it fetches and carries. Unlike the mosquito, the house fly is not a biter—but it has its own way of carrying contagion. It deposits, wherever it goes, disease; and disease germs may abound in its breeding and feeding places. On the joint of meat exposed for sale by the butcher, on the bread and sweetmeats of the confectioner's counter, on the edge of the milk pail, on the kitchen and dining room tables, they have been found.

To understand fully the possible danger of allowing this insect access to our food supplies, we must remember that in the diseases called enteric—those affecting the intestinal tract, such as cholera, dysentary and typhoid fever—multitudes of germs peculiar to the disease are voided not only during the attack, but for some days before the disease is recognized and for considerable periods of time after recovery, and since the contagion is spread from person to another solely by these germs as they find access to water or food, to guard the water supply from contamination and to forbid the sale of milk from the dairy farms where any contagion exists is well recognized as the first duty of the Health Board; but comparatively recent is the knowledge that flies also carry the germs of these diseases.

In 1888 Dr. Nuttall had shown that flies transmitted cholera. In 1895 Dr. Kober, of Washington, said that typhoid fever was spread by their aid in old-fashioned non-sewered dwellings, but not until the Cuban war, three years later, was this transmission proved on such a scale as to convince the medical profession. It was then that we began our real acquaintance with the fly and all his works.

Not only does the fly carry about on his feet and legs any disease germs, but such germs taken into the body in food are known to remain alive in its intestines and also for days after they are ejected in the specks. By recent experiments this has been proved true of both the tuberculosis and the typhoid bacillus, the germs in the speck having actually given the disease from nine to fifteen days after it was deposited.

This is a very important point, as it establishes on new ground the danger of spitting in the street or wherever flies can have access to the sputum. A lull in the efforts to prevent public spitting came on the discovery that tuberculosis germs exposed to direct sunlight must perish in from twenty-four to thirty hours, but since we discovered that the fly, who greedily feeds on the sputum, can transport it to considerable distances and keep it alive and virulent for many days, the spitting nuisance has assumed new importance.

In the average slaughter house both the common and the blow fly cover the carcasses. In one case, after the law had required the use of screens on the windows, the butchers expressed their satisfaction, "because now they did not have to spend their time digging out fly blows." In any open market buyers stand unmoved before a leg of beef outlined in black, the mass rising now and then when the butcher shakes his brush. One would suppose them a dispensation from heaven, so calmly do we accept the burden.

HOUSE APRONS.

A friend says: :"I use flour sacks for my every day aprons. They are cheap and easily washed, as they can be boiled, and they are good for afternoon aprons, too. One always looks neat in a white apron and they are so much nicer to cook in than colored aprons. They can be made in different ways. I have ruffles on mine, and always have a supply on hand, so that when one gets dirty I can put on a clean one."—Indiana Farmer.

TIME SAVERS.

Among the many useful and time saving kitchen utensils that cause the old-fashioned housekeeper to open her eyes in amazement, are olive stoners, potato and orange peelers, pea shellers, almond grinders, ice shavers and crushers, cheese toasters, corn scrapers, pineapple snips (for taking out the eyes of pineapples, which every housekeeper knows is a difficult process with an ordinary knife), flower scissors, alarm bell egg broilers, salad oil droppers (an arrangement for pouring oil in dressing drop by drop), clothes sprinklers, pie and cake lifters, fruit jar holders for holding hot glass jars when preserving, sandwich cutters (these are for various fancy shapes), etc. To these are now added odorless stewing pots.

A HOME EMERGENCY OUTFIT.

In the country, where medical aid is often far off, many precious hours must elapse before a physician's skill can be secured, and it is needful for the housemother to know "what to do until the doctor comes." Very often life may depend upon proper management during this period.

Every household should have an emergency outfit made up of clean linen rags, or sterilized gauze, a roll of absorbent cotton, several rolls of bandages, from one-half to two and a half inches wide (each roll containing about five yards), a spool of adhesive plaster a half inch wide, an ounce of boracic acid powder, a two or three ounce bottle of carbolic acid, a bag of clean salt, a cake of clean aseptic soap, a bottle of lysol, a clean white, porcelain washbowl, clean towels, a piece of stout new muslin bandage about a yard long, smooth stick eighteen inches long and a half inch in diameter, a graduated measuring glass. Besides these, two fomentation cloths a yard wide by two yards long.

All these should be made clean and sterile, or free from germs, and wrapped in a clean sheet, and then in a square of clean, new Mackintosh, and then placed where they can be gotten at at once.—Housekeeper.

RECIPES.

Orange Pudding—Mix thoroughly together one and one half cups fine dry bread crumbs, one scant cup fine chopped suet, one cup sugar, two well beaten eggs, one-half cup milk, the juice and grated yellow rind of one orange and a tablespoonful orange extract. Have ready six cups well greased, fill with the mixture, set in a steamer or saucepan where the water reaches up two-thirds of the moulds, cover and steam thirty minutes. Turn out on a dish and serve with hard sauce flavored with orange.

Stuffed Tangerines—Mince and mix three bananas, two lemons, two apples, the pulp of six oranges, half a pineapple, and a half pound seedless raisins. Cut a hole in the stem end of tangerines or other oranges, and scoop out the inside of the fruit, mixing it with the other ingredients. Pack the mince in the orange shells and freeze.

Shirred Eggs—Mix together three tablespoonfuls of cold minced chicken, a pinch of chopped parsley, two or three drops of onion juice, one tablespoonful of minced cold boiled ham or tongue, a dash of cayenne pepper and sufficient sweet cream to form a paste, line with this four individual shirring dishes, breaking into the center of each a raw egg, sprinkle lightly with salt and dot with bits of butter, running into a hot oven only until the eggs are set. Serve immediately in the baking dishes, garnished with plumes of parsley.

Ragout of Eggs—Boil six eggs for half an hour (which renders them more digestible), then carefully remove the shells and cut in halves; when quite cold scoop out the yolks and mash to a paste, adding a saltspoonful of salt, half the amount of white pepper, a teaspoonful of tomato catsup, a pinch of celery salt and a tablespoonful of grated bread crumbs; blend thoroughly and fill into the egg whites, heating in a thick brown sauce to which a half a cupful of chopped olives have been added. Serve on a hot platter, with the sauce poured over and surrounded by a border of toast triangles.

Little Savory Potato Cakes—Twelve tablespoonfuls of floury potatoes, eight tablespoonfuls of white flour, two tablespoonfuls of grated cheese, one tablespoonful of cream, the yolks of two eggs, one teaspoonful of baking powder, salt and cayenne to taste. Boil the potatoes and rub through a fine seive. Add the butter, flour, cheese, baking powder and seasoning and blend thoroughly. Mix into a light dough with the cream and the yolks of the eggs. Roll out about half an inch thick, cut into little rounds and brush over with the beaten egg. Bake in a rather quick oven until a nice brown. Split in two, butter and sprinkle with a very little finely chopped parsley.

A Successful Man.

The successful man of to-day is the one who has an education that has a market value, contends the Louisville Courier-Journal. This applies to all classes of men. The writer, the lawyer, the surgeon, the merchant and the engineer, can measure his value to the world largely by what men are willing to pay for his service. The conception of an education has been greatly modified in recent years. A man is educated who is skilled in doing some useful thing; who manifests an interest in all men engaged in useful work; who is always striving to be more skillful and better informed in his own work. The beauties of art, literature and philosophy do not belong to any class of men.

The Cleveland Plain Dealer notes that the new Illinois uniform primaries law curtails the power of the bosses and gives the voters a far wider field of choice than the nominating system usually employed. SORES FROM HEAD TO FOOT.

Covered With Crusted Scaly Eczema When One Month Old—Cured by Cuticura at Expense of $4.50.

"When I was one month old I was taken with eczema. After being under the treatment of two doctors for one month, and no improvement, my mother was advised by a druggist to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I was one crust of sores from head to foot. My mother could brush the scales off my body, and my finger and toe nails fell. After using six cakes of Cuticura Soap and about as much Cuticura Ointment I was completely cured. I am now seventeen years old, and my skin has not a scar. I am still finding wonders in Cuticura; after washing a fever blister two days it was completely gone. Your Cuticura friend, Miss Eola Glasscock, Marksville, La., Oct. 27, 1905."

It is a significant fact, observes the New York Sun, that in June, when the price of brick was declining, the building statistics for twenty-three of the leading cities of the United States indicated an investment of $50,000,000 in new constructions, as against $48,400,000 in the same month a year ago.

The paramount object in the culture of the grape in most parts of the world has been the obtaining of wine. The extent of this will not be surprising and hardly believed by those not acquainted with the statistics. Thus, for instance, there are annually produced on the globe over 4,000,000,000 gallons of wine. Of this amount, the United States produces only about 50,900,000 gallons.

Tired, Nervous Mothers

Make Unhappy Homes—Their Condition Irritates Both Husband and Children—How Thousands of Mothers Have Been Saved From Nervous Prostration and Made Strong and Well.

Mrs. Chester Curry
Mrs. Chas. F. Brown

A nervous, irritable mother, often on the verge of hysterics, is unfit to care for children; it ruins a child's disposition and reacts upon herself. The trouble between children and their mothers too often is due to the fact that the mother has some female weakness, and she is entirely unfit to bear the strain upon her nerves that governing children involves; it is impossible for her to do anything calmly.

The ills of women act like a firebrand upon the nerves, consequently nine-tenths of the nervous prostration, nervous despondency, "the blues," sleeplessness, and nervous irritability of women arise from some derangement of the female organism.

Do you experience fits of depression with restlessness, alternating with extreme irritability? Are your spirits easily affected, so that one minute you laugh, and the next minute you feel like crying?

Do you feel something like a ball rising in your throat and threatening to choke you; all the senses perverted, morbidly sensitive to light and sound; pain in the abdominal region, and between the shoulders; bearing-down pains; nervous dyspepsia and almost continually cross and snappy?

If so, your nerves are in a shattered condition, and you are threatened with nervous prostration.

Proof is monumental that nothing in the world is better for nervous prostration than Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; thousands and thousands of women can testify to this fact.

Mrs. Chester Curry, Leader of the Ladies' Symphony Orchestra, 42 Saratoga Street, East Boston, Mass., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"For eight years I was troubled with extreme nervousness and hysteria, brought on by irregularities. I could neither enjoy life nor sleep nights: I was very irritable, nervous and despondent.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended and proved to be the only remedy that helped me. I have daily improved in health until I am now strong and well, and all nervousness has disappeared."

Mrs. Charles F. Brown, Vice-President of the Mothers' Club, 21 Cedar Terrace, Hot Springs, Ark., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I dragged through nine years of miserable existence, worn out with pain and nervousness, until it seemed as though I should fly. I then noticed a statement of a woman troubled as I was, and the wonderful results she derived from Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I decided to try it. I did so, and at the end of three months I was a different woman. My nervousness was all gone. I was no longer irritable, and my husband fell in love with me all over again."

Women should remember that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the medicine that holds the record for the greatest number of actual cures of female ills, and take no substitute.

Free Advice to Women.

Mrs. Pinkham, daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., invites all sick women to write to her for advice. Mrs Pinkham's vast experience with female troubles enables her to advise you wisely, and she will charge you nothing for her advice.

GOLDEN NUGGETS FOR SALLOW PEOPLE

A New Departure for Temperance Sunday

The Anti-Saloon League of Alabama has inaugurated a new order of service which have been sent out to all the Sunday schools of Alabama for the celebration of the regular Temperance Sunday which occurs next Sunday, Sept. 30th. Several bright interesting numbers in the form of recitations, readings etc., have been provided and it is expected that this new order for Temperance Sunday will prove very popular.

In addition to the literary feature of the service it is expected that all the schools in the State will make a contribution to the work of the Anti-Saloon League of Alabama churches, thus giving increased material force to this great state and nation wide temperance movement.

An Insidious Danger.

One of the worst features of kidney trouble is that it is an insidious disease and before the victim realizes his danger he may have a fatal malady. Take Foley's Kidney Cure at the first sign of trouble as it corrects irregularities and prevents Bright's disease and diabetes. Upchurch Drug co.

AN UNUSUAL OPPORTUNITY.

Florence Drug Co. Will Pay Back Your Money if Pepsikola Fails to Cure Your Indigestion.

"Never in the history of this store," remarked one of the above druggists, to an interested customer, "has there been so great a demand for a new remedy as there is just now for Pepsikola Tablets. Clanton people are coming in every day inquiring if it really is true that we sell Pepsikola with the understanding that it will cure dyspepsia or pay back the money. "Not one person in fifty has asked for their money, and it may surprise you to know that at least a dozen within the last ten days have been in to tell us how much they have been relieved and how glad they are to know at last there is a remedy that really will cure indigestion and dyspepsia." Pepsikola braces up and tone every nerve and fibre, helps digest the food, puts new life into the digestion, improves the appetite, cures coated tongue, dizzy spells and sour stomach.

Try it for ten days, and if you don't see a big improvement step in and tell Florence Drug co., and they will hand back your quarter cheerfully and without argument.

Starving to Death.

Because her stomach was so weakened by useless drugging that she could not eat, Mrs. Mary A. Walters, of St. Clair St., Columbus, O., was literally starving to death. She writes: "My stomach was so weak from useless drugs that I could not eat, and my nerves so wrecked that I could not sleep; and not before I was given up to die was I induced to try Electric Bitters; with the wonderful result that improvement began at once, and a complete cure followed." NOW IS THE TIME!

Now! when this weather just makes one dream of the cool and delightful retreats of the Adirondacks.

Of the Thousand Islands of the St. Lawrence.

The thousand lakes and streams of Michigan, Canada, and the northwest;

Where one can roam with fishing rod along shady forest streams and swing the line out over deep pools.

Or paddle through quiet waters with only the music of the forest or the ripple of the water to break the deep quiet of the solitude.

Now is the time to consult your nearest Big Four Agent as to routes and rates and get his information as to through sleepers from St. Louis, Indianapolis, Cincinnati, Dayton, Springfield and Columbus to Boston, Cleveland, Buffalo, New York.

Or Cincinnatti, Dayton, Springfield to Toledo, Detroit, Mackinac.

Or Cincinnati to St. Louis, Peoria and Chicago;

And remember also those comfortable Parlor Cars and those hunger-satisfying Dining Cars that serve the best meals on wheels.

Cured Hay Fever and Summer Cold.

A. J. Nusbaum, Batesville, Indiana, writes: "Last year I suffered for three months with a summer cold so distressing that it interfered with my business. I had many of the symptoms of hay fever, and a doctor's prescription did not reach my case, and I took several medicines which seemed to only aggravate my case. Fortunately I insisted upon having Foley's Honey and Tar in the yellow package, and it quickly cured me. My wife has since used Foley's Honey and Tar with the same success." Upchurch Drug co.

Sour Stomach

No appetite, loss of strength, nervousness, headache, constipation, bad breath, general debility, sour risings, and catarrh of the stomach are all due to indigestion. Kodol cures indigestion. This new discovery represents the natural juices of digestion as they exist in a healthy stomach, combined with the greatest known tonic and reconstructive properties. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure does not only cure indigestion and dyspepsia, but this famous remedy cures all stomach troubles by cleansing, purifying, sweetening and strengthening the mucous membranes lining the stomach.

Mr. S. S. Ball, of Ravenswood, W. Va., says: "I was troubled with sour stomach for twenty years. Kodol cured me and we are now using it in milk for baby."

Dear Friends—Many Banner readers inquire why I have not written for the paper in a long time. The principal reason, I have been away from home most all the time this summer and exceedingly busy. I am now packing my trunk to go to Louisville, Ky., where I expect to enter the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, October 1st. It shall be my purpose to write an occasional letter for publication in the Banner on my old subjects, Many Things, which will include things of interest concerning the great city of Louisville and the surrounding country. Let me say to the good people of Chilton county that my five years sojourn here—two in Thorsby and three in Stanton shall mark a bright spot in my memory. To say I have enjoyed it supremely will not express it too strongly. You have a good country, I have said it and want to say it again, so far as I know, there is no pleasanter country in which to live anywhere to be found. It rejoices my heart to see a marked improvement in farming, in the schools, Sunday schools and churches. May our heavenly Father's richest benedictions ever be upon you, that you may have continued growth and prosperity. A kind word at any time from any of my Chilton friends will be appreciated.

Yours for mutual help

MAKE MONEY.

Here is an interesting study: Make out a list of all the people you know, and estimate the amount of money each one earns in a year. Total it up. The amount will be surprisingly large. Now, of all those people, only the few who SAVE SOMETHING really MAKE anything at all. Simply earning money isn't making it; what slips through the earner's fingers is finally "made" by somebody else. Don't forget to count yourself in on the list, and if you are not "making" money, begin now to save with us. One dollar will open your bank account.

Maplesville, Sept. 25, 1906

Editor Banner—Will you please allow me a small space in your most valuable paper to ask friend Latham of Lawley to tell us more about the liquor cadidate. Now, Bro. Latham, in justice to your self and county tell us who this candidate is, for some of us down here no doubt intended to vote for him, but if we can find out who he is—it matters not who either—it will wind up his ball with a goodly number of people. I have heard several say if they knew who he was they would not vote for him, mattered not who he was. for they didn't want such ungodly scamp to be honored with any office and would not by their vote if his name could be found out. I think Bro. Latham has done exactly right by telling the people of this con duct for there is lot of people that don't want such a man for their officer. So tell us his name in the next issue of the Banner so the good people of the county may know what one nominee is doing.

With best wishes to the Banner Editor and people of Chilton county.

A Voter.

Maplesville, Sept. 24, 1906

Editor Banner—In regard to the statement in the letter of our Lawley correspondent I wish to say that every word he has said is true and more too. It would not be any trouble to establish the fact, it ought not to stop at exposure of the party, but he ought to be prosecuted for disturbing public worship. David says "Blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly," therefore I congratulate Bro. Latham for his courage in taking up the matter and think it the duty of every good citizen to take up the matter of whiskey in any form and try to banish it from the land if possible. Our dear Uncle Sam it seems, made a great mistake in turning this matter over to the saloon devils to torment us at our place of worship (A little more scripture) "Therefore the ungodly shall not stand in the congregation of the righteous, nor sit in the seats of judgment." Now, who can vote for a drunkard? Who wants to be tried in the courts by a drunkard? I think I had much rather fall in the hands of a sober thief than to fall into the hands of a drunken court. Almost every merchant that wants a state licence to sell whiskey has it and men can get it anywhere they want it, and we need not look for anything else until there is a remedy prescribed. We think that every man should be careful in casting his vote, for the men that will be the most honor to our county and legislature halls. I have no politics. Hoorah for Gulledge! Hoorah for Traywick!

Tom Hide.

Stanton, Oct. 1, 1906

Editor Banner—Please allow me space in your paper to say a few words in regard to the organizing of the old Confederate veterans into a Confederate camp at Stanton, on Oct. 20, 1906. We want to have General E. W. Pettus to make us a speech on that occasion. Everybody is invited, and especially the old Confederate soldiers.

J. J. Letcher.

Lawley, Sept. 23 1906

Editor Banner—I would like to say a few words in regard to Mr. Arthur D. Latham's letter in your paper in regard to the kind of men we need for Sheriff and Probate Judge. I think we need men of good moral character, just and honest men that attend to their own affairs and not meddling with other people's affairs that don't concern them. A man that is always meddling where he has no business is sure to have as large a stump in his road as the man that he is trying to correct. If you can't speak well of a man it is best to play shut mouth, as it is better to have a friend than an enemy Mr. Latham spoke of having a candidate with us at the baptising at the Collins bridge the other Sunday, which we did, and were glad to have him with us, as we always like to have good people with us. If everybody would conduct themselves as well as the candidate did at the baptizing, I dont think they should grumble, for I talked with this candidate and if he wasn't all right and in his right mind he never has been. I am sure he is as bright as the man that has been writing about him. Mr. Arthur D. Latham spoke of electing men for office that spend the county money and not doing their duty. I think if Mr. Arthur D. Latham would attend to his mail route and earn his money that Uncle Sam pays him to carry his mail he will have no time to look after other people's affairs. A man should clear around his own door before going abroad. I know there has been several people grumbling about the mail and he has passed boxes time and again and left mail that he should had taken out but instead of that, sailed on by as though he was not concerned in Uncle Sam's business. If some strangers had seen him passing those boxes they would have thought he was a candidate and not concerned in the mail business, anyway a man that tries to tend to everybodys business tends to nobody's business not even his own. I think that Uncle Sam could have better men to carry his mail as well as the county can better officers as Uncle Sam pays his men to carry the mail correctly as well as the county pays men to fill their office correctly.

perfection

A prettier or more complete line of Fall Merchandise is not to be found in the country.

For weeks our buyers were in the market centers seeking the best goods that could be found, and the result of their untiring efforts is an almost bewildesing array of fresh, crisp, beautiful goods.

Our entire store is now in full gala attire; every nook and corner is looking its best; the very atmosphere permeates with a gladsome welcome to the good people of Chilto and surrounding counties to pay us a visit. We want every man, woman and child to come and see this wonderful display of Fall Goods.

The simple life is for people who are so rich they won't be thought poor, no matter what they do, is the suggestion of Puck.

No glamour of colossal benefactions can hide from our minds the repulsive fact that many large fortunes are secured by deliberate spoliation of the people.

The rapid development of the motorbus in London, according to London newspapers, is regarded as opening the way for the discontinuance of the horse for the purpose of commercial traction in the streets of that metropolis. It is thought that steam for use on railroads will, in a comparatively short time, give way to the use of electricity.

Most of us who have lived in small town or village know, maintains Youth's Companion, that there is truth in what a clergyman says in his book, "The Country Town," that the small community should appeal to the young minister as a field for inspiring work. There is more interest in theology there than in the city, and a more apostolic type of piety. The country church, says the writer, "has found out in some degree the way of actual service to living men. In some measure it succeeds in imparting courage, inspiring kindness, developing brotherhood, creating character, helping men live under the eternal order."

Eleven head of Galloway cattle from Missouri have been sent to Alaska, by the Government to begin an experiment in stock raising in that northern district. They will be kept near Cook inlet, to the northward of which for two hundred miles lies the Sucitna Valley. The valley is nearly as broad as it is long, and is covered with rich grasses, redtop and bluestem, which grow luxuriantly in summer. Salt grass and bunch grass, which is an excellent winter food, also are abundant. There are already some Jersey cattle for dairy purposes at Kenai, but they require too much care to be of use for general stock raising. The Galloways will be crossed with famous butter making strains, in the hope of producing a hardy breed which can withstand the Alaskan climate and develop a profitable industry.

With all her regrets and griefs, with all her weariness of the stilted career of Vicereine, there was many an American girl to envy Lady Curzon. They envied her title, her prestige, her power and her fame. They need not have done so, observes the Courier-Journal. Title and power did not bring to her the happiness which she herself found in a quiet nook of a home. Her moods point the lesson to the American girl. It is pleasanter to have a comfortable home than to have an imperial palace. The title is a bauble which may dazzle some eyes, but it does not bring contentment to its owner. With all her affection for Lord Curzon and her interest in his ambitions, how much greater joy would she have had if he had been less of a dignitary and more of a plain citizen.

J. Ingram Bryan, M.A., M.Litt., Professor of English in the Imperial College of Commerce at Nagasaki, writes informingly in Harper's Weekly on the question of "Japan's Capacity for the Supremacy of the Far East." Professor Bryan lays his finger upon the trait which, more than any other, constitutes the particular strength of the Japanese people—their ability to remodel their institutions in accordance with newly acquired conceptions of progress. She surpasses all her rivals, either in the East or West, observes Professor Bryan, in the coolness with which she can face every dread task, and in the celerity with which she can change. "Believing her destiny is assured, no danger can daunt her. She fears no change, and hesitates at no experiment, however bold. She can alter her system of government, of education, of religion, of machinery, with equal facility, and at any moment. And, most marvellous of all, it is a little coterie of progressive minds in Tokio that rules the nation and shapes its destinies. They are the incarnation of the national spirit and idea."

Among the curious observations made by students at the Bermuda Biological Station is that some of the inhabitants of the water there are able to imitate the color of the rocks and reefs among which they swim.

ALABAMA GLEANINGS,

Items of Interest Gathered as They Transpire Over the Entire State.

Hilton Is Given Hearing.

Anniston, Ala.—A hearing under a writ of habeas corpus was had before Judge Pelham in chambers to secure bail for Forney Hilton, of Chambers county, who is charged with the murder of Charles McKee with a mattock in Cleburne county some time ago. Bail was granted in the sum of $3,000, which it is said friends will make up. The defendant, Forney Hilton, was transferred to the Calhoun county jail some two or three weeks ago, where he has since been confined. Quite a large number of witnesses were present at the hearing, and considerable testimony was adduced.

Captain Swartz to Retire.

Decatur, Ala.—The steamer Buck Lindsay, which has been on the Tennessee river here for some time, will now go to southern waters. Her owner, Capt. G. W. Swartz, has sold her to R. T. Hamilton, of Morgan City, La., and she will be in the trade on the Mississippi river. She left here for her new home loaded with cedar poles. Captain Swartz will retire from steamboating.

Millions of Union Men.

New York.—A report of the state department of labor, just issued, states that there are now upwards of 8,000,000 wage workers in labor unions, one-fourth of whom are in the United States. Great Britain and Germany each have nearly as many unionists as the United States, but the countries in which the movement is comparatively new—Austria-Hungary, Italy, etc.—are now making rapid progress.

Corporations Chartered.

Montgomery, Ala.—The secretary of state has been informed of the following new corporations being organized: Thomasville Manufacturing, Electric Light and Power Company; capital stock, $11,000; incorporators, W. A. Scott, Jr., John S. Henson and others. First Baptist church, of Thomasville; incorporators, James S. Cunningham, Thomas W. Kimbrough and others.

New Wood Working Pant.

Gadsden, Aa.—A company, headed by D. W. Thornton and associates, are establishing a large saw mill and wood working plant at Pollard's Bend, on the Coosa river, above this city, and will manufacture building material on a large scale for this market. The company owns large bodies of timber land there.

Will Hold Bond Election.

Decatur, Ala.—On October 31 an election will be held in New Decatur to decide whether or not that city will issue $25,000 worth of bonds for the purpose of building more school houses and for the purpose of improving the ones already built.

Tug Boat Sinks in Collision.

New Orleans, La.—The tug bot Wm. Wood was sunk in collision with the steamer Preston thirty-nine miles below here in the Mississppi river. The crew escaped. The Preston was not injured.

Emrick Farm Is Sold.

Huntsville, Ala.—The Emrick farm, one of the finest tracts of land in the vicinity of Madison, has been purchased by R. A. Patton, of Hanna City, Ill., breeder of fine hogs. He paid $9,000 for the place, an expects to establish a stock and cattle farm here.

Candidates File Expenses.

Centre, Ala.—Although the law requiring candidates to file within thirty days after the primary a statement of expenses has not been complied with by a number of the candidates in the recent primary, an inspection of the accounts on file in the probate office shows that it costs very little to run for office in this state.

Killed in Runaway.

Knoxville, Tenn.—J. W. Neil, a prosperous young merchant, while driving with his wife and children near Blountville, Sullivan county, was thrown from his buggy and killed. His wife and children were painfully hurt. Neil's neck was broken and death was instantaneous.

Rumors of Couch's Capture.

Decatur, Ala.—There are many rumors on the streets to the effect that Percy Couch, who broke jail here, has been arrested in as many different places. None of them can be verified. The latest rumor is that he was arrested at Garden City, Ala. This cannot be substantiated.

Clarksville, Tenn.—Louisville and Nashville passenger train, northbound ran into the open bridge across the Cumberland river. The engine, baggage and mail coaches went down, carrying with them seven men, five of whom have been rescued. Engineer Frank Porter, of Bowling Green, and Express Messenger Will Wood, of Markville, are the missing ones. The bridge was turned for a boat.

DAMAGE TO COTTON.

Alabama Suffered Severely by the Heavy Storm.

Montgomery, Ala.—The storm of last week has done the cotton crop of those states in which it prevailed incalculable harm. An already small yield will be cut down many thousand bales as a result of the wind and rain blowing and knocking the cotton from the bolls. It will require many days of sunshine to allow a resumption of picking.

Local cotton men say that the reports from all over this section are that not only will thousands of bolls be knocked out and consequently ruined, but the weather conditions will lower the grade as much as half a cent a pound. Additional damage will also result because of delay in getting back to picking. Because of lack of labor there was more open cotton in the field than is usual at this time of the year.

Reports from sections in the state indicate general losses to the crop.

Colbert County at Fairs.

Tuscumbia, Ala.—Colbert county will be represented with creditable displays at both the Birmingham State Fair and the Montgomery County Fair, which are to be held this month. W. H. Sadler, of Sheffield, has charge of the display at Birmingham, while Dr. F. T. Gilmore, of Tuscumbia, will look after that at Montgomery. They are both collecting fine displays of agricultural, mineral and manufactured articles. One of Dr. Gilmore's collections at Montgomery will be ten watermelons, the aggregate weight of which exceeds 500 pounds.

Boy Fatally Kicked.

Athens, Ala.—Hagan, the 10-year-old son of Mr. C. C. Black, a prominent farmer living eight miles west of Athens, was kicked by a horse on his father's farm and his frontal skull crushed so badly that a part of it had to be removed. It is believed he will hardly recover. He had been sent to turn some horses into a pasture, and it is presumed he crowded the stock as they were entering the gate and one of them kicked him. He was found in an unconscious condition by a farm hand and carried home.

Prisoner Takes Leg Bail.

Athens, Ala.—Sheriff Puryear arrested a man named Carter at the cotton mills, north of town, for assaulting and beating his wife. He came readily with the sheriff until the sheriff began to unlock the jail doors, when Carter took leg bail and fled for the woods, with pistol bullets singing near his head. The sheriff is not built for running, but he did some of the nicest sprints seen in a race for years, but Carter outstripped him and was last seen headed for the tall timber. The pistol shots created some excitement, but were soon explained.

Damage in Greene.

Eutaw, Ala.—The recent rain and wind storm has resulted in great damage to the crops of Greene county. It is variously estimated that between 10 and 20 per cent of the cotton open in the field was blown out upon the ground. That the county has suffered thousands of dollars damage is conceded by all. While damage to other property is slight, the wind was hard enough to blow down trees, fences, telephone wires, etc.

Anniston Publishing Company.

Anniston, Ala.—The Anniston Publishing Company was incorporated at $25,000, of which $15,000 is paid in. The company publishes the Evening Star and Anniston Weekly Republic. T. R. Gordon is editor and president of both papers, with E. B. McKee, a Pennsylvania capitalist, business manager, secretary and treasurer. E. F. Crock is vice-president of both.

Serious Cutting Affray.

Athens, Ala.—News comes from the southwest part of the county, near Pettey, that a man named Smith has been seriously cut by a man named Jones. They were in a fight, and both received serious cuts, but Smith was the worst hurt, having several very serious and dangerous cuts.

Banker Robbed of $5,500.

New York.—In the absence of the family a "Raffles" entered the home of David Taylor, at Madison, N. Y., by daylight Wednesday and escaped with jewelry valued at $5,500. Mr. Taylor is vice-president of the Coal and Iron Nation Bank of New York and is reputed to be a millionaire.

Alabama Postmasters.

Washington, D. C.—Postmasters appointed: Gainesville, Sumter county, William J. Monette; Herring, Pike county, John H. Howard. Herbert A. Taylor appointed regular and Harry O. Taylor substitute rural carrier, Route 2, at Georgiana.

Columbiana's Graded School.

Columbiana, Ala.—The Columbiana graded school opened under very flattering circumstances, and more a hundred pupils were enrolled. Short talks were made by Rev. G. T. Harris, Rev. C. C. Heard, Judge Longshore and W. W. Wallace by way of encouragement to Professor Ansley, a new man at the head of our school, but one who comes well recommended.

GULF STORM

TERRIBLE TO CONTEMPLATE.

Out of Twenty-two Ships in the Harbor but One Remains—Many of Them Far Inland.

Pensacola, Fla.—The loss of life and damage resulting from the hurricane which struck this city Thursday morning is something terrible to contemplate. Already the list of dead has grown to twenty-six, and it is known that many more have been lost, others injured, while more than 3,000 are homeless.

For days recruiting parties have been working to bring conditions to some degree of order, but their efforts have not shown to any extent and there are many bodies yet underneath masses of wreckage.

For ten miles east and west of the city is strewn the wrecks of homes and vessels of all classes. Commencing at Fort McRae, on a point overlooking the gulf, and continuing to Escambia bridge, east of the city, there is nothing but devastation, ruin and desolation. At Fort McRae five lives were lost.

The experience of the twenty men there is horrible to retell. They climbed to the batteries, the very highest point, as the waves began to dash over them, and lashed themselves to the guns. There they clung for more than twelve hours. Only one lady and her little child were at the post. She was the wife of Sergeant Prentice, and although the big strong soldier fought to save the lives of his young wife and baby, they were almost wrenched from his hands. Three artillerymen were lost by being washed from the batteries. The fort was almost razed.

Across on Santa Rosa Island, also on the gulf, is Fort Pickens, where over 100 men were stationed. There tion of property. The mortar batteries tion of property. The mortar battries were even driven in and guns wrecked.

Across the bay in the city the scene beggars description, and it will be fully three months before the vessels can be dug out from their positions. Of the twenty-two ships and barques of foreign flags anchored in the harbor at the time of the storm only one remains, which is also badly damaged. The steamers fared better, but they are damaged. Some of the immense ocean going ships of 2,000 tons are resting in front yards; others have been driven through houses; some have their noses pointed into stores, while some others are keeled over on their side in the bay and are piled up in masses of wreckage. Only four tug boats out of a fleet of about twenty remain. About thirty fishing schooners of fifty or seventy-five tons were moored alongside wharves, and but two remain intact. Some of them are half a mile inshore. The immense wharves all along the water front are cleared, excepting two of the Louisville and Nashville railroad, the third going down with about fifty cars and an engine.

In Mobile.

Mobile, Ala.—Between seventy-five and 100 lives lost, fully two score vessels driven ashore or wrecked in various parts of the Gulf of Mexico, damage amounting to $4,500,000 in the city of Mobile, and to the extent of millions more at outside points, is the record of the storm which swept over Mobile on Wednesday and Wednesday night.

No estimate of the number of casualties can be made now, and it is doubtful if it will be known for a week or more.

Grave apprehension exists regarding the situation at Gulfport and Biloxi, where it is believed that many lives have been lost. Reports from those places are, however, meagre and unsatisfactory. It is declared by the local municipal officials that no lives have been lost in the city of Mobile, but that all of the deaths have occurred at places within fifty miles of this place.

The storm, which was first noticed by the weather bureau when between Jamaica and Cuba, made its appearance in the neighborhood of Mobile on Tuesday afternoon, when fitful winds from the north began to blow and the barometer commenced to fall. The wind rose steadily all through Wednesday, and between 2 o'clock and 6 on the afternoon of that day blew with a velocity of forty-eight miles an hour. All through Wednesday night it rose steadily, and at 7:15 on Thursday morning it reached its greatest speed, blowing from the easterly quarter at the rate of fifty-five miles an hour, the barometer falling to 28.86. A few minutes after 8 o'clock on Thursday morning the wind decreased and the barometer commenced to rise. The total rainfall in the city of Mobile during the storm was 6.58 inches.

While the storm was at its height the water from the bay was driven in with great force upon the city, the waves coming over the ends of the wharves six feet deep. Three blocks up into the heart of the city the flood was driven, filling every basement and store in that section of the city. At Commerce street, which is the first thoroughfare away from the docks, the water rose in the stores to the height of five and a half feet. The marks on the buildings on Water street, which is next to Commerce, show a depth of four and a half feet. The flood did not quite reach Royal street, one square beyond Water street.

Arm Must Bear Scar.

Savannah, Ga.—Cards of admission to the public schools are being issued. Only new students or those who stopped before the close of the last session will need the cards. Those who have not been vaccinated recently will be vaccinated in rooms reserved for that purpose.

Middleport, O., Bank Fails to Open.

Pomeroy, O.—The Middleport Bank, a private institution at Middleport, O., failed to open its doors. It is said all the deposits, amounting to $115,000, are missing, and great excitement prevails. Most of the depositors are poor people.

Cashier Held for Theft.

New York.—After spending most of the night in a cell at police headquarters, D. Snow, formerly cashier of the banking firm of Thomas C. Buck & Co., 44 Broad street, was released on bail. He was arrested on an indictment found September 25, which charged a shortage in his accounts of $3,500. It is said the shortage really amounts to $30,000 and may reach a higher figure.

Close Books for Panama Loan.

Washington, D. C.—Acting Secretary Keep instructed the treasurer of the United States and the register of the treasury that the period of the closing of the books of the Panama canal loan, for the preparation of interest schedules, shall begin with the close of business on the 15th day of October, January, April and July, and continue until the close of business on the last day of the respective months.

Cannot Tell Tales.

Washington, D. C.—A general order just promulgated by the war department positively prohibits the soliciting of pension or other claims against the United States on military reservations or at military posts, camps or stations, and commanding officers are instructed to take such steps as are necessary to prevent such solicitation. Men who give pension seekers any information regarding such claims will lay themselves liable to court-martial. In this connection the army regulations have been amended so as to provide as follows:

"Information concerning sick and wounded officers and men may be freely conveyed to allay the anxiety of friends. The fact of death may be communicated to relatives, but not circumstances connected therewith such as could be made use of in prosecuting claims against the government. If any person in the military service has facts pertaining to the service of the individual who is an applicant for a pension he may upon request, if not pecuniarily interested, furnish a certificate or affidavit setting forth his knowledge, but such certification or affidavit will be furnished only to the military secretary of the army, to be forwarded to the proper officer of the interior department."

Against Cow Tick.

Athens, Ala.—Dr. C. A. Cary, state veterinarian, of Auburn, accompanied by three government experts from the bureau of animal industry at Washington, Drs. Myer, Streble and Ellenberger, are here for the purpose of making a systematic fight against the cow tick. The loss of cattle in this section is heavy from this trouble, and it is the intention of the government to try to eradicate the tick. They will spend some weeks in Limestone county.

Big Fire in Cleveland.

Cleveland, O.—An early morning fire caused by an explosion of oil in the building of the Pittsburg Plate Glass Company destroyed that building and communicated flames to a half dozen buildings in the vicinity. The loss is $200,000.

Quesada Has Resigned.

Washington, D. C.—Senor Don Gonzales Quesada, minister of Cuba, appointed by President Palma, has tendered his resignation to the provisional government of Cuba. It is stated that Mr. Quesada has not taken this step as an act of resentment or as an evidence of any ill feeling toward President Roosevelt or the American administration, but that he considered it his duty in order to facilitate the execution of the president's policy toward Cuba.

President Leaves for Provincetown.

Oyster Bay.—President Roosevelt has left from Provincetown, Mass., to visit the North Atlantic fleet lying off that port. He will be absent two days.

Ashland City, Tenn.—The Chicago Limited No. 201, northbound, was wrecked at Pegram Station, three miles from this place. The accident was caused by a slide in. The engine and tender left the track and were turned over, and the track was torn up for several yards. No serious damage was done. The wrecker from Paducah was called to the scene and had the track cleared so traffic could be resumed.

The [illegible] You.

When you've settled down at night,
Locked your door, put out the light,
n you've shut the world from out your little room;
When you've stopped your daily work
At the coming of the mirk,
n you're face to face with truth, amid the gloom.
For there's no one there to fool,
And your judgment dares be cool,
e the thoughts you face are merciless and true;
You may hoax the world, my boy,
With the tactics you employ,
t you've not succeeded yet in fooling you.

In the daily grist of toil,
In the treadmill and the moil,
vicissitudes of traffic, you are wont
To be tempted to cajole,
Coaxed to jeopardize your soul—
is battle; we must smile and bear the brunt.

But at night when all is still,
When the tension's off you will Face the truth that must be recognized as true.
You can fool some people, boy,
With the methods men employ,
t you'll never find it easy fooling you.—Chicago News.

The Hour and The Woman

BY THOMAS J. PARTRIDGE.

There was little doubt but that Donald McPhee was sick unto death. He was as strong as an ox and as healthy as a trout, and, despite his youth, had come unscathed through many a biting winter gale on Georges, but when he stepped from an overheated parlor into a snow-bank, and shoveled snow for two or three hours in light clothing, it brought on a chill. Two days afterward Donald went down with pneumonia as if struck with a blow.

A fishing port! Of all the places in the world for a woman to practise medicine! Yet there her sign swung:

VINNEY M. STETCHELL, M. D.

It was up-hill work with the doctor, but she builded well when she snatched "Big Mary" McKinnon's child from the black jaws of diphtheria, binding the mother to her with hoops of steel. Besides, Big Mary was a power in the Scotch colony of Prince Edward Islaud people. It was pure faith, then, welded to gratitude, that prompted Big Mary, in the face of the strenuous protests of all the other relatives, with their favorite doctors and their individual leaning toward this and that mode of treatment, to call Doctor Stetchell in the present instance. The sick boy was six hundred miles from his parents, and if anything should happen! It was clear that Big Mary had taken upon herself a tremendous responsibility.

Nightly the relatives foregathered in the big kitchen to discuss the case in all its lights and shades; the virtues of this application, the dangers of that. Some were for one thing, some for another. Thomas John's Maggie insisted on Doctor McKenzie being called. McKenzie was "from home," and there was some clannishness in the advice; besides, Maggie felt a desire to do something, indirectly, at least, toward the old bill, on which her husband had looked with indifference for two years.

Mrs. Gillis, an aunt, maintained that poultices were weakening; Mrs. Rory McEachern swore that it would be murder to remove them. Sarah McDougall held that there was no hope before the boy was stricken down. There were no details, but she had had a dream!

But the "woman doctor" was the bone of contention. And as the case went on from bad to worse, it was give and take, the relatives crying down the rights of women, and Big Mary standing bravely by the faith that was in her.

"They've not the sympathy of a man," whispered Mrs. Pius McDonald.

"They're too chicken-hearted to be doctors!" declared old Mrs. McPhail.

"She can't have much practice to come six times a day!" sneered Mrs. Archie Cameron, winding up a tilt with Big Mary.

It was a cruel way to account for the faithful attendance, and the dart, tipped with truth, went over the lowered transom and dropped into the breast of Doctor Vinney, bending over the invalid.

"Call Doctor McKenzie!" cried Thomas John's Maggie, for the hundredth time, with an eye single to the bill.

"You and your McKenzie!" retorted Big Mary, out of patience at last. "A pretty mess he made of it with the minister's baby, sponging a child over with cold water to bring out the measles!" She appealed to the whole kitchen. "Who ever heard of the likes!"

"Peace, women!" cried old Ronald McPhail. "The lad is in her hands, and she's in the hands of God!"

The doctor entered the kitchen. She was a trim little figure of a woman, without a trace of mannishness about her to relieve the oppressive femininity. Old Ronald removed his pipe from his mouth, pulled his spectacles down on his nose, and stared over them as if viewing a new breed of cattle brought into the district. Ten-year-old Flora, wide-eyed, stood rooted to the floor, looking as if she had

The Unfoolable You.

When you've settled down at night,
Locked your door, put out the light,
When you've shut the world from out your little room;
When you've stopped your daily work
At the coming of the mirk,
Then you're face to face with truth, amid the gloom.
For there's no one there to fool,
And your judgment dares be cool,
And the thoughts you face are merciless and true;
You may hoax the world, my boy,
With the tactics you employ,
But you've not succeeded yet in fooling you.

In the daily grist of toil,
In the treadmill and the moil,
In vicissitudes of traffic, you are wont
To be tempted to cajole,
Coaxed to jeopardize your soul—
In battle we must smile and bear the brunt.

But at night when all is still,
When the tension's off your will,
Comes the truth that must be recognized as true,
You can fool some people, boy,
With the methods men employ,
But you'll never find it easy fooling you.—Chicago News.

The Hour and The Woman

BY THOMAS J. PARTRIDGE.

There was little doubt but that Donald McPhee was sick unto death. He was as strong as an ox and as healthy as a trout, and, despite his youth, had come unscathed through many a bitter winter gale on Georges, but when he stepped from an overheated parlor into a snow-bank, and shoveled snow for two or three hours in light clothing, it brought on a chill. Two days afterward Donald went down with pneumonia as if struck with a blow.

A fishing port! Of all the places in the world for a woman to practise medicine! Yet there her sign swung:

VINNEY M. STETCHELL, M. D.

It was up-hill work with the doctor, but she builded well when she snatched "Big Mary" McKinnon's child from the black jaws of diphtheria, binding the mother to her with hoops of steel. Besides, Big Mary was a power in the Scotch colony of Prince Edward Island people. It was pure faith, then, wedded to gratitude, that prompted Big Mary, in the face of the strenuous protests of all the other relatives, with their favorite doctors and their individual leaning toward this and that mode of treatment, to call Doctor Stetchell in the present instance. The sick boy was six hundred miles from his parents, and if anything should happen! It was clear that Big Mary had taken upon herself a tremendous responsibility.

Nightly the relatives foregathered in the big kitchen to discuss the case in all its lights and shades; the virtues of this application, the dangers of that. Some were for one thing, some for another. Thomas John's Maggie insisted on Doctor McKenzie being called. McKenzie was "from home," and there was some clannishness in the advice; besides, Maggie felt a desire to do something, indirectly, at least, toward the old bill, on which her husband had looked with indifference for two years.

Mrs. Gillis, an aunt, maintained that poultices were weakening; Mrs. Rory McEachern swore that it would be harder to remove them. Sarah McDougall held that there was no hope before the boy was stricken down. There were no details, but she had had a dream!

But the "woman doctor" was the bone of contention. And as the case went on from bad to worse, it was give and take, the relatives crying down the rights of women, and Big Mary standing bravely by the faith that was in her.

"They've not the sympathy of a man," whispered Mrs. Pius McDonald.

"They're too chicken-hearted to be doctors!" declared old Mrs. McPhail.

"She can't have much practice to come six times a day!" sneered Mrs. Archie Cameron, winding up a tilt with Big Mary.

It was a cruel way to account for the faithful attendance, and the dart, tipped with truth, went over the lowered transom and dropped into the breast of Doctor Vinney, bending over the invalid.

"Call Doctor McKenzie!" cried Thomas John's Maggie, for the hundredth time, with an eye single to the bill.

"You and your McKenzie!" retorted Big Mary, out of patience at last. "A pretty mess he made of it with the minister's baby, sponging a child over with cold water to bring out the measles!" She appealed to the whole kitchen. "Who ever heard of the likes!"

"Peace, women!" cried old Ronald McPail. "The lad is in her hands, and she's in the hands of God!"

The doctor entered the kitchen. She was a trim little figure of a woman, without a trace of mannishness about her to relieve the oppressive femininity. Old Ronald removed his pipe from his mouth, pulled his spectacles down on his nose, and stared over them as if viewing a new breed of cattle brought into the district. Ten-year-old Flora, wide-eyed, stood rooted to the floor, looking as if she had seen a ghost. Big Mary bustled about the little woman, handed her a towel, dusted with her apron the chair that was offered.

The keen gray eyes of the doctor went round the circle. The atmosphere was saturated with prejudice. There was a respectful bearing, but not a sympathetic face. It was Big Mary McKinnon against all the others!

In five days the doctor had told them, the change would come.

"Let's give her till the fifth day!" cried Big Mary, as the relatives clamored.

The fifth day came and went; the sixth day waxed and waned, and the night of the seventh was come, and it did not require a professional eye to see that Donald was in desperate straits. One after another the air-cells in the sufferer's left lung had become solidified, as you would pour melted wax into a beehive. Donald was pulling the air into his lungs in jerky, grunting inspirations. His face was as purple as a plum. If he turned his head to the right, there was a cry of anguish; if he turned it to the left, all previous pain, in Donald's experience, was balm compared to the agonizing darts that pierced his breast. But if Donald's strength could hold out until resolution occurred, Donald would be safe.

The sick-chamber presented a tragic spectacle. When all eyes were not resting wistfully on the sufferer, they were bent sternly on the doctor. On a chair stood the tank of oxygen, its red cross staring like a blazing eye at the sick-bed. Near at hand, the sister rocked herself and her woe, refusing to be comforted. Over Donald bent the girl who loved him with one hand waving a fan to and fro, which, like the flame in the Peruvian shrine, had never ceased from the beginning. With the other she at times removed the red splashes from the sufferer's lips, giving no heed to the doctor's warning to be careful of contagion. As well have asked her brother of the Prince Edward Island contingent to be careful when he carried a wounded comrade from under Cronje's guns. Astride the bed was Donald's dory mate, with the invalid's head against his broad chest—an easily adjustable and appropriate pillow in the present exigency.

"Pull, Donald, pull!" he cried, encouragingly, as if a gale of wind was going and they were "rousing" the dory up to windward against a big sea."

"You can't pull with your head under water!" gasped Donald.

By the bedside sat the doctor, yearning for the moment of the crisis. To tell the truth, it was her first pitched battle. There had been old women and young babies, mere outpost skirmishes, but here was a strapping young adult; here was a Trojan of diseases. Her professional fate, the right of woman to act beyond a certain circumscribed sphere, seemed trembling in the balance.

In her prophecy concerning the fifth day she had taken expediency by the hand, and now expediency was pinching her fingers. She hated to call a consultant to rob her of the glory she felt was impending, and for which she had waited so long. Any one but McKenzie! She had been weak enough at one time to defer to that gentleman's judgment, and the condescending manner in which he had treated her continued to hurt.

She had called up Prof. Caroline Trefythen, thirty miles away, and that strong-minded woman had soothed a conscience that was pricking in spots with the assurance that her conduct and treatment throughout the whole case was beyond criticism.

Morning and evening, responding to the importunities of the patient's sister, she had dictated for his parents at home a rose-colored and hopeful bulletin, which was straightway translated into cold, depressing truth, and despatched. And now, despite all her zeal and attention, it began to look like defeat.

The young fisherman's splendid constitution, giving such hopeful promise of an early crisis, appeared staggered; the heart, that overworked organ, seemed to be but winking; the clamor in the kitchen was being renewed, and she felt that Big Mary, in the last ditch, had her back against the door. Most portentous omen of all, that worthy woman had twice within the last fifteen minutes addressed her as "Ma'am!"

Some one mentioned the hospital. The doctor looked up quickly. For one moment the citadel that had been for seven days so fiercely pressed trembled to its foundations. The hospital! Here was a middle course. It would keep the case out of McKenzie's hands, and she would march out with side-arms. The sister staggered to her feet.

"Don't—send him to the hospital—doctor! Don't!" A soul, worn down with nights and days of agonising suspense, in an utter abandon of grief was clinging to the doctor's shoulder. No human heart could withstand the appeal.

"They make an idol of him at home!" went on the sobbing girl. "Father wouldn't begrudge the farm if you could save him."

The sister's outburst had for a moment drawn all attention from Donald. It was the calm that suddenly called out to them from the sickbed, like the oppressive peace that settles over all when, the voyage passed, the throbbing engines stilled, the splendid steamer is gliding to her anchorage.

The doctor stepped to the bedside and placed her hand tenderly on the invalid's forehead. It was bathed in a cold perspiration. The crisis had come!

The little doctor's hand fairly trembled as she placed the thermometer under Donald's tongue. One minute—two minutes—three minutes!

The doctor removed the glass and read aloud, "One hundred and two and three-fifths!"

Some moments passed. Again the thermometer was resorted to, again removed, and the doctor read aloud, "One hundred and one and two-fifths!"

She waved the glass exultingly.

"She's heavin' the lead, Donald!" cried his dory mate. "You're over the shoals. It's deepenin the water you are. Come on! Come on!"

It was plain to all. Any one could see the red tide going out of the patient's face and the peace replacing it, as the sun follows over the sands the receding sea.

"Run, Rory, run!" cried the sister to Big Mary's oldest, as she dashed off a telegram without counting the words. "Donald is safe! Hurrah! Hurrah!"

The December sun came up and crept sparkling over the crisp snow, and at last laughed into the sick-room, shedding its radiance over Donald and the jubilant group that surrounded the doctor. The little woman's form fairly trembled under the caressing blows that Big Mary struck her between the shoulders; her hand was wet with the hysterical tears of the sister; the patient threw the bedclothes from his still brawny arm, and reaching out, touched with the tips of his fingers a fold of her dress.

"There wasn't much water between your forefoot and the rocks," said the dory mate, "but she brought you over the bar all right. It was live reckoning she made, not dead."

Meanwhile, the strait that runs between the island home and the mainland had been sealed up with ice, and because of a great storm the ice-boat did not cross for a week. And all the letters, embodying the cold truth, that would have kept the old people's souls on the rack for days, came in with the telegram.—Youth's Companion.

THE DYING HAWAIIAN RACE.

Intermarriage Is the Only Hope for the Brown Men of the Pacific.

A very dark shadow has been felt to hang over the future of the native Hawaiians. It comes from the early and obstinate depopulation which began with Cook's discovery in 1778. The most reliable estimates place the then population at not less than 250,000. At the arrival of the missionaries in 1820 not more than 100,000 remained, and the multitude of abandoned village sites gave the old missionaries an impression that fully two-thirds of the people had disappeared.

The causes of that enormous mortality were not obscure. They were the introduction among the long-isolated "nature-race," wholly lacking the immunity enjoyed of Continental peoples, of new and virulent diseases, which swept them off. Chief among these diseases was one which Cook's ship brought, and which speedily infected the entire population. Tuberculosis contributed.

Added to these hostile influences were the depopulating wars of Kamehameha, and the destructive collection of sandalwood, while whaleships converted every seaport into a public brothel.

Mitigating and remedial influences have since then operated favorably under increasing moral culture and intelligence, but the depopulation is not yet wholly checked. Estimating from the later census figures there are now remaining less than 30,000 pure Hawaiians, and not more than 10,000 part Hawaiians. The total racial diminution has been about one-half in the last half century, although part Hawaiians have rapidly increased during that time. The excess of deaths over births still remains, with a great mortality among the pure Hawaiian children.

What are their prospects for the future? We should answer measurably hopeful. There is manifest improvement. Especially is this the case among the mixed breed, who are rapidly gaining in numbers, due to their superior energy and intelligence, and to their wiser care of offspring. Under present outlook, the mixed Hawaiians are likely in a very few generations greatly to exceed the pure native breed in numbers. The prevailing language of both classes will have become entirely English, due to the vigorous teaching of English in the common schools, where Portuguese and Asiatic youth, alike with Hawaiian, are learning good "United States," which will displace the outlandish tongues, as it does on our continent.

The future commingling of Hawaiian blood with the other races will not be an unwholesome one. The Hawaiian nature is courageous and generous, and peculiarly receptive to new light. The Japanese race anciently received a very large infusion of cognate Oceanic blood, which loosened up their ancient Mongolian stiffness and made them versatile and receptive. We may thus look forward to the future descendants of the Hawaiians with hopefulness and pride. The future composite result will make the coming Hawaiian civilization a bright one under the presiding power of American Institutions.—St. Louis Republic.

THE FOUR-LEAVED CLOVER.

Doris, in her gown of white,
Gayly dotted over
With tiny sprays of poises bright,
Hunts the four-leaved clover.

In the meadow, with the bees
All about her humming,
All impatient till she sees
If good luck is coming.

Doris, in her ruffled gown,
Hunting four-leaved clover,
As she searches up and down,
Hums this ditty over:

"Three, let be. Five, let thrive,
Pass the six-leaf over,
But four-leaf pluck; it brings good luck,— Bonny four-leaved clover!"

A SWISS LEGEND.

On the mountain side, near Lake Geneva, is a large wall of rock called the Scex qui pilau. Now, that name is supposed to be French, but even the young readers who understand that language might puzzle over "Scex qui pilau" without in the least getting the meaning, for the patois" or dialect of the country has changed it beyond recognition. It means "weeping rock." Come and see this rock that is weeping, weeping, weeping, all the time, and then you shall hear the story.

You follow the sign posts along through fields of gray-brown and green, dotted with crocuses, till you come to a very pretty wooded place. You enter, and in a few minutes you are standing beneath the weeping rock. It is a large bank of stone, honey-combed with small caves, all dripping, dripping, dripping all the time. You can climb into the grottos by a rough wooden staircase and penetrate the dark, damp recesses—that is, unless you have brought along some prudent persons who tell you not to go in those wet caves without your rubbers. And now, would you like to know why this rock is weeping? Here is the legend:

Albert de Chaulin, son of a rich seigneur, fell in love with a beautiful peasant girl named Joliette, and they spent many happy days together on the weeded mountain, overlooking stretches of blue lake and green country where little clusters of red-roofed houses marked the villages, while beyond all rose the Dent du Midi, growing pink in the evening light.

But these days were not to last, for the seigneur discovered his son's passion for Joliette, and forbade the marriage which had been so happily planned by the young lovers. Indeed, he forbade Albert to see Joliette at all, and for a while the lovers were separated.

One moonlight night, when the mountains were white and ghostly and cast shadowy reflections in the still, moonlit lake, Albert heard a voice calling him. It was not Joliette, but it was her friends, the fairies of the wood. Eagerly he followed the singing voices till they led him to a large rock in the wood, and there, beautiful and lovely as ever, was Joliette. Only the dreamy stirring of the pine trees broke the silence of that meeting. And they lingered there, exchanging vows again, sure that some day would see their hopes fulfilled.

Suddenly there came a sharp sound, there was an angry exclamation, and there before them stood the seigneur. Behind him were armed followers, ready for his command. "Seize them both!" cried the seigneur. And then he struck the rock, exclaiming, "When the rock weeps that pretty one shall wed my son!"

And then a wondrous thing happened; the rock grew moist, drops of water trickled down—the rock was weeping! The seigneur gazed in astonishment. What was this marvel? But he must keep his word. And he had said that the lovers should wed when the rock wept. He was obliged to allow the marriage, which was celebrated with great pomp and festivity.—Washington Star.

THE SKY ROAD.

Some time since a lover of children told a touching story of meeting three little urchins in a city suburb who, ragged, hatless and shoeless, but quite unconscious of any deficiencies, were bubbling over with bits of knowledge picked up at the public schools, from which fragmentary lore their busy brains had wrought quaint deductions. They had been hearing scraps of Grecian mythology, and were full of the wonderful story of Pegasus, the winged horse, who, as the legend runs, first touched the earth on the Acropolis in Corinth, and finally flew back to heaven. The smallest of the trio explained that Pegasus couldn't travel on the dirt road because he was made for the sky road. Looking up at the lady, he said with a wise little nod: "We are made for the sky road." Dear little ragged fellow! One cannot help wondering if he realized the marvelous, far-reaching truth, of his own words.

The sky road! Another little one caught a glimpse of the beautiful upper realm of living where child souls, in their sweet innocence, ought to be especially at home. A group were happily playing on the broad doorstone, under the protecting shade of widespreading trees.

"I'm the mother," cried the largest little girl. "There always has to be a mother, and I'm it."

Blacked-eyed Ned sat next. "I'm the father," he asserted, sturdily. "Nellie and Rob can be the children, but I'll be the father, and of course I'll see to things."

A little blue-eyed tot of a girl saw a very good chance of being left out in this pretty family game.

"What am I?" she asked, a little pitifully. "Is there anything left for me to be?"

"There has to be servants," said the self-elected father and mother. "That's all that is left that we can see."

"Well," remarked the wee-girlie very sweetly, "I'll be a real nice one, then. Somebody has to do things for the rest, and it's just as good as anything if you do it nice."—The Bee Hive.

FATHER BIRD HELPS.

In the Catskill Mountains a pair of cedar waxwings was found sitting as late as the fifth of September.

I had seen one of the pair on the nest during the daytime in the latter part of August, says a writer in St. Nicholas, and thought it must be very cold to hatch eggs. The weather was then between freezing and temperate in early morning. In September it seemed impossible that any bird could sit on eggs in a nest in an exposed place.

Going to the nest one evening, I found both of the waxwings upon it. The nest was plainly in view in a low cedar tree, and, seeing them from every side, I made sure that both birds were actually inside the hollow of the nest.

I found that the birds thus sat together from late afternoon, when it began to grow colder, until early the following morning, when it began to grow warmer, and sometimes during the middle of extra cold days.

On Sept. 4 only one waxwing was on the nest at a quarter to 6 p. m About five minutes later the other came to a cedar near by; he soon flew to the nest and, after much turning about on top of it, finally settled down on the back of the other bird or at any rate inside the nest. The next day the heads of two young waxwings showed over the edge of the nest. They seemed three or four days old, and one of their parents was brooding them.

A RAT WITH BRAINS.

While standing in a large woodshed, one end of which he had partitioned off with narrow slats as a fowl-house, Mr. X. heard a gnawing noise, and, looking about him, saw a large brown rat darting away from a dog-biscuit lying on the floor of the shed. He decided to remain quiet and watch if this thief of his dog-biscuit would return. Presently he did! And, slyly glancing at Mr. X. as if to say, "Now you let me alone and I'll let you alone," his ratship began dragging the biscuit over toward the slat partition behind which were the fowls clucking and scratching. He reached the laths and tried to drag the biscuit through them after him. It would not pass, being flat and broad. After some vein struggles with it, the rat vanished, to return with another of his acquaintance. The new-comer he stationed inside the fowlhouse. He himself came out and seized the biscuit by one corner. He then began tilting it up on its side, and the adroit friend poked his head through the slats and steadied it with him. In a few seconds the biscuit was held between them "up and down," and, between rat number one's pushing without and rat number two's pulling from within the barrier, the prize was forced triumphantly through the slats.—Selected.

VEGETABLES AND FRUITS.

The term vegetable has reference to the whole or any part of a plant cultivated especially with reference to use at the table. But the use of the word vegetable doesn't always depend upon cooking, for celery is a vegetable and apples are fruit whether eaten raw or cooked. One would suppose the tomato to be entitled to the term fruit, for the method of its raising resembles that of fruit. But it is usually called vegetable whether eaten raw or cooked, in spite of its appearance. The quince is so fruitlike in appearance—so resembling apples, pears etc.—that it persists in being called fruit though eaten only when cooked. Sometimes the vegetable is a bud as with cabbage and brussels sprouts, leaves as spinach, steams above ground as asparagus, stems enlarged (tubers) underground as common potatoes, or roots as sweet potatoes, turnips, beets and carrots.—From "Nature and Science," in St. Nicholas.

The Jews in Palestine.

Some twenty years ago Palestine meant little to the majority of Jews. Now all is changing. Nearly every year fresh colonies have been established, till now they number over thirty, and time is adding to their number and extent. One-third of Palestine proper is once again Jewish soil. So anxious are the Jews to again get possession that they endeavor to purchase all that comes into the market.—Rev. W. M. Christie, in the British Weekly.

Sir Jonathan Williams, a retired physician of Great Britain, declares that the purest English in the United States is in Kentucky.

The use of decayed eggs is extremely dangerous. Dr Cameron has called attention to a case of poisoning that happened in a convent at Limerick, Ireland, in 1895, after a meal at which had been served a cream in which a bad egg had been used. Seventy-four women who partook of the meal were poisoned, and four of them died.

For an artificial rubber a German authority recommends mixing an infusion of Carragheen moss with starch, and drying on a slightly oiled metal plate. When the transparent sheet produced is broken up, it softens in cold water, and on subsequent heating it forms a thick gummy substance, which may be used for thickening paint or for many of the purposes of rubber.

The asteroids or minor planets, of which nearly 600 have been recorded since the beginning of the nineteenth century, have been supposed to form a ring in the space between the orbits of Mars and Jupiter. One discovered on February 22 of this year, however, has a unique interest in having been proven to be beyond Jupiter, its mean distance from the sun being 5.25 to Jupiter's 5.20, while its aphelion distance—6.151—exceeds that of Jupiter by nearly the earth's distance from the sun.

A correspondent of Nature remarks that the now known facts seem to require a modification of the statement found in some text books that "it is impossible to say whether a flash of lightning moves from a cloud to the earth or in the opposite direction." Many photographs of lightning taken in the Transvaal show that, in all cases, the discharges were from cloud to cloud, or from the clouds to the earth. Quite frequently, the correspondent says, he has observed lightning flashes leaving a cloud for the earth, but fading away before reaching it. The opposite phenomenon has not been observed.

"Calcium Steel" is the name given to an earthenware of great hardness and durability, manufactured in Europe of pulverized feldspar, sand and lime. The materials are made into a paste and baked in an oven. The calcium from which the product obtains its name is contained in the feldspar. Another kind of calcium steel will be known if experiments now under way in Germany are successful in producing an alloy of iron and calcium comparable in its properties with nickel and chrome steel. Thus far, however, it is said that these experiments have failed to bring about a combination of calcium with molten iron, but it is hoped to make calcium useful in refining copper and nickel, and in bronze casting.

WASHINGTON'S SLEEVE LINKS.

and Halleck to Gen. J. G. Wilson

At a dinner given by the Union College alumni in New York, two or three years ago, an impromptu speaker, not on the program, Gen. James Grant Wilson, told the following story concerning the sleeve links of Gen. Washington, afterward the property of Benedict Arnold and Col. Tarleton:

"I wish to talk of one of whom Americans always like to hear. I will turn the hands of time back to 1777, and ask you to go with me to the battlefield of Saratoga, which the poet Halleck called the field of grounded arms. There was a great victory, which was not due to the efforts of the American commander, but to Benedict Arnold.

"The story of that victory was reported to General Washington. A short time afterward he met General Arnold, and, after complimenting him on his great victory, said:

"'I have heard, general, that you lost your sleeve links in the battle, and I ask you to accept of me these, although I have worn them for some time.'

"General Arnold took them and wore them for some time. But later, when he became a traitor, and Washington, in his dignified manner, had expressed his contempt in strong and burning words, Arnold no longer cared to wear the sleeve links, and gave them to Colonel Tarleton, the only British officer who had treated him with any kind of courtesy.

"Tarleton, when he departed for England, gave them to a loyalist, who had acted as his secretary, and he gave them to General Fitz Greene Halleck, who, in turn, left them to the man who later was his biographer. 'And here, gentlemen,' said General Wilson, drawing up his sleeves a little and raising his arms, 'are Washington's sleeve links.'"—New York Sun.

FEARFUL was the devastation, and terrible the loss of life. on the gulf coast last week, and great distress is felt by the unfortunate inhabitants of Mobile and Pensacola. The summer resorts of Coden and Bayou-la-Batre, have been almost entirely destroyed. houses swept away, and the survivors left destitnte. The cyclone was of tremendous force and carried everything before ir. All tnat can be done to alleviate the distress and succor the afflicted is being done, and the more fortunate of Alabama people will remember their brethren in their hour of trial.

THE great State Fair at Birmingham October 15 to 20, promises to be the greatest fair ever held in the south. Monday is Govenors' day, Gov. Jelks will open the fair and deliver an address. Tuesday is Home Comers' day, when Alabamaians from all over the United States will greet each other. Wednesday, Farmers' Union day. will be a great gathering of farmers. Thursday, is Merchants and Traveling Men's day. Friday is Birmingham and children's day, when the little ones will take possession, and Saturday finishes the show with a military and automobile display, and farewell exercises for Home Comers.

A great deal of interest was expressed at the meeting of the cotton growers in the big State Fair which is to be held in Montgomery, October 22 to 27. Although no official action was taken by the growers, many expressions were heard in approval of the step Montgomerians are taking to benefit the agricultural industry of the State. Special stress was laid by them on the importance to the cotton raiser and the farmer, of attending the Fair on the opening day, which has been set aside as Southern Cotton Association and Farmers' Union Day. On this occasion, speeches will be made by President Harvie Jordan and Financial Agent E. D. Smith of the Southern Cotton Association, and W. M. Morris, State Organizer for the Farmers' Union. Coming at a time when the crops will have just been gathered, and when cotton will be most actively on the market, the talks of the speakers of the occasion will have special application and interest. Many of those who attended the meeting here last week were heard to make the statement that they intended coming here for the initial day of Fair Week, and that an effort was being made in their respective neighbor hoods to bring all the farmers to the exhibition.

The announcement of President W. F. Vandiver of the Fair Association, that he will make a short address on Railroad Day (Thursday) to the young men of the State has created considerable attention here in Montgomery. It was not the intention of Mr. Vandiver to speak during the Fair. He is greatly interested in the matter of transportation, however, and a day or so ago decided to make the speech introducing President Samuel Spencer of the Southern Railway, who will make the principal address on that occasion. He has given out that his remarks will be intended chiefly for the young man, and that he will have something to say especially for them. Probably no man in Alabama is better fitted to talk on this subject from the merchants and farmers standpoint than Mr. Vandiver. For several years he has been one of the moving figures in the freight traffic bureau which has done so much for shippers throughout the State.

Beat 1.

Editor Banner—Please allow me a little space for a few words. Well, the first thing I want to speak about is I saw in last week's Union that the Hon. A. C. Smith and the Hon. J. O. Middleton had gone out to organize, I reckon, some more clubs of some sort. Now, I say this because about two and a half years ago they came to Mineral Springs and organized a Democratic club. Well, I forget he (Smith) wanted to be probate judge at that time, but you ought to have heard that speech he made. He said he was a Democrat and could not be anything else; he said he could not be a Republican because that meant negro equality. He said I went down to Montgomery and there I found negroes on the jury, and that was one cause that he would not be a Republican, and he told many other things.

And then comes Mr. J. Osmond; he said he knew he was a Democrat for he was born a Democrat and was rocked in a Democratic cradle, and daddy was a Democrat. And then he compared Lewis Reynolds to the fellow's dog that barked so funny. Now, to the voters of Chilton. Do you think that such a man as that would do to represent our county? No! his mind would change before he got there. Well, Mr. Editor, the next time I write I may be changed to a Pop. myself. My goodness! if you will just read the Union and read what Just a Voter and X Ray said, we might both vote for Middleton, but you know X Ray was once a preacher, and Just a Voter, he stayed in Thorsby awhile, but never again. Well, I will stop off for this time by saying hurrah for the Democratic ticket and success to the Banner.

JUST ANOTHER VOTER.

Maplesville, Sept. 28, 1906

Editor Banner—In answer to Mr. Latham's letter from Lawley, in regard to Mr. F. J. Fitts being a drunkard, I wish to say to the people of Chilton and Bibb counties that Mr. Fitts has been boarding with me since the first of last February and I have always found him to be sober and upright in every respect. I have never heard anyone say that they had ever seen Mr. Fitts under the influence of whiskey, I have seen Mr. Fitts take a drink but have never seen him drunk, and I do not believe that there is man in Chilton county that will come up and say they have. I know that Mr. Fitts takes a bottle of beer or a toddy sometimes, but that does not give anyone room to say that he is a drunkard. I hear that there is a certain party going over the county telling the people that Mr. Fitts will get a few votes in Maplesville, but he says that they are all whiskey drinkers. Well that is all true, and all that the other man gets will be the same, and if the candidates bar all of the whiskey drinkers, as this party calls them, I do not think that there will be any votes polled in Maplesville for anyone and very few in the county. Airight, Mr. Latham, let us hear from you again.

J. S. MARTIN.

Result of Neglect

In most cases consumption results from a neglected or improperly treated cold. Foley's Honey and Tar cures the most obstinate coughs and prevents serious results. It cost you no more than the unknown preparations and you should insist upon having the genuine in the yellow package. Upchurch Drug co.

Lawley, Oct. 1, 1906

Editor Banner—We wish to state in regard to the letter signed by Mr. F. J. Fitts in the last weeks Banner, that Arthur D. Latham did not state in our presence that he based his statement on what the little boys said and that he did not say that he regretted it very much, but he did say that if it was a lie he was sorry that he wrote it and it not, he was very proud of it, and further, he stated to Fitts that a bit dog would hollow and if he was not guilty he would have stayed at home.

We have had dealings with Mr. Latham for some time and he has proved to be an honest and truthful young man. Respectfully,

GEO. F. STRINGER,
ROBERT HICKS.

Lawley, Sept. 30, 1906

Editor Banner—I wish to say just a few words in regard to Mr. Felix Fitts' letter which appeared in last week's Banner and the Union. Mr. Fitts said that I admitted to him in the presence of Messrs. Stringer and Hicks that I did not see him with any whiskey that day, and that I was basing my statement strictly upon what the boys had told me, and that I regretted it very much. I read to Messrs. Stringer and Hicks the letter of Fitts and asked them did I say it, and they both said that I told Fitts if it was a lie I was sorry that I wrote it, and if it was true I was proud of it. I also told him that a bit dog would holler, and if he had not been guilty he would have stayed at home and not come over here tracing up things that were not so. Fitts said he was going to sue me for slander, and a lot of other things that are too ugly for me to mention, I told him that I could prove everything that I had said and was ready to do so at any time. Fitts admitted that he did drink whiskey but did not get drunk, and that there were enough whiskey drinkers in Chilton county to elect him probate judge if he was disposed to run for it. I told him that was true, and if he ever got to be sheriff that would be the ticket he would come in on. This was said in the presence of Geo. F. Stringer and Robert Hicks; write them and see if they won't tell you the same.

It seems that Mr. Fitts is trying to prove me out a liar. and if there is anyone that don't believe what I have said, I can give you the namel of those who did drink and had the opportunity to drink whiskey with Mr. Felix J. Fitts on the day of our baptising and you can write them and see for yourself. Write or call on Charley Walker, Henry Latham, Sam W. Green, Alex Latham and Rufe Broadhead. I can give you more if there is any need of.

I wish to state in regard to Mr. W. Y Nix's letter in the Union that I did not take back anything that I had said, but I did take the abuse that Fitts gave me and am proud today that I did, for there is one above that will give him every stripe that he needs and cause him to suffer and repent of his deeds which he has committed here on earth. Mr. Fitts is a fine looking young man and I wish him well, but according to the steps that he is taking now, I am afraid he will fall through. No man can accomplish anything by handling whiskey, and why they try to follow it I can't tell. "Beware of strong drink." Respectfully,

ARTHUR D. LATHAM.

A Young Mother at 70.

"My mother has suddenly been made young at 70. Popwell's School House.

Please allow me a small space in your good paper to say a few words in regard to our Sunday school, it is progressing nicely and it seems that the people are taking more interest in it than they have ever took in it since it started. There was quite a crowd there last Sunday, the 23 came again and just kept coming as long as it lasted.

A large crowd went to the debate at Fairview Saturday night and report a nice time, but the best of all was those folks shouting as they came back. Everybody go to the the speaking next Thursday night and hear what Mr. Gulledge has to say, and Mr. Middleton has to sing that he has been singing all the year. I will close with best wishes to the Banner and its many readers.

Letter to R. J. Lake.

Clanton, Ala.

Dear Sir: We shall feel obliged if you write us how you came-out on your first few jobs Devoe, as to gallons expected and used.

Take Job A. You made your price expecting to use 25 gallons Devoe, and used 15. Job B. You expected to use 15 and used 10 And tell us what paint you had used before. Of course. you judge Devoe by what you have used before.

Here's how a few came-out.

M A Thomas, painter, Lynchburg. Va, writes: My first job with Devoe. I estimated 37 gallons; it took 25. Since then I have used nothing else.

C B Edwards, Raleigh, N C, had used 30 gallons paste paint on his house. and bought 30 gallons Devoe; A E Glenn, his painter, said it wouldn't be enough. Had 16 gallons left.

Mayor W W Carrol, Monticello, Florida, writes: Painter estimated 35 gallons for my house; took 20 gallons Devoe.

Gilmore & Davis Co, contractors and painters, Tallahassee, Florida, say 2 gallons Devoe spreads as far as 3 of any other paint they know, and covers better.

S A Bullard, painter, Sanford, Florida. estimated 50 gallons for Odd Fellows and Masonic Halls; they took 29 Devoe.

Jones & Rogers, Merkel, Texas, estimated 10 gallons Devoe for Mr. Pratt's house and bought 5 gallons for first coat; it painted two coats.

Erb-Springall Co, San Antonio, Texas, painted two houses same size for D J Woodward, one lead-and-oil, the other Devoe, Devoe cost $12 less for paint and labor.

Tom Masey's painter, Walnut Springs, Texas, estimated for his house 10 gallons Devoe; he had 4 left

You see how it goes. Even the best painter cant guess little enough at first.

Order to Hear Guardian's Petition to Sell Lands.

The State of Alabama, Chilton County.
Probate Court, September 19, 1906.

On this, the 19th day of September, 1906, came Thomas A. Curry, as Guardian of Mary Curry and Roberta Curry, minors, and filed his petition in writing and under oath, praying for an order and proceeding to sell certain lands described in said petition, property of the said minors, for reinvestment in otherlands or property.

It is ordered that said petition be set down for hearing on the 8th day of October, 1906, and that notice of said petition, together with the said day for hearing the same, and the nature thereof, be given by publication for three successive weeks in The Banner, a newspaper published in this county, calling upon all persons interested to appear and contest the same, if they think proper.

It is further ordered that said minors also have notice of this proceeding and of the day set for hearing the same, by citation to be personally served on them ten days before said day appointed for said hearing.

It is further ordered that A. C. Smith, who is, in the opinion of the Court, a suitable and competent person therefor, and who is not of kin or of counsel to the petitioner, be and he is hereby appointed Guardian ad litem to represent and protect the interests of said minors in the matter of said proceeding, and that he have notice of his said appointment.

L. H. REYNOLDS, Judge of Probate.

HERBINE

The Popular Liver Medicine Will Keep You Well

A GUARANTEED CURE for all diseases produced by TORPID LIVER and IMPURE BLOOD. Do not fill your system with Arsenic, Calomel and Quinine. They act as rank poisons which vitiate the blood, debilitate the system, and leave a trail of bad symptoms which require years to obliterate. HERBINE is purely vegetable and contains no mineral or narcotic poisons, is absolutely harmless and is the simple remedy of nature. It carries off all poison in the system and leaves no injurious effects.

CURED BY HERBINE AFTER OTHER REMEDIES FAILED

Mr. L. A. Hicks, Iredell, Texas, says: "I was sick in bed for eight months with liver trouble, the doctor seemed to do me no good. I was told to try Herbine, and it cured me in a short time. I cannot recommend this wonderful medicine too highly."

ONLY A GOVERNESS

An advertisement that appeared one day in the Morning Post, informed an interested world that Mrs. Mandeville-Jones required a governess for her younger daughter, aged thirteen, with the mention of a salary identical with the wages that Mrs. Mandeville-Jones paid her under-housemaid.

Reggie Fulwarton, who knows everybody, spotted the advertisement at once, and in the smoking room of the Hookah Club, called the attention of one of his pals to its seductive offers.

"What! You don't know Mrs. Mandeville-Jones? Why, old Jones was proprietor of some patent medicine or other. Regular old bounder. And she too awful for words! But he's safely planted underneath the daisies, while she's got a house in Berkeley square and plenty of the needful! So there you are!"

Nevertheless, Mrs. Mandeville-Jones had plenty of answers to her advertisement from applicants to undertake the education of Miss Irene Mandeville-Jones at £18 a year.

Among the rest was a dark girl of about twenty, very simply dressed in mourning, whose appearance attracted the mamma of Miss Irene, because she looked meek and snubbable, and was neither too good looking nor too well dressed for a "governess person."

Mrs. Mandeville-Jones elicited the fact that her name was Una Carew; that her father, who had been rector of a remote Cornish village, had lately died, leaving her mother and herself very badly off; and that she had decided to take a situation as governess, while her mother went to live with her brother in the north of England; who could not take both of them in.

"And you have references?" inquired Mrs. Mandeville-Jones.

"I have a letter from Lady Chedgrave," said Una, timidly, handing it to the lady as she spoke.

"Lady Chedgrave!" said Mrs. Mandeville-Jones, suspiciously. "I thought the present earl was a widower!"

"This is from the Dowager Lady Chedgrave," explained Una, hastily. "She lives in our village and has known me all my life!"

The handwriting of a dowager countess did not fail to impress Mrs. Jones' mind, and she decided to engage Miss Carew, as the instructress of her beloved Irene, who was a finely developed specimen of the genus "spoiled child."

Una Carew, who had always been used to being petted and made much of at home, found her life in the Berkeley mansion anything but a bed of roses. The ostentation and vulgarity of the whole establishment and its occupants jarred upon her.

But unfortunately there was another thing which preyed upon her mind. Nearly a year before her father's death, Lord Langley, the eldest son of the Earl of Chedgrave, whom she had known ever since they were boy and girl together, had come to her and asked her to marry him.

But Una knew what a hot-tempered and eccentric old man Lord Chedgrave was; and though he had always been extremely kind to her, and even made a sort of pet of her, she knew he would never dream of accepting her as a daughter-in-law. In fact, he had definitely said that his son must marry an heiress, and that if he disobeyed him and married a pauper they might sweep a crossing, for they would never get a penny of allowance out of him.

And so had told her ardent suiter that she would never marry him. In consequence he had gone off to the Rockies in search of the grizzly. But poor Una, having got rid of her lover, with feminine perversity longed for him to come back; and when she saw a paragraph stating that Lord Langley was bringing home an American heiress as his bride she began to lie awake at night wondering why the universe was not run on a totally different plan.

One day, however, there appeared a new misfortune. Irene announced that her brother Bertie, aged twenty-two, was coming back from a protracted tour on the Continent. And he proved to be very much the sort of little bounder that she had expected. What Una had not anticipated, however, was that, finding a "doosid pretty girl" established under the maternal roof, he felt it his duty to start "spooning."

Now Una Carew was by no means so deficient in spirit as Mrs. Jones had imagined; and when Mr. Bertie began paying her his somewhat exaggerated attentions, she had no hesitation in snubbing him heartily.

Bertie himself was surprised and disgusted to find that a mere governess was not prepared to accept him quite at his own valuation; and he took counsel with a bosom friend at the club.

"Fact, I assure you, dear boy! Spend all my time makin' eyes at her, don't you know; and don't get a bit forrader!"

Fulwarton looked up. "Oh, the 'Balmy Bounder' relating his conquests! Rough on the girl, anyhow!" he said to himself.

"Why didn't you try her with gloves?"

"Just what I did! Hanged if she didn't tell me she had plenty of her own, and didn't want any of mine!"

"And what did you say to that?"

"Told her I should never have guessed it from personal observation. Ha-ha-ha!"

"Infernal little cad! He wants kicking!" murmured Reggie to his edges.

"Gad! You should have seen the way she blazed up! Thought she was going to hit me over the head with her parasol! Hang it all, she needn't give herself such airs, if her name is Una Carew! She's only a governess, after all!"

A telegram that Fulwarton wrote was addressed to Lord Langley at a hotel in Paris, and contained only two words: "Wanted—Run."

The fact that Lord Langley had been Fulwarton's fag at Eton may possibly account for the curious wording of the message. As soon as Langley arrived in London he went straight to Fulwarton's chambers to ask him what he meant by dragging him away from the Gay City with such a peremptory wire.

"First of all, old chap, about that American heiress whom we have seen darkly hinted at in various papers?"

"A mere figment of the fertile journalistic imagination! I hope to heaven you haven't dragged me all this way merely to hear me deny such an obvious 'duck' as that!"

"Not exactly! The next question is—what about Una Carew?"

"My dear Reggie, after her father's death she went away somewhere as a governess. But all my efforts to trace her have failed!"

"And you are still—?"

"You infernal idiot! Of course, I am still—as you gracefully put it. Only, as you know, she refused me!"

"All right. Supposing I could tell you where she is?"

"You don't really mean it, Reggie!"

"Well, look here. You know the Mandeville-Jones lot?"

"I've heard of them."

"Very well. That's where Una Carew is doing the 'Jane Eyre' turn! And the 'Balmy Bounder' himself is trying to introduce a little sunshine into her existence!"

* * * * * * *

The next day when Lord Langley called in Berkeley square and asked to see Miss Carew, the pompous butler informed him that she was walking in Hyde Park with Miss Irene.

He jumped into a hansom and dashed off to see if he could find her there, but not before his card had been secured by the butler, who in due course laid it before Mrs. Jones. Now it so happened that a friend of the latter lady caught sight of Irene in the park, and bore her off to tea, leaving Una Carew with the afternoon to herself.

By a singular coincidence Mr. Bertie Jones happened to come upon her in a solitary portion of the park, and seized the opportunity of being more than usually pressing in his attentions. Things had actually got to the stage when Una had begun to raise her voice in alarm, when Mr. Bertie Jones suddenly found himself seated in a freshly watered flower bed, while a particularly athletic-looking young gentleman tucked Una's trembling arm in his and marched her off in another direction.

The next morning, however, Lord Langley, in spite of the protests of the butler, insisted on seeing Miss Carew. He then proceeded, as eloquently as he knew how, to plead his suit.

But Una was still firm in her refusal, being convinced that it would ruin his prospects in the eyes of his father.

Lord Langley was just beginning to wonder whether by any chance she cared for some one else, when the door was thrown open and the butler announced:

"The Earl of Chedgrave!"

"Una, my dear," he began, "how d'ye do? Come and kiss me! Langley, you infernal young soundrel, what are you doing here, sir? What's that? Do I understand you to say that you are making an offer of marriage to Miss Carew? You dare to tell me that to my very face?"

"But, father, she has refused me!"

"Refused you? Then, by gad, sir, she is a sensible girl! She evidently knows you are a worthless young fool, or you would have proposed to her a year ago!"

"But I did, sir; and she refused me then, too!"

"Better and better! Hanged if I don't marry the girl myself! Una, my dear, will you marry me?"

Poor Una was thoroughly puzzled by this new aspect of the old man, but he went briskly on:

"Now, look here, my dear, you have got to choose between the old fool and the young fool. Which will you have? Don't mind saying that you prefer to have me as a father-in-law, if that's how you feel about it. Langley, you idiot, why don't you kiss the girl, while I do the heavy father in the background?"

When this had been duly carried out, Langley, who was still lost in astonishment, remarked, "But I thought, sir, you always said I must marry an heiress?"

"So I did. Because I knew what an infernally obstinate young fool you were! But I meant you all along to marry Una! So now it is all settled!"

At this point the door was again thrown open, and this time Mrs. Mandeville-Jones stalked in and at once began:

"Mr. dear Lord Chedgrave—"

"Pardon me, madam, for interrupting you!" said his lordship, who was now fairly bubbling over with excitement. "You were good enough to write me about my son's movements. Allow me to say that my son is quite capable of taking care of himself. And in the future he will have the assistance of the lady to whom hitherto you have entrusted the education of your doubtless charming daughter!"—Modern Society.

ORCHARD AND GARDEN

THE CROW—THE FARMER'S FRIEND OR FOE.

It is claimed that the crow is the farmer's friend on the ground that it feeds largely on the grubs, slugs and wire worms, which are so injurious to crops, but however this may be it is certain that this estimable bird is no friend of the poultry keeper. The crow can not properly be called a bird of prey, in the general acceptance of the term, for it is not carnivorous, yet when sorely tried by the pangs of hunger it may be said to be omniverous, for it will then eat almost anything. But, though the crow may as a general rule, be depended upon not to molest young poultry, it is none the less a rogue and will steal all the eggs it can see. It is also a greedy eater, and will help itself liberally to the poultry food. When hungry it is a bold adventurer and will enter the hen houses and rob the nests, but an occasional shot fired into the particular flock which frequents one's poultry yard, will have an excellent effect in keeping the crow at a civil distance.

When hens are kept in colony houses, throughout the farm, and at some distance from the farmyard, many eggs are stolen by crows, unless due precautions are taken to guard against their depredations. The most effective remedy is certainly to have the nests arranged on the outside of the house and at the end farthest from the door. The only means of access to the nests should be through the house, and if the openings are small the crows will be afraid to enter.—Cor. Inland Poultry Journal.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS.

Watch the poultry weaklings.

Pinch the heads off the worthless queens.

A mulch works well around the gooseberry bushes.

Put another window in the old, dark poultry house.

Plow the orchard shallow, not deeper than four inches.

The branches of the peach tree ought to be thinned out to let the sun in.

Poultry culture will never do for drones. It requires live, wide awake men.

Poultry work requires the same shrewdness that any other occupation does.

Save your own seed, or buy the best seed at four times the cost, if necessary.

Lard alone is a good insecticide. It does not need kerosene to make it effective.

Keep the ewes outside as much as possible, but do not expose them to rains or snows.

Don't make the mistake of planting poor seed because it is cheap. Cheap seed always proves high priced when fall comes.

Breed from the mares and to the stallions that possess, and whose ancestors in all directions possessed, the qualities which are desired in the offspring.

In late spring feed cows clover hay and corn. For early pasture put them on rye and wheat.

LEGHORNS VS. MONGRELS.

The West Virginia station reports the following summary of an interesting experiment: 1. Fifty White Leghorns were compared with fifty mongrels of one year as to cost of food and egg production, ordinary care and attention being given them such as they would receive on the average farm. 2. In addition to skim-milk used to moisten the mash the Leghorns consumed sixty-one pounds of food costing 85.3 cents, and the mongrels consumed 66.8 pounds of the same materials costing 92.1 cents. 3. During the year the Leghorns laid 116.5 eggs worth $2.24 per hen, and the mongrels 96.1 eggs, worth $1.78 per hen. 4. The Leghorns gave a profit over the cost of food of $1.30 and the mongrels a profit of 86 cents. 5. The mongrels gained in weight one pound per head more than the Leghorns. If this increase in weight is taken into consideration then the Leghorns gave a profit of forty cents per hen more than the mongrels. 6. The highest prices for fresh eggs usually prevail during the months of November, December, January and February. During these four months the mongrels laid only 364 eggs and the Leghorns, 1,029, or practically three times as many.

WHAT THE SILO WILL ACCOMPLISH.

It is the testimony of hundreds and thousands of the more intelligent farmers throughout our great and broad land, who make it a practice to observe matters, that ensilage has practically become a necessity in the the woman who longs for it and doesn't try a little work of that kind on her own account in in the minor-making up of a ration to be fed to a cow producing milk in the dairy. The number of silos is being increased yearly, and there is no getting over the fact that it has come to stay just the same as the milk tester and cream separator. The true value of ensilage is fast becoming known and appreciated by both farmers and feeders, and it does not take them long to find out that the use of ensilage means a reduction in the cost of producing either milk, butter or cheese, and this means that the income from the farm is increased just so much. When ensilage and cows are properly handled it is almost next to impossible for a mortgage to attempt to compete with the combination.

A HOG TONIC.

To keep hogs thrifty keep constantly before the pigs charcoal, wood ashes, and also use the preparation recommended by the government as a preventative for hog cholera and swine plague. This is made as follows:

Wood charcoal, 1 lb.; sulphur, 1 lb.; sodium chloride, 2 lbs.; sodium bicarbonate, 2 lbs.; sodium hyposulphite, 2 lbs.; sodium sulphate, 1 lb.; antimony sulphide, 1 lb.

Mix these drugs thoroughly and give a tablespoonful at a dose for each 200 pounds of weight once a day. Also keep a box containing charcoal, and, if possible, wood ashes, where the pigs can have access to it at all times.

It is a good deal easier and more satisfactory to prevent disease than to undertake to cure it after it has made its appearance. The hog is about as unsatisfactory an animal to treat as we know of, but if it is kept under proper sanitary conditions and fed the right kind of feed it is not likely to become diseased.—Rural Magazine.

FARMERS MUST BE SCIENTIFIC.

There is no getting over the fact that the science of chemistry has a very important bearing upon farming. To be truthful about the matter the farmer of today finds it next to impossible to get along without the aid of the chemist, and for the farmer to be successful he must work hand-in-hand with this so-called scientific man. Certainly there is no business that is carried on today in which study, and a thorough knowledge and understanding of the business, is worth more than in farming. No, the practical farmer cannot afford to poke fun at the scientific farmer, and the scientific farmer cannot afford to use the practical farmer as a mere tool. They are both absolutely necessary to the welfare of one another and the practical farmer has an added responsibility, by reason of his being necessary to the existence of the human race, as he is practically the sole means of feeding it.

APPLYING MANUE TO LAND.

Whenever it is possible manure should be taken directly to the field from the stable and spread at once, not left in heaps to await a more convenient time. Manure cannot be kept by any method of storing so there will not be loss in a greater or less degree.

Fermentation always means a breaking down and loss of nitrogen compounds that pass away as gas, and consequently the sooner manure is got onto and under the soil the less will be the loss. Nitrogen is worth fifteen cents a pound, if bought in a fertilizer, and it consequently takes but a short time for a fermenting heap of manure to lose many dollars' worth of nitrogen.—Hoard's Dairyman.

WHERE IS THE SIRE?

Where did you put that boar that you paid a long price for? If he is shut up close in a pen, it means that he will be ruined, unless he is one of those uneasy, restless creatures that are always tearing around. In this case you had better get one of a more quiet disposition and then make a run for him. He must take exercise if he keeps strong and vigorous. After you have paid your good money for a sire don't waste your feed and spoil him by overfeeding him to make him look attractive. Keep him in good, strong, growing condition on growing feed, but never fatten him if you expect him to make you money. Fat makes just as poor and disappointing fathers as mothers.—Northwestern Agriculturist.

TRY THIS AS A CURE FOR ROUP.

Take a chicken and stick head in coal oil over the nostrils until it breathes once. By that time it will have inhaled enough to effect a sure cure.—D. B. Freeman.

Danger in Old Scrapbooks.

Old scrapbooks are a menace to health. For several reasons they harbor more dust than any other old books. Usually the pages are pasted on both sides, making them thick and uneven. They are broad, and their ornate bindings are seldom behind glass doors, but easily accessible on tables and shelves. After turning over the pages, sneezing, head colds and hay fever have often resulted without the cause being suspected. In our library was a scrapbook of colored fashion plates from 1853 to 1892. Another was filled with newspaper clippings of the war between the states. They were prized and frequently read but colds almost invariably followed. We sent them to a bindery to be fumigated and rebound. To prevent in great measure this condition use a carbolized paste; paste only on one side of the page; keep them behind glass and provide them with oil paper covers. Do not let this adverse side prevent anyone from making scrapbooks. Use preventives as with all old books whose pages have been turned until they are sufficiently uneven to harbor dust.—Good Housekeeping.

THE ARTIST WAI

THE CAPABLE SERVITOR AND HIS CAREFUL

He, Too, Goes Through a Kind of College—He Must Know All Dishes—On the Wine List He Must Be an Advisor and He Handles the Guest Whose Nerves Make Him
—The Division of Waiters Into Squads and Their Hours of Employment.

There are just about fifteen thousand first-class waiters in the United States, according to Auguste Wehn, president of the administration of L'Union Genevoise in the United States, and until recently a dining-room captain in the Hotel Astor. By the phrase "first-class waiter" is meant one who is thoroughly versed in all branches of the trade, besides being able to speak several languages.

Eight thousand of these men are members of the L'Union Genevoise, and are mostly French, Germans, Italians and Austrians. Many of them have passed through a regular course of training, best exemplified by the "Academie" at Friedewaldt, near Dresden, Saxony, where everything is taught which is necessary for the equipment of a really good waiter. There the student learns cooking in all its branches and memorizes the endless variety of strange and unusual names given to simple dishes, in order that he may be able to describe and explain the contents to bewildered diners. Wine lists are also perplexing puzzles to many, and these must be carefully studied before a waiter can venture to recommend any particular wine or special vintage.

If one ask the hotel waiter about his work he will find that he looks on it as a profession—one which has its standards and traditions, and which, in keeping with many other present day occupations, has a world-wide organization. The average hotel guest has probably never heard of L'Union Genevoise, or the International Hotel Employe Society, as it is also known. The first in the proper title, and, as it implies, the society was formed in Geneva, Switzerland. It does many things for the quiet men in black who serve the hungry in hotel dining-rooms. After having been thoroughly trained and made competent to hold a place in any civilized country, the waiter is sure of assistance wherever he may be, from Bloomfontein, South Africa, to Boston. On arriving in a strange city, he has only to present himself at the offices of the association and exhibit his membership book, which shows whether he has paid his dues and whether he was honorably discharged from his last place.

In case of illness, after a man has been a member from six months to five years, he receives eighty-five cents a day. If, on the other hand, his membership has spread over five years, the amount he gets is $1.25 a day; if more than ten and up to fifteen years, $1.60, and for everything above fifteen years, $2 for each day. Since its organization in 1879 the society has paid out $80,550 in sick benefits and for burial fees. Loans and gifts and obtaining employment for members bring the total to $155,550. In order to qualify as a member of the club it is necessary that a candidate be of good character and shall have been connected with the hotel and restaurant trade for at least two years. Above all, he must be a thoroughly competent and experienced waiter.

"A firstclass waiter is born, not made," says a former head waiter of the Hunting Room of the new Hotel Astor. "From the moment that a man enters on his duties as the most insignificant 'piccola,' or 'omnibus,' we can tell whether he is going to be an efficient servant. He must be attentive without being servile, must be noiseless, defthanded, and, above all, must be careful not to break things.

"Even if he has a natural aptitude for the business, the amount of careful instruction required to form him is very great, although his nationality makes much difference in the matter. The best men are generally French, German or Swiss, and these have often had the advantages of attending academies or even kindergartens established at foreign hotels in the off season, when they break plates, spoil silverware and generally sustain parts in a universal comedy of errors, to the great disgust of the guests upon whom they practice their trade. The waiters' academy in Vienna is the foremost in the world.

"Knowledge of several languages is a very necessary qualification, and hardly any scrap of general information comes amiss, but tact and discretion are the waiters' chief virtues. His attitude should be that of a soldier, always at attention—always ready for the word of command. He should answer politely when addressed, keep at a respectable distance from the table, yet always be near enough to be easily called when wanted. In fact, a really good waiter should need no calling, but makes a point of watching the guest's face, so as instantly to observe what is wanted almost before the guest himself has had time to form a wish."

In the hierarchy of walterdom the head waiter stands first. Next comes the assistant head waiter, followed by the "captains" who supervise each his own part of the dining-room, the serving waiters and the "piccolo" and "omnibus" men,

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR OCTOBER 7.

Subject: The Two Great Commandments—Mark xii., 28-34 and 38-44—Golden Text: Mark xii., 30—Memory Verses, 30, 31.

I. The two great commandments (vs. 28-31). 28. "One of the scribes." Matthew calls him a lawyer. A doctor of divinity. A professional interpreter of the law of Moses. "Came." Probably at the request of the Pharisees who were determined to catch and overthrow the Saviour. "Having heard—perceiving." He had listened attentively to the discussion of Jesus with the Herodians about the tribute money and with the Sadducees about the resurrection and had been pleased at the answers Jesus gave. "The first commandment." This was a disputed question among their doctors of the law. Some ascribed first place to the law of sacrifices, others to the law of circumcision, others to the law of the Sabbath, while some gave this distinction to the law of meats. But Jesus, with much better reason, decided in favor of a commandment inclusive of the whole of piety, and leading to every holy temper, word and work.

29. "Jesus answered." He quoted from Deut. 6:4-9. "One Lord." Faith in the absolute unity of the Godhead is the point where the Christian religion antagonizes all heathen religions.

30. "Thou." Christ makes this a personal matter; He does not speak in a general way, but He brings the truth home to His questioner. "Shalt." There is no chance for cavil here; no ambiguous expressions. "Love the Lord." It is impossible to obey this commandment only as the love of God has first been shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost (Rom. 5:5). "Heart—soul—mind—strength." We may understand this fourfold enumeration as a command to devote all the faculties to the love of God.

31. "The second." The first table of the law defines our duty to God; the second, our duty to our neighbor. "Is like." Of a like nature, embracing the whole of our duty to man. "Neighbor as thyself." See Lev. 19:18. The Jews understood neighbor as meaning fellow-Jew, but Jesus taught differently (Luke 10:25-37).

II. A discreet answer (vs. 32-34). 32. "The scribe said." He expressed his disapproval of Christ's answer. 33. "Is more than—offerings." The scribe gathers up in his reply some of the great utterances of the prophets which prove the superiority of love to God and man over all mere ceremonial observances. See 1 Sam. 15:22; Psa. 51; Hos. 6:6.

34. "Discreetly." With knowledge and understanding. "Not far." He was near, but still on the outside. It is possible to be near and yet be lost. "No man," etc. No one undertook to entangle Him in His talk after this.

III. A warning against hypocrisy (vs. 38-40). In verses 35-37 Jesus asks the Jews a question which they could not answer. 38. "In His doctrine." "In His teaching." R. V. "Beware." Be on your guard. "Long clothing." Literally, in stoles, long robes reaching to the feet, such as ladies of rank were accustomed to wear, and kings, and nobles, and certain priests, and other high personages. "Salutations." They loved appellations of honor and respect, such as Rabbi, Father, Master, Teacher. "Marketplaces." Any thoroughfare or public square. Their ambition was to show themselves off in these public places. 39. "Chief seats." The chief seats were at the upper end of the synagogue near the chest containing the Book of the Law. "Uppermost rooms." "Chief places." R. V.

40. "Devour." Like ferocious beasts they devour the substance of the widows, the most defenseless and the most deserving of the poor. "For a pretense." Hypocrites indeed! They made religion a mask, and through their pretended piety they sought to gain the confidence of those whom they were planning to rob. "Greater damnation." Or "condemnation." R. V. Implying a most terrible punishment. For the double sin of hypocrisy and fraudulent injustice they should meet a terrible doom. Pride, hypocrisy and injustice are kindred sins.

IV. A lesson on giving (vs. 41-44). If this narrative is taken in connection with the discourse just given it places the hypocrisy of these Pharisees in a most glaring light. They were religious for gain, while she, one of the very class they were planning to rob, had a religion that led her to cast into the treasury all she had. 41. "Sat." Probably to rest. "Over against." Opposite. "The treasury." A name given by the rabbins to thirteen chests, called trumpets from their shape, which stood in the court of the women.

42. "Poor." The word rendered poor is a very strong one, nearly equivalent to "beggar." It implies utter destitution. The condition of a poor man's widow in that country was most helpless. "Two mites." The smallest Jewish coin, about the value of one-fifth of a cent.

43. "Called — disciples." Jesus directed their attention to this act. "More." More in proportion to their ability to give, and thus more in the estimation of God. 44. "For," etc. The worth of a gift is to be determined, not by its intrinsic value, but by what it costs the giver.

Will Build New Track.

San Francisco, Cal.—Although the work of the Southern Pacific is going rapidly forward to change the rising waters from the Salton sea, all efforts have been unavailing, and the officials in charge of the works have given orders to construct a new track further from the path of the rising sea. It is calculated that if the present rate of inflow is maintained the Southern Pacific will be submerged in a few weeks.

CURED OF GRAVEL.

Not a Single Stone Has Formed Since Using Doan's Kidney Pills.

J. D. Daughtrey, music publisher, of Suffolk, Va., says: "During two or three years that I had kidney trouble I passed about 2½ pounds of gravel and sandy sediment in the urine. I haven't passed a stone since using Doan's Kidney Pills, however, and that was three years ago. I used to suffer the most acute agony during a gravel attack, and had the other usual symptoms of kidney trouble—lassitude, headache, pain in the back, urinary disorders, rheumatic pain, etc. I have a box containing 14 gravel stones that I passed, but that is not ¼ of the whole number. I consider Doan's Kidney Pills a fine kidney tonic."

Poisoned Flour in China.

The trade in foreign flour from Amoy into the interior of China and in Amoy itself will disappear for some time to come if the evil effects of a most fortunate occurrence cannot be overcome at once. Somewhere between thirty and forty people have died as the result of eating products of flour sent to Amoy in a certain shipment from Hong-kong, and the natives in the interior as well as in Amoy have almost altogether ceased to use the product. All sorts of rumors have been spread broadcast and anti-foreign agitation has received a great impetus.—United States Consul Anderson, Amoy, China.

NO REST NIGHT OR DAY.

With Irritating Skin Humor—Hair Began to Fall Out—Wonderful Result From Cuticura Remedies.

"About the latter part of July my whole body began to itch. I did not take much notice of it at first, but it began to get worse all the time, and then I began to get uneasy and tried all kinds of baths and other remedies that were recommended for skin humors, but I became worse all the time. My hair began to fall out and my scalp itched all the time. Especially at night, just as soon as I would get in bed and get warm, my whole body would begin to itch, and my finger nails would keep it irritated, and it was not long before I could not rest night or day. A friend asked me to try the Cuticura Remedies, and I did, and the first application helped me wonderfully. For about four weeks I would take a hot bath every night and then apply the Cuticura Ointment to my whole body, and I kept getting better, and by the time I used four boxes of Cuticura I was entirely cured and my hair stopped falling out. D. E. Blankenship, 319 N. Del. St., Indianapolis, Ind. Oct. 27, 1905."

A Pet Gazel.

Up the Shat-el-Arab river, lying off Bussorah, whence Sindbad the Sailor set forth on his famous journeys, we had given us, as a great table delicacy, a young gazel. The little fellow was not more than two feet in height; his eyes were large and brown and lustrous; his little horns and roofs were as black and shining as ebony; his fawn-colored skin was like silk; his movements were the embodiment of grace. No one had the heart to contemplate killing such a beautiful creature; so when some men came aft to beg that they might have him to care for he was at once given to them. "Sindbad" was a name not quite suited to him, but the sailors chose it from associations with the place. He was beloved by every one.—St. Nicholas.

"Yes, sir," said the jeweler, "this is the largest and purest diamond stud we have. It's worth $7500."

SKINS OF WILD ANIMALS.

Many Are Becoming Scarce and Increasing in Value.

Skins of wild animals are daily becoming more rare and valuable. The spread of civilization is the extermination of the monarchs of the plain, the forest, the jungle and the hills, and their hides now ornament many a museum, clubhouse and drawing room.

The skin of the lion, the king of beasts, is among the most valuable of the rare skins. It is kingly, even as was the animal himself, and reveal the great strength and courage of the mighty form that it once protected. The skin of the full grown lion is about three yards long and one and one-half yards wide. Its hair is neither bright nor pretty, but its great shaggy mane crowns it like a rare jewel and makes it valuable.

The skin of the tiger is much prettier than the skin of the lion, and it, too, reveals the character of the beast which it once protected. Its bearded cheeks reveal the tiger's ferocity and cunning, and its yellow and black tiger stripes and its white belly tell of the stealthy nature of the great cat.

The American jaguar furnishes a pretty skin, despite its reddish white belly and its spots instead of stripes. The leopard, too, has a pretty pelt, its fur being light yellow with black spots. The skin of the black panther is also much admired.

Bear skins are trophies in many a civilized home. The black or the Canadian bear is the most common. The polar bear supplies a beautiful, soft, white, furry skin, but it is very rare. The skin of the American grizzly is now also quite rare. Although deer and moose are common game for hunters, yet few have succeeded in preserving their pelts with the fur on for any long period.

The American black wolf skin, with white spots on its snout and breast, is admired by some people. The Siberian wolf furnishes a fine, soft fur skin. Among farmer lads in this country it is popular to catch foxes during the winter and to tan their skins for rugs and for ornaments, but the fox skin today isn't by any means as valuable as are the skin of larger and fiercer animals, though the fox is growing more and more scarce.

A coat of skins of reindeer fawns only a few days old is said to be worth thousands of dollars. The skins match perfectly in color, and they are doubled so that the coat is the same inside as outside. This coat is as light a an ordinary raincoat, but warmer than heavy fur, and it is also waterproof.

Some skins of Manchurian tigers are also valuable. One skin is 14 feet long. A monster skin is that from a 220-pound grizzly. It measures 14 feet long, and the bear's head is two feet thick. Some rabbit skins from New Zealand may also be seen, though rabbit skins are not as rare or valuable.—Shoe and Leather Re

The peak of Apo, a huge volcanic mountain in the center of the Island of Mindanao, has been added to the category of mountains remarkable for possessing animal species peculiar to themselves, and differing from those of the surrounding lowlands. Dr. E. A. Mearns announces, as the result of a month's examination of Apo, that most of the species and several of the genera collected are new to science. It has added three genera and more than a score of specis to the list of birds inhabiting the Philippines.

Cure For The Blues

ONE MEDICINE THAT HAS NEVER FAILED

Health Fully Restored and the Joy of Life Regained.

When a cheerful, brave, light-hearted woman is suddenly plunged into that perfection of misery, the BLUES, it is a sad picture. It is usually this way: She has been feeling "out of sorts" for some time; head has ached and back also; has slept poorly, been quite nervous, and nearly fainted once or twice; head dizzy, and heart beats very fast; then that bearing-down feeling, and during her periods she is exceedingly despondent. Nothing pleases her. Her doctor says: "Cheer up: you have dyspepsia; you will be all right soon."

Mrs. Rosa Adams

But she doesn't get "all right," and hope vanishes; then come the brooding, morbid, melancholy, everlasting BLUES.

Don't wait until your sufferings have driven you to despair, with your nerves all shattered and your courage gone, but take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. See what it did for Mrs. Rosa Adams, of 819 12th Street, Louisville, Ky., niece of the late General Roger Hanson, C.S.A. She writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:

"I cannot tell you with pen and ink what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I suffered with female troubles, extreme lassitude, 'the blues,' nervousness and that all-gone feeling. I was advised to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it not only cured my female derangement, but it has restored me to perfect health and strength. The buoyancy of my younger days has returned, and I do not suffer any longer with despondency, as I did before. I consider Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a boon to sick and suffering women."

If you have some derangement of the female organism write Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for advice.

NOTICE

To the Churches of the Chilton County Association—Greeting:

I have sent blank associational letters to the clerks of all the churches of this Association except two, viz: Pleasant Hill and Thorsby, not knowing the names of the clerks, I could not send the letters. If the clerks will write me. I will gladly send them. The Association meets at Pilgrim's Rest, near Pletcher on M & O. Oct. 17 and 18. I earnestly hope that the churches will use the blanks, send up a full quota of messengers and endeavor to do all they can for the great work fostered by our denomination.

Editor Banner—Please give me a little space in the Banner We, as citizens, know that J. N. Moore has worked his road as much as any of the balance of the roads have been worked, for he has put in seven days this year, and he is going to put in three more days at once. We know that part of his roads are in bad fix, there has been so much rain that caused the road to be like it is, but there is a way trimmed around so that people can get by safe through Oakmulgee swamp. J. N. Moore has had a bad time working his road, all of his hands are public workers but two He has only nine hands now, and part of the time he only had six and four and a half miles across Oakmulgee swamp from Moore's to Shoults. We know that he has bought a scrape to work the road with, also know that he has furnished tools Three old citizens have seen the road in worse condition than it is now.

Beat 7.

Editor Banner—Please allow me a little space in the Banner. I would like to say a few words to the apportioners and commissioners in regard to my road. I have put in nine days each year for three years past; I have put in seven days this year. I will put in three days next week and that will put in my ten days; my hands are public workers generally. My roads are in very good fix, with exception of two holes, considering rains and overflows; it is worse than usual for summer time. There is a very good way cut around so that anybody can get out of the worst part. It would take me forty days to put my road in the fix it was in the spring with the hands I have got to work.

Pleasant Grove.

Dear Editor—I haven't had anything to say for some time, I will ask to be let in for a short chat. Rev. J H. Thomas filled his regular appointment here Saturday and Sunday

Frank Cobb got snake bit a few days ago, by a ground rattler, but is up again We notice that Just a Voter shot another barrel of his blowgun in the last Union. I said blow gun, but I don't know what kind of gun to call it, a blowgun or a popgun as he uses gas for ammunition He seems to feel his importance so very much that he will have to get into the Democratic party in order to be with a cute crowd, but thinking people have decided that his most important place would be at a balloon ascension. He says he is going to be smarter than those others that have already joined, that he is going to announce himself a candidate for the rest of his life and four years after he is dead But Mr. Just a Voter, you can't get ahead of Lee, Jonathan and Osmond, and A. C. is waiting his turn, that man that swallowed those large pills without coating that he spoke of at Thorsby. It seems that some of those Democrats that join the Republican party are hunting office and are that other thing too. Just a Voter's memory isn't two year's long, as he has forgot that when Roosevelt was elected cotton went down from 10¢ to 6¢ in a short while, and it was then that the Reps. said that the President had nothing to do with the price of cotton. It seems that when a man quits the Republican party and joins the Democrats that the Republicans think he has committed an unpardonable sin. But there is Lee, he quit both Republican and the Democratic party and yet they call him blessed. They strain at a gnat and swallow a camel

Now, that man than had those bottles in his buggy that the Lawley man spoke of, I don't know who he was nor what party he belongs to nor what office he is running for but to my humble judgment such a man isn't fit for judge or sheriff or any other office, and when we know a man to be of that stripe we should give him the go by. We should not vote for a man of that kind for party sake. With best wishes to all, both Republicans and Democrats, I am yours truly,

MAKE MONEY.

Here is an interesting study: Make out a list of all the people you know, and estimate the amount of money each one earns in a year. Total it up. The amount will be surprisingly large. Now, of all those people, only the few who SAVE SOMETHING really MAKE anything at all. Simply earning money isn't making it; what slips through the earner's fingers is finally "made" by somebody else. Don't forget to count yourself in on the list, and if you are not "making" money, begin now to save with us. One dollar will open your bank account.

Beat 3.

Editor Banner—If you will allow me space in your paper I would like to make a statement in reply to the letter written by Mr. Latham. First, I highly congratulate Mr. Latham for making this mean act known for if we allow such things as whiskey drinking to go on around the sacred places by anyone, how shall we expect any better times? I notice in last week's Banner sufficient evidence in letter to convince the most skeptical that the statement made by Latham in regard to the liquor candidate must be an undenied fact; then this being a true fact, backed by the statement of others, we should never consent to give an office to such man, for we need just men in office as well as we do in the pulpit or any other sacred place, for if God disapproves the drunkard then surely with the wisdom He has given us we should fight against sin. (See Corinthians, 1:6 10; also Prov. 23:21.) Then I say beware of strong drink, also beware of any man for office who advocates strong drink, for if we cannot get men in office who are competent to do the right, we had far better leave him alone, for if he will not deal out justice to himself you may be sure that he will not deal out justice to others. Tom Hide, I wish to congratulate you for your letter in last week's Banner.

Another One of the Boys.

Oakmulgee, Oct. 8, 1906

Editor The Banner—As my name has been called into a news paper controversy for the first time in life, I feel called upon to answer. Mr. Arthur D Latham gave my name as one who drank or had opportunity to drink whiskey with Mr. Felix Fitts at a baptising in Chilton county. Now I say that it is untrue and has no foundation whatever

S. W. Green.

Lawley, Oct. 6, 1906

Editor Banner—Will you allow me space in your valuable paper to correct a mistake in regard to the Latham-Fitts controversy. I noticed in the Banner of last week that Arthur Latham says, or leaves the impression, that I told him that I did drink whiskey with Felix Fitts at the baptising at the Collins bridge on the Sunday in question. I want to say to the voters of Chilton county, and to the friends of both parties, that it is a mistatement as I did not drink with Mr. Fitts at the baptising, nor did I speak to Mr. Fitts at that place. A friend of mine told me that he and Fitts did take a drink there with a friend of Fitts. If anyone wants to know who it was that they drank with, if they will come to me I will tell them. Now, I had no desire to be mixed up in this controversy at all as it will not benefit anyone and will probably cause hard feelings on both sides, but I could not in justice to myself and Mr. Fitts let this mistake go uncorrected, so having made this statement with all due regards to all parties concerned I am done with the matter.

Yours very respectfully,
Alex Latham.

Shoults, Oct. 1, 1906

Editor Banner—I guess readers of the Banner have seen the Latham, Fitts and Nix letters. I want to say that I have known Arthur Latham all his life. I have known him to be sober, steady, truthful boy. I say boy because he was not 21 years old when he joined the church four years ago and since that time he has lived a christian life if I know how to judge one. I would to God that I could think Mr. Fitts was just such a man as Arthur Latham. Mr. Fitts says he wants to clear up the charge and stain that Arthur has put on his character. It is not Arthur that is staining his character, it is the whiskey that he is drinking. It is not only staining his character but it is damning his soul. He also says that Arthur based his statement upon what some small boys had told him, I want to say that I dont base what I say upon what boys said or seen, but I base what I say on what I have seen with my own eyes. I saw Mr. Fitts taking the whiskey out of his buggy and treat his friends. I had the chance of drinking some of it myself at the baptising. After I refused to drink you just ought to have heard the excuse he gave for having the whiskey there. Mr. W. Y, Nix says (in the Union) how bad Arthur did look after standing before Fitts and swallowing the things whole. Now, I have seen Arthur since that time, I don't think he looked as bad as Mr. Fitts did after he had swallowed that whiskey at the baptising. It seems that Mr. Nix would have the people think that Mr. Fitts would eat 'em up alive. Now, if Mr. Fitts comes over here and eats up all the people that saw his whiskey at the baptising, I will promise him one thing, he won't go away with an empty stomach chewed or unchewed. Mr. Nix also says: "yes, we all can vote for a man like Fitts." What a grand mistake when he said that. I have heard half a dozen men say they would not vote for him since he has denied this charge. Now, Mr. Editor, no one can say that I wrote this letter because I am a democrat, I have not voted a democratic ticket in twenty years, but if I vote for sheriff this time I will have to vote for a democratic sheriff. I don't think that a man that drinks as much whiskey as Mr. Fitts does, is not fit for the sheriff office or any other office.

Charles Walker.

DELTA SENDS GLOOMY NEWS.

Some correspondents Report the Loss to Cotton as High as 50 Per Cent.

New Orleans.—The gloomiest reports come from the delta section of Mississippi and those parishes in Louisiana bordering on the Mississippi river. In West Carroll parish correspondents state that in some places the damage will reach as high as 50 per cent. In West Carroll no cotton has been picked since September 22. Since that time destructive windstorms have almost laid the fields bare, blowing the staple from the wide open bolls. A great deal of the cotton can be rescued from the mud, but it will necessarily lose in grade. West Carroll also reports that good planting seed will be hard to obtain next season.

Other correspondents report that the cotton remaining on the stalks is rotting. Along the Homochitto river, one of the important cotton producing sections of Mississippi, rains served to create a rise in that water course that in some sections made a sea extending from one hill to the other. The open cotton was carried off on the bosom of the waters without hope of rescue.

A number of correspondents in the river sections report that seed actually sprouting in those sections had escaped the wind and rain.

Chinamen Mutiny.

Pensacola, Fla.—Ten Chinamen, composing the fireroom crew of the British steamer E. O. Saltmarsh, anchored at Tarragona wharf, revolted Saturday night and made a desperate dash for liberty, fighting like fiends with the officers, who stopped them as they were swarming over the sides of the vessel. They were finally clubbed into subjugation, but soon made another dash, this time fighting even more desperately. They were armed with stilettos, pieces of iron pipe and brass knucks. With the assistance of workmen on the wharf they were again overpowered and placed in irons. The men mutinied because the cook had failed to provide them with chop suey.

President Receives Politicians.

Washington.—Representative James Sherman, of New York, chairman of the republican congressional committee, and Senator Penrose, of Pennsylvania, had a long conference with the president on the political situation. Mr. Sherman was a guest of the president at dinner, and discussed in detail the congressional campaign throughout the country, especially the situation in New York. Later the president, Mr. Sherman and Mr. Penrose conferred on the situation in Pennsylvania, particularly in the close districts.

Pensacola Declines Assistance.

Pensacola.—The Red Cross Society, through Secretary Charles L. Magee, at Washington, wired offers of assistance in the way of supplies or money for the sufferers from the tornado in and about Pensacola. The general relief committee replied thanking Secretary Magee for the offer, but declining, as the citizens are meeting the situation and caring for all destitute.

Tornado Passes North of Mobile.

Mobile, Ala.—A tornado passed twelve miles north of Mobile, between Oak Grove and Whistler, Ala. All of the Western Union wires are prostrated. No damage was done in Mobile. The tornado cut a swath 100 feet wide. At this time it is not known it any lives were lost. Reports say the tornado did much damage to timber.

Steamer Bermudian Is Floated.

New York.—The big steamer Bermudian, which went aground in New York harbor while bound in from Bermuda, was refloated. It is believed she was not seriously damaged.

Oil Prices Advanced.

Cleveland, O.—The Standard Oil Company has advanced the price of deodorized stove gasoline one cent per gallon. This grade of gasoline is now quoted at 15 cents per gallon. Varnish makers' and painters' naptha is also advanced one cent per gallon, making the wholesale price 14 cents.

Woolen Mills Burned.

Louisville, Ky.—Fire in the warehouse of the Mayfield Woolen Mills did damage estimated at $250,000. It is covered by insurance. Four hundred people are thrown out of employment temporarily. The fire is thought to have originated from spontaneous combustion.

Killed in Fireworks Blaze.

Mexico City.—Fire in a fireworks factory in Oaxaca resulted in the death of Mrs. Manuela Diaz, the owner of the place, who perished in the flames. An explosion of dynamite injured the chief of police, three policemen and one civilian.

Quakers are very healthy; their average longevity being 61 years.

Indeed, in a millennium of free clothes of the latest fashion we shall all be archangels.

ALABAMA GLEANINGS.

Items of Interest Gathered as They Transpire Over the Entire State.

Found Living in a Cave.

Cullman, Ala.—About ten days ago the people living on Ten Mile creek, a few miles from town, reported that a man and woman were living in a cave in that vicinity, and that they were making raids on the farmers' chickens and smokehouses. The sheriff went out and brought them into town, where they were jailed. Both were practically naked. They gave the names of Arthur Brooks and Ella Oldacre. After remaining in jail a few days they were bailed out, and the same night the store of the McEntire Mercantile Company was robbed. The officers found the couple encamped in the woods with the goods stolen from the McEntire Mercantile Company and a lot of other plunder that had been stolen from residences intown. They are now in jail and are likely to remain there until court meets.

Longs Are Paroled.

Montgomery, Ala.—The governor has paroled John Long, of Mobile county until Wednesday to go home to the funeral of his brother. Some days ago Thomas J. Long, who had been paroled for a week to go to the bedside of his brother, had his time extended to cover the time of the funeral. Both the Long boys are serving terms in the penitentiary for murder in the second degree. The brother who died has been very ill for a long time.

By his own request the name of J. A Hurst, nominated by the republicans for lieutenant-governor, has been taken off the ticket, and that of D. R. Cooper, of Marion county, substituted.

May Change Route.

Gadsden, Ala.—The purchase of the Chattanooga Southern railroad by the Louisville and Nashville railway and the use that this branch will be put to by the new owners is a matter of much discussion and speculation among citizens and local railroad men generally. The most plausible and logical plan advanced and partly confirmed by rumors is that the Louisville and Nashville will make the Chattanooga Southern from Chattanooga to Gadsden and the Alabama Mineral from Birmingham to Gadsden a part of its Cincinnati and New Orleans route. By this route 150 miles would be saved.

Shortage Due to Technicalities.

Montgomery, Ala.—J. M. Tingle, tax collector of Winston county, has been found by Assistant State Examiner of Public Accounts G. F. Sedberry to be due the state $270.30. The examiner stated that the shortage was due to technicalities. Probate Judge Curtis, Sheriff Maxwell, ex-Tax Assessor Wright, Clerk of the Circuit Court Dodd and Superintendent of Education Steele were found to be correct in their accounts.

Corn and Cotton Damaged.

Jasper, Ala.—The continued rains in this section have given the farmers considerable discouragement, and it is now estimated that if conditions should change the cotton crop will already be damaged to the extent of 25 per cent. The corn crop has also suffered great damage.

Florida Man Killed by Train.

Fort Wayne, Ind.—Charles Cooke, a laborer, was struck by a Pennsylvania train here and instantly killed. He came here recently from Palm Beach, Fla.

Professor Hope Leaves.

University, Ala.—Dr. E. W. Hope, who has for several years past occupied the position of adjunct professor of Greek, left last week for the University of Illinois, where he goes to accept a chair in the classical department of that institution. His place has been filled by the appointment of Dr. Ray B Nelson, a graduate of the University of Chicago.

Montgomery, Ala.—The governor has extended the parole of Thomas J. Long ten days, and he will remain at the bedside of his brother, who is ill in Mobile. The convict's time was up, but his brother's condition was so bad the governor determined to let him remain longer.

Palmira, Province of Santa Clara, Cuba.—The main body of the insurgents, commanded by General Guzman, is now being disarmed in front of the city. The remainder of Guzman's army at other points in the Palmira district will be disarmed.

Gives Way to Southern Association.

Chattanooga, Tenn.—After an existence of eighteen years the Tri-State Medical Society, representing prominent physicians in Tennessee, Alabama and Georgia, agreed by an overwhelming vote of the members in session here to relinquish their charter and go out of existence for the purpose of forming the Southern Medical Association.

Shows Great Deterioration.

Birmingham, Ala.—P. F. Parker, of Pell City, business agent of the Farmers' Educational and Cooperative Union of Alabama, is bullish on cotton. He has changed his views to meet the altered conditions. A short time ago he issued a circular appealing to members of the union to stand together and attend the meetings of the organization as the only means of maintaining the price of cotton at 10 cents, the minimum value placed on it by the union at its last general meeting in Texarkana. Now he firmly believes that conditions are such that cotton will bull itself and that the farmer will now have no trouble in getting 12 or even 14 cents a pound for his staple.

He said: "Since writing my last circular letter the cotton situation has changed.

"I have just returned from a trip over a portion of the storm swept district. In addition to my own observations I have read the reports as published and also a vast amount of inside information, and I am sure that it is like throwing money in the fire for any of our people to sell a pound of cotton for less than 11 cents.

"In the storm swept area the cotton is on the ground and sprouting. In some places the seed are actually sprouting in the bolls. The continued cloudy weather only makes bad matters worse.

"We were sure at Texarkana that our minimum price was as low as it should be. Now that the demand for cotton goods is strong at a good price, and the spinners are running short of cotton, it is clear that if we will only supply the market with what is required to supply pressing demand, and not compel the speculator to take our cotton before the demand puts up the price, there will be no trouble in getting 12 or 14 cents per pound.

"However, we will not change our minimum price, but will depend upon the business sense of our 600,000 members in the cotton belt, who are certainly informed of the real situation and will not make any unnecessary sacrifice in order to give the speculator a part of their hard earnings."

Athens Up in Arms.

Athens, Ala.—There is to be an effort made to have the legislature, which meets in January, pass a bill dividing the profits of the dispensary in this place with the county. The democratic executive committee has called an election for the purpose of taking the sentiment of the people on the question, but the city charter gives the town the right to either abolish the sale of whisky, have open saloons or run a dispensary, and the city charter cannot be amended by the legislature without the consent of a majority of the people of the town, and this will never be granted in that particular.

The county can establish a dispensary outside if they wish, but the people of Athens will abolish the present dispensary if necessary and establish one of their own and operate it if the legislature should pass a law dividing the profits. The city has heavy debts contracted on the idea of the profits of the dispensary meeting the obligations as they fall due, and the city will not consent to a division of her revenues with the county.

Limestone Farmers Blue.

Athens, Ala.—Continued rains have greatly dispirited the farmers of this section, and the reports from the various parts of the county are indeed gloomy from a cotton standpoint. The most conservative farmers and ginners say the cotton, what there was in this county, is injured fully 50, if not 60 per cent. Cotton is sprouting in the boll and grown bolls are rotting in the field by the thousands. Sunshine will not save the large part that is now ruined.

Minor Appointments Made.

Montgomery.—Appointments were announced by Governor Jelks as follows:

Justices of the Peace—H. B. Mansfield, Ozark; W. W. Givens, Cottonwood; G. R. Williams, Shorters; C. I. Jones, Dora, Walker county.

Notaries Public and Justices of the Peace—W. A. Molton, Salitpa, Clarke countp; T. G. Elliott, beat 15, Clay county; James I. Merrill, Rose Hill, Covington county; W. S. Palmer, Midland City, Dale county; George H. Taylor, Buncombe, Hale county; R. P. Looney, Fayetteville.

Notaries Public—Cora Clyde Simmons, Mobile; William Love, Birmingham; Robert Jemison, Jr., Birmingham; George Ganzemiller, Garnsey, Bibb county; S. H. Hatfield, Galzio, Barbour county.

A certificate of the incorporation of the Glenwood Realty Company, of Birmingham, was filed today with the secretary of state. Robert Jemison, Jr., is one of the promoters of the company.

Isle of Pines to Be Heard.

Havana.—A committee of Isle of Pines Americans have arrived here. They have an appointment with Governor Taft for Monday, when they will present the resolutions passed by a meeting Friday of 500 Americans in the Isle of Pines requesting its total separation from Cuba and American government of the island by the United States.

HANDLE INSURGENTS

Band of Twenty Puts Two Hundred Rioters to Flight.

LEADER BROUGHT TO TERMS.

Cabeliera Tried to Bluff the Commander, but Cried Quits When Put Under Arrest.

Havana.—A detachment of 200 insurgents rode into Caridad, a suburb of the city of Puerto Principe, waiving machetes and threatening people.

Twenty American marines from the detachment on duty at Puerto Principe went to Caridad, dispersed the insurgents and arrested thirty-six of them. General Cabeliero, the insurgent leader, with 100 men, thereupon proceeded to the headquarters of the commander of the marines and demanded the release of the captured insurgents.

Instead of releasing them the Americans disarmed Cabellero and all of his followers who could be caught. Thereupon Cabellero promised that all the insurgents under his command would disarm.

Fewer Soldiers Will Do.

Washington, D. C.—Owing to the satisfactory aspect of affairs in Cuba Secretary Taft has been asked by cable if in his judgment it is necessary to send to the island more troops than the 900 now on board the transport Sumner. He has not yet replied, and meanwhile the preparations will continue for the dispatch of the entire force of 5,000 men as originally planned.

Magoon Instructed.

Washington, D. C.—Secretary Root and Governor Magoon were in conference with the president at the White House for some time, the purpose being to instruct the governor relative to his treatment of the Cuban question when he assumes office at Havana. General Bell, chief of staff, who left Washington Saturday afternoon with Governor Magoon for Havana by way of Tampa, also called on the president.

It is now stated that there is no present intention of departing from the program originally outlined for the dispatch of troops for Cuba, and within a few hours it is expected that some of the troop ships will be leaving Newport News for Havana. Whether or not other detachments in addition to those originally ordered to Cuba will be sent will, it is now declared, depend entirely upon Secretary Taft's report upon conditions there.

Forced to Suspend.

Atlanta, Ga.—The Atlanta Stock and Cotton Exchange, of which Joseph Thompson, of Atlanta, is president, has announced its suspension. W. T. Pope, a telegraph operator in the firm's employ, has been placed in jail on a charge of swindling. According to Manager T. A. Richardson, Pope used the firm's name in selling cotton to such an extent that the firm was unable to respond when called upon for settlement. A statement of liabilities and assets will be given out later. The figures, it is stated, will not be large. The firm had Cincinnati connections.

Given to the Ocean.

Newport News, Va.—The new and powerful armored cruiser North Carolina was successfully launched from the yards of her builders, the Newport News Ship Building and Dry Dock Company in the presence of 10,000 people. The ship's sponsor was Miss Rebecca Williams Glenn, daughter of Governor Glenn, of North Carolina, who was present with his staff and an escort of prominent North Carolinians.

To Withdraw Coal Lands.

Washington, D. C.—It is understood that the president has finally made up his mind to withdraw all of the coal lands not already taken up from entry under the land laws of the United States. The expectation is that he will in a special message request congress to change the statutes, but that in the meanwhile he will himself temporarily withdraw the coal lands from further entry.

Steamer Burmudian on Mud.

New York.—The big new steamer Bermudian of the Quebec Steamship Company, running between New York and Bermuda, ran aground on the mud flats off South Brooklyn while coming up the harbor on her way to her dock in the North river. She had 160 passengers on board, and they were taken off by tugs. Tugs failed to pull her off the mud flats.

Spanish Veterans in Washington.

Washington.—A large number of members of the Spanish war veterans have arrived to attend the national encampment of the organization which begins Monday. Headquarters for several candidates for commander-in-chief were established. Captain Hamilton Ware, of New York; Major S. J. Hodgson, of Washington, and General Moulton, of Illinois, are aspirants for the office.

Magoon's Power Plenary.

Washington, D. C.—Gov. Charles E. Magoon, who, with General Bell, Mrs. Taft and Mrs. Bacon, left Washington for Havana, will exercise in Cuba all the power which was vested in Gen. Leonard Wood when he ruled Cuba under the title of military governor.

Governor Magoon will be known as the provisional governor, but his authority will be plenary, and he has been subject only to the orders of the president and secretary of war. Cuba will have the semblance of an autonomous government, and the United States will continue to be represented in Havana by an American minister and the consuls will be at their posts.

The Cubans will be represented in Washington by a minister.

It is officially stated that there has been and will be no subversion of the Cuban constitution. Incorporating the Platt amendment into the constitution Cuba provided for just such an emergency as has arisen and for the United States to intervene and restore order; consequently it is said that Cuba is still to be governed by constitutional means and by machinery such as is provided in any community when martial law is necessary.

During the occupancy of Cuba it is not expected that the Cuban congress will exercise any power. In fact, there is no method by which it can be assembled unless Governor Magoon should deem such action necessary to prepare the way for another election. Such a meeting is not necessary, for the provisional governor by decree may perform all functions looking to the re-establishment of the civil government of Cuba.

Weekly Averages.

New York.—The statement of clearing house banks for the weeks shows that the banks hold $9,423,125 more than the legal reserve requirements. This is a decrease of $3,117,225 as compared with last week. The statement follows:

Loans, $1,052,381,200; increase, $1,158,400.

Deposits, $1,031,338,700; decrease, $2,720,300.

Circulation, $45,749,200; increase, $153,400.

Legal tenders, $75,153,800; decrease $2,554,000.

Specie, $192,084,000; decrease, $1,243,300.

Reserve, $267,257,800; decrease, $3,597,300.

Reserve required, $257,834,675; decrease, $680,075.

Surplus, $9,423,125; decrease, $3,117,225.

Exclusive United States deposits, $17,042,825; decrease, $2,272,375.

Agree on Newfoundland Fishing.

London.—The terms of the Newfoundland modus vivendi for the present fishing season were finally agreed on, the foreign office consenting to several suggestions covering minor points presented by Secretary Carter, of the American embassy, in behalf of the state department. Great Britain under the modus vivendi agrees to allow the use of purse seins by American fishermen, while the Americans undertake not to fish on Sundays. The state department also foregoes the claim to take on Newfoundland crews, but with purse seins this is not necessary. The formal signing of the agreement probably will take place Monday.

William Rice Commits Suicide.

Anniston, Ala.—News has reached here that William Rice, an old Confederate veteran, familiarly known as "Bill Arp," under which he was accustomed to write, killed himself Wednesday at his home on the farm of Col. James Shied, near Schenck's Sulphur Springs, by eating a quantity of paris green, which he admitted prior to his death was taken with suicidal intent. The cause is said to have been melancholy over crop prospects and general financial embarrassment. He was well known throughout the county.

Hall-Martin Factions Clash.

May King, Ky.—The Hall-Martin factions have clashed again, but only meager details have been received here. As stated they met at a "blind tiger" resort on Beaver creek. Upward of sixty shots were fired at close range, and it is remarkable that when the smoke cleared up only one man, John Hall, Jr., of the Hall side was dead. One other man on the Hall side was wounded slightly. Full details are yet lacking. Excitement is said to be high in that section.

Sanctioned by French Government.

Paris.—The action of M. de Silloc, the charge de affaires of France at Havana, in raising the question with Governor Taft of the payment of the losses sustained by French citizens as a result of the revolutionary outbreak in Cuba, while taken up on his own initiative, is regarded here as being sanctioned by the government and under the circumstances as a proper precautionary measure.

Yerkes May Get Place.

Washington, D. C.—Should Judge Horace L. Lurton, of the Sixth judicial circuit, succeed to the vacancy in the United States supreme court, Judge A. M. J. Cochran, of the Eastern Kentucky district, may succeed to the judgeship of the Sixth district, and the vacancy thereby created may be filled by the appointment of Commissioner of Internal Revenue Yerkes.

FOR INCO TA

Many Believe That Roo Will Soon Declare Himself.

MAY WAIT ANOTHER YEA

The President Has Twice Refe "Swollen" Fortunes—Looked Upon as Significant

Washington.—Many politicians fess to believe that before the tion of his term, perhaps at the session of congress, the president speak out forcibly in a messag congress advocating an income ta some similar measure whereby owners of great wea will be pelled to share in proportion to dealth the expenses of the ment. It will be a popular issue may be held over until winter next on the eve of the presid election of 1908. As Mr Roo himself may be the candidate and move would greatly enhance his pects of election.

Even though the President does again run, politicians of his party ure it out that will be the str kind of a card for any republican didate. Of course, the income tax been declared unconstitutional would have to again go before United States supreme court, but the old decision the court has greatly changed and the addition two and possibly more new mem within the next two or three does not by any means make ce that the old decision would stand also frequently happens that the preme court makes law according the demands of the people and an income tax case come before court will reverse its five to four cision when no great popular and interest were centered on the ject.

The president has twice refe to the "swollen fortunes," once April in a speech in this city, only last week in the Pennsylv capital. That the move is a po one goes without saying, and most of the president's popular it is one that has been appearing democratic platforms year in and out.

Hold Boy for Ransom.

New York.—Renewed efforts w made by the police to trace the ki nappers of Willie La Barbera, the year-old son of a Second avenue cer. It was announced that the rents had received from the kidnap a letter containing a lock of the b hair and a threat to send the b head to them if a ransom of $ was not paid.

The parents, though willing to tiate with the kidnapers, are unable do so, as in their letters the writ fall to tell how to reach them. boy was first missed by his par just a week ago. At first the pa were disinclined to believe that had been the victim of kidnapping, the several letters which have been ceived by the parents apparently convinced them, and many detect are at work on the case. Two young women in stylish attire entered a trolley car on East Chelton avenue near Boyer street, Germantown, a day or two ago, but found only standing room, the large number of passengers being on their way to a local revival meeting. One of the attractive looking brunettes whispered to her companion: "I am going to get a seat sure from one of the men. Now you just keep your eye on me." She approached him and gaily blurted out: "Why, Mr. King, how delighted I am to meet you. You are almost a stranger. Will I accept your seat? Well, I do feel tired, I must admit. Thank you very much." The sedate gentleman, whose name was not Mr. King, and, of course, was a perfect stranger to the young woman, listened quietly and then arose, inviting her to accept his seat, saying pleasantly and audibly: "Sit down, Jane, my girl; I don't often see you out on washday. You certainly must feel tired. How's your mistress; I trust she is well?" The determined but greatly chagrined girl got her seat but suddenly lost her vivacity, plainly exhibiting the humiliation to which she had been subjected through her own forwardness.—Philadelphia Record.

FEMININE PHILOSOPHY.

Any girl who has to make up is two-faced.

A thought for the month: Don't weep because the weather does.

The man who can successfully interpret a blush has not been found.

It is not uncommon these days to find a woman who is not of the weaker sex.

You can't convince a woman that a story isn't true if she believes it ought to be.

Many women extract most of their comfort from robbing other persons of theirs.

It is easy enough to get married these days, but somehow it seems hard to stay married.

Some girls consider themselves highly accomplished if they can make good potato salad.

To the man who is disappointed in love the cares of life are always preceded by a "don't."

About the only time a man can express his opinion freely at home is when his wife is asleep.

Caution is exercised by some women only when they are making cake—and not always then.

Most people would have more sympathy for former Anna Gould if she had found it out sooner.—Woman's Magazine.

HOUSEHOLD ANNIVERSARIES.

The happiest households are those that do not let die out the sentiment connected with various anniversaries, says the Portland Express. Although gift giving or recognition of such events in a suitable way may be out of the question, owing to the straitened circumstances of those "within the gates," there can yet be a little air of festivity when mother's or father's birthday comes round or some wedding anniversary is to be celebrated.

An extra dish, a little bunch of flowers or some special music prepared for the occasion will show the kindly spirit and loving remembrance, that count far more than the money value of any gift. As the children grow up, if these festivals are encouraged, they will have much to remember in the years to come when they go out to do battle with the world and find that sentiment is crushed under foot and affection is regarded only as a side issue.

STORE CHAT.

A woman of firm social position was in one of the big dry goods stores. Comparing two pieces of cloth, she felt rather doubtful about the shades, and smilingly asked the saleswoman: "If I carry these out to the door will they arrest me for shop lifting?" The reply was a bit of a shock: "Oh, I guess your face is worth 98 cents."

The shop girls have a motto imposed on them by their employer. It is that two heads are better than one. When a girl has made a sale she adds up the amount and passes it on to a second girl, who looks it over and, if she sees no mistakes, O. K.'s it. But if there was a mistake that cheated the firm out of any amount, even to a penny, the second girl is the one who is obliged to make up the difference, for though she did not make the mistake, she failed to notice it. "What if the error robbed the customer and gave something to the firm, who gets it then?" an inquiring woman asked. At that the girls in chorus snorted.—New York Sun.

SPOONS FOR SHOE HORNS

You've seen the girl who is at the mercy of a shoe horn. If she has lost or forgotten her own, she goes from room to room, seeking to beg, borrow or steal one, as if a pair of slippers might not actually be got on without a shoe horn.

Now, here is a pointer for her. If you can't get a shoe horn, use a spoon. This is what college girls do, and they find it just as convenient as the article designated for that purpose.

Not a teaspoon, but a tablespoon. Put the handle into the heel of the slipper and use it just as you would a shoe horn. When the shoe is on, the spoon handle really comes out easier than a shoe horn.

Of course this is merely a substitute, but if there doesn't happen to be a shoe horn around, it's handy to known about the useful spoon.—Indianapolis News.

PERSEVERING JAPANESE WOMEN

An enterprising little Japanese woman has just arrived at Tacoma for the purpose of studying domestic science in a Western college and willing, she says, to stay five years—ten years, if it takes that long. For ten years she has been a trained nurse in a Japanese hospital. She has one child, a daughter, fifteen years old, who is being educated in a high school in Tokio, while her mother is acquiring a college education in America.

TALKS WITH OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

WHEN MOTHER IS AWAY.

The house is such a dreary place
when mother is away;
There isn't fun in anything, no matter what you play.
The dolls just sit as stupid, and act
so still and queer—
They always say such funny things
when mother's by to hear.

The little china tea set looks so lonesome waiting there;
There's no fun playing party and eating only air!
It isn't like the lovely things you most believe you see
Upon the plates and saucers, when mother comes to tea.

There's no use doing up your hair and dressing up in style,
You know it's just pretending and you're Betty all the while;
You never hear a whisper from the chairs against the wall!
'Dear me, what splendid lady now is coming here to call!"
The pictures in the picture-books are never half so fine,
The stories won't come out and talk
for any pains of mine;
An hour goes so slowly, it's almost like a day,—
The house is such a lonesome place
when mother is away.

—Rubie T. Weyburn, in Good Housekeeping.

KEEPING BEES IN AN AQUARIUM.

Who ever heard of keeping bees in an aquarium? That's a fish tank, not a beehive. But, strange as it sounds, a recent writer in Suburban Life recommends this as a good way to make a close study of the busy little insects' curious modes of life and work.

Take a glass aquarium and place it on a window sill, elevated slightly at the side nearest the window, so that when the latter is raised an inch the bees may pass in and out. If desired, the bees may be kept for some time in confinement, by raising the aquarium an inch on blocks and using a strip of wire screen cloth to prevent the bees from escaping.

Put within this glass aquarium some rustic supports to represent projecting, undecayed portions of the inside of the hollow trunk. Keep all covered by an opaque cloth when not observing what is going on within this glass bee home.

Then the bees will be free to work, and to adapt themselves to the environment. They can suit their own own fancy about attaching diagonally or in any other form that they may prefer, and they may attach the comb to sides or ends just when and where they think it is necessary.

In the artificial hives the combs are attached only at the edges, but in natural conditions within the bee tree or in its counterpart, as represented by the old-fashioned box hive with opaque sides and in our transparent inverted aquarium, the bees can build combs and attach them in any way that they see fit.

One of the most interesting objects for study is to note when the bees think it necessary to put out a side support from a long comb. They seem to believe that they are really within a hollow tree and that it is likely to be swayed by the gales. Of course, when so swayed long combs laden with honey or with young bees would be too much for the unyielding rigidity of the upper part of the combs. These, if they have no side stays, would bend, crack and be crushed against each other.

The bees have learned this and give the combs a firm support whenever it is necessary. They do this, it is true, to a certain extent, in the regular eight or ten frame hive, but not with the naturalness with which they do it in a large, unobstructed space.

A frame or two of bees may be purchased at a dealer's for a trifling sum, and at the same time hints may be obtained concerning their care and treatment. When in confinement bees should be fed on a syrup made of equal parts of sugar and water.—Christian Advocate.

PAUL AND THOMAS.

Harry's aunt, who lived in the same house with Harry, had a big gray parrot, who made himself very much at home, and considered himself one of the family. His name was Paul.

Harry would sometimes lift the parrot high in the air upon one finger. Then Paul would cock his head upon one side and talk way down in his throat.

Harry was playing thus with Paul one day when some one called him. He set Paul upon the floor, and ran out of the room to see what was wanted.

In a few minutes in walked Thomas, the big black house cat.

Thomas had had his eye on Paul for a long time, and when he came upon him thus, walking about alone upon the floor, he said to himself that here was his chance.

He slunk around behind a chair and began to creep slowly toward the parrot. Paul was preening his red tail and seemed to be paying no attention.

Thomas suddenly gathered himself and then sprang for the bird with claws spread out.

Paul had really been watching Thomas' game all the time, and just as the cat made his spring Paul flew up into the air. The result was that when he came down he landed right upon Thomas' black head.

He gripped his long, curving talons into the cat's fur, and then he set to work with his strong, hooked beak. He pulled out whole bunches of fur and scattered them into the air.

Thomas squalled and meowed till he wrenched himself free, when he fairly tore out of the room.

"Squawk!" said Paul, and this was a sign that he had been having a good time.—New York News.

HARRY'S CHICKENS.

Sammy Brent lived "'way down South," and was just as full of mischief as a boy of thirteen could be. One evening he came home after a ramble through the woods and by the river and said to his brother Harry, who was eight years younger than himself.

"Harry, you take these three eggs and put them in a box of sand and set it in the sun, and after a while you'll have three of the funniest chickens you ever saw."

Harry followed his brother's directions, and morning, noon and night he might be seen watching for his brood to poke their bills out of the sand.

At last, one hot day just before noon, the sand began to move and the queerest kind of a chicken came out. It had a long horny bill, a long flat body without feathers or wings, four feet and a tail nearly as long as its body. As soon as Harry's excited eyes could see clearly he exclaimed: "Oh! Oh! It's an alligator! It's an alligator come out of an egg!"

That was the way Harry learned that the alligators bury their eggs in the sand and wait for the sun to hatch them, and as soon as the young alligators appear the mother conducts them to the water.—New York News.

THE FLIGHT OF BIRDS.

The course of flight is a distinguishing character of many birds. The grouse rises gradually while flying in a straight course; the woodcock rises to a height of several feet, or even yards, then flies in a straight line, but peculiarly arrowlike, being graceful and silent, the long slender tail and body of the bird still further suggesting an arrow. A number of the birds, notably the brown thrasher and the song sparrow, progress in short flights, as from bush to bush, with a queer, eccentric, or bobbing motion as if their flapping tails were a great hindrance. A Wilson snipe flies in a zig-zag line; a goldfinch in long undulations or bounds. All of these and many other ways of flying can be indicated by dotted lines in the notebook, supplemented by such words as "sailing," "rapid," "slow," "heavy," or "graceful," flight and "rapid," "slow-silent" or "clattering" wingbeats; the wings of the grouse hum, those of the woodcock and the mourning dove whistle.—St. Nicholas.

A DOG MAIL CARRIER.

A Kansas town boasts of a Newfoundland dog intelligent enough to be a mail carrier. The depot is only a short distance from the post office. The mail trains do not stop, but drop the bags on the platform in passing.

When the dog hears the whistle of the approaching train, he hurries to the depot and waits for his burden. The mail clerk kicks the bag out of the car door and it falls somewhere in the vicinity of the freight house. The dog goes at once to the sack, and, taking it carefully in the middle, so that neither end will drag on the ground, walks sedately and directly to the post office, where he deposits his trust in a safe place.

The dog is now five years old, is two feet high, and strong in limb. His teeth are strong from carrying the heavy mail bags, which sometimes weigh at least forty-seven pounds when the bag is tightly packed during a busy time. He is well cared for and well fed.—Bee-Hive.

A curious fact revealed by statisticans is, says the Sheffield Daily Telegraph, that the number of men killed by lightning in England is nearly four times that of women.

London has 8,000 streets, which it costs nearly $11,000,000 a year to keep in order.

FARM AND GARDEN

WHAT THE TEETH INDICATE.

At the Smithfield and Birmingham shows in England the following rules govern the judgment of the age of animals:

Cattle having their central permanent incisors cut will be considered as exceeding one year and six months.

Cattle having their central permanent incisors fully up will be considered as exceeding two years and nine months.

Cattle having their second pair of permanent incisors full up will be considered as exceeding two years and three months.

Cattle having their third pair of permanent incisors cut will be considered as exeeding two years and eight months.

Cattle having their fourth pair (corner) permanent incisors fully up and their anterior molars showing signs of wear will be considered as exceeding three years.

Sheep having their central permanent incisors cut will be considered as exceeding ten months.

Sheep having their central permanent incisors fully up will be considered as exceeding twelve months.

Sheep having their third pair of permanent incisors cut will be considered as exceeding nine months.

Sheep having their third pair of permanent incisors fully up and the temporary molars shed will be considered as exceeding twenty-four months.

Sheep having their corner permanent incisors well up and showing marks of wear will be considered as exceeding three years.

Pigs having their corner permanent incisors cut will be considered as exceeding six months.

Pigs having their permanent tusks more than half up will be considered as exceeding nine months.

Pigs having their central permanent incisors up and any of the first three permanent molars cut will be considered as exceeding twelve months.

Pigs having their lateral temporary incisors shed and the permanents appearing will be considered as exceeding fifteen months.

Pigs having their lateral permanent incisors fully up will be considered as exceeding eighteen months.

MILK CONTAMINATION.

A portion of Bulletin No. 87, issued by the Nebraska station, deals with a test to determine the amount of contamination of milk that takes place during milking, and its control. The four methods tested were as follows: (1) Sponging the cow's udder with water before milking, (2) using five per cent solution of carbolic acid, (3) rubbing with vaseline, and (4) simply brushing with the hand. A bacterial test was made of the above methods and the results obtained brought forth the following conclusions: Some means of preventing milk contamination during milking should be employed. The work required to sponge an animal's flank and udder is but a trifle and great improvements can be made on the milk and its products. The carbolic acid solution costs two cents per gallon, which is enough to treat ten cows. The only objections to this method are the disagreeable odor and the bother of mixing. The vaseline costs about the same as the carbolic acid, and serves as a good preventive for chapped or sore teats. It is also to be recommended for cows with short teats which have to be milked by the stripping method. This treatment will not answer when the cows have dirty udders. The water treatment is to be recommended for general use above the other three as it is cheaper and does the work practically as well. This method can be used on any farm, with little or no inconvenience, and the results obtained would more than compensate for the extra time required.

SEEDING WHEAT.

The preparation of soil for wheat is as important a matter as the selection of the seed, a fine seed being the foundation of success in giving the plants advantage of growth at the start. Not only must the land be plowed deep, the drainage looked after and the seed carefully drilled in, but the seed bed for the wheat must be carefully prepared before the drill is used. If the seed is drilled in deep, where the soil is fine, the wheat will be less liable to being thrown out in the winter and where the land is drained there will be fewer plants winter killed.

Land that has been in clover and followed with corn, is suitable, for the reason that the thorough cultivation required by corn keeps down the weeds and grass. It is not an easy matter to kill weeds after the wheat is up. If the land is plowed in summer, the weeds allowed to start and a weeder, harrow, or cultivator then used, as often as required until the seed is planted, the land will be cleaned.

In drilling the seed, the practice is to apply the fertilizer with the seed, but the broadcast method is also preferred by some, as fertilizer is then more evenly distributed. If stable manure is used it should be well rotted, spread uniformly and then worked into the soil with a harrow. Such preparation mingles the manure with the soil and does much to give the crop uniformity of growth. It should not be overlooked that there are depressions in most fields and water often remains longer on such places than anywhere else, which necessitates drainage, but if this cannot be done the deep plowing should be practiced, which assists materially in allowing the surplus moisture to pass downward.—Agricultural Epitomist.

PASTURE FOR HOGS.

Where clover will grow readily the best hog pastures include clover, rape and rye. Other pastures are not necessary. Winter rye will come first in order and when eaten down closely will be much relished by hogs. After winter rye will come clover of the medium variety. Then early sown rape will come in just after the first growth of clover has been eaten down. Later the second growth of medium clover will be on hand and still later, a late sown crop of rape will carry the hogs right on until the approach of winter. Where these two crops will grow in good form, the swine grower need not trouble looking about for any other. Of course other pastures may be grown, but usually there is not very great need for growing them.

Where clover will not grow, the chief pasture may be rye, barley and oats, rape sorghum and rape, grown in the order named. Instead of sorghum, peas and also sweet corn may be grown. It is not necessary to grow all of these in one season. For instance, winter rye and rape, when sown in proper season, may be made to answer the purpose without any other crops. It is fortunate, however, to have such a variety, for there is opportunity for a choice. It is a good country for producing swine where pastures can be thus grown for them in such variety and it may be also added in such abundance as characterizes the production of prairie land.—The Epitomist.

A COSTLY LESSON.

A large farm can be worked more economically, proportionately, than a small one as machinery can be made more effective on the large farm, but the smaller the area the more thoroughly can the cultivation be given and crops derived will be larger per acre. The small farm admits of obtaining more valuable crops and the use of hand implements, by which the soil is better worked. Fertilizers can also be used to the best advantage on small farms and the manure is a valuable item, while on a large farm the manure must be applied over a large surface, thus providing but a limited amount of plant food.

Recently a farmer told the editor that four years ago, he rented for cash, 320 acres of land. At the end of two years he had $1,000 in the bank, besides teams and tools. The third year was a drouth and it took all he had to pay his indebtedness. He then decided to concentrate his work and rented eighty acres for two-fifths in the bin and crib. He added, "I should have bought an eighty when I had $1,000 in the bank." Yes a forty would have been a more profitable purchase. But what a price for the lesson! We need more small farms well tilled by the owners themselves, less extensive and more intensive methods of cultivation.—The Epitomist.

CROP-BOUND FOWLS.

Fowls that are in this condition have gotten that way because there has been a lack of gravel or gritty material. The preventive is easily accomplished, so there really is no need of the poultry being aggravated in this manner.

STAGNANT WATER.

This is something that should be guarded against on every farm, for no good can come from it in any way, and it is sure to be a positive detriment to any farm and a direct cause of disease among the stock.

FARM TOPICS.

Feed brood sows but little corn.

Good slop is best for suckling sows.

Sour swill should never be fed at any time.

Nothing is more detrimental to a litter of young pigs than a damp nest.

There is no surer step in overstocking than a straggling farrowing season.

Hot salt brine, very hot and very strong, is a good disinfectant for houses in which contagious ailments have pestered fowls.

Moulting hens will have a better coat of feathers where they are not annoyed by the attentions of the male while the feathers are young and tender.

Keep the premises and the houses as clean as possible and you will seldom be troubled with diseases whose origin and treatment are unknown to you.

A rope that had been used by the public executor in the hanging of several murderers was sold at auction in London the other day and brought $1.26.

THE joint debate agreement is off, and for the rest of the campaign the candidates for Representative will go it alone. Mr. Gulledge feels that he has not been treated well in the matter, and henceforth proposes to tote his own skillet.

THAT the prospects of the Democratic nominees are daily increasing in brightness is very gratifying to the good people of the county, and we confidently look for a triumphant return of Messrs. Gulledge, Traywick Harrison and Atchison.

PRESIDENT W. F. Vandiver of the Alabama great Fair to be held in Montgomery October 22 to October 27, is well satisfied with the progress made at the fair grounds. The buildings and race track are nearly completed, little delay being caused by the rain and recent storm. The Fair will be opened on schedule time and said Mr. Vandiver "It will be the greatest show of its kind ever given in Alabama."

Hon. Howard S. Doster, Democratic nominee for State Senator, was in town Tuesday, feeling very good indeed about his election. Mr. Doster is canvassing the district thoroughly and has enough political experience to understand and appreciate the situation. As representative from Autauga county he made an excellent reputation, and again proved his ability in the constitutional convention, which reputation will be greatly enhanced by his services as State Senator.

THE agricultural and live stock display at the Alabama State Fair at Birmingham this year will be the finest exhibit yet given in this state. The fair management has offered liberal premiums and will charge no entrance fee nor make any charge for stalls or pens. Every farmer who has a horse or a pair of mules, or sheep or cattle, or hogs or poultry or anything he has raised on his farm of which he is proud ought to ship them to the fair. You may get a premium well worth your trouble. Besides, you will be helping make your state fair a big success.

FARMERS' DAY at the big State Fair in Birmingham next week is going to be a great day. A special program has been arranged by the officers of the Farmers Union of Alabama, and it is expected that at least one-third of the 60,000 union farmers of the State will be present. Addresses will be made by C. S. Barrett, of Georgia, President of the National Farmers Union; Benjamin L. Griffin. Secretary and Treasurer of the Arkansas Farmers Union, and Rev. T. E. Pinnegar, State Lecturer for the Union in Alabama. The railroads have granted a special rate of one fare plus 25 cents, and no doubt many farmers of our county will avail themselves of the opportunity to go up to the metropolis and enjoy the big fair.

To the Voters of Chilton County:

This is to give notice that the joint debate with J. O. Middleton is at an end, for good and sufficient reasons, among them being that when my campaign manager, W. M. Adams, entered into an agreement with A. C. Smith, campaign manager for said Middleton, I considered myself bound not to speak anywhere in Chilton county during our canvass unless said Middleton was present or had actual notice of same. Since which time an agreement between said Adams and Smith, said Middleton has made four appointments and did speak at Bethel church and Corinth church when he had had previous notice of and knew I was not physically able to meet him, besides he had notice and knew I was at Talladega Springs. Then, when he knew I was not at home, but in West Chilton during recent rain storm, he made appointments and did speak at Poplar Springs church and Jemison without giving or offering to give me actual notice of same, and I did not know or even hear of said appointments until each appointment had been filled.

Take further notice, that on, viz., August 30, 1906, said J. O. Middleton did demand of me through the Union that I meet my appointments or meet him in debate in person and not by proxy, which I intended to do and did do insofar as I could, and yet when he went to Bethel church he took with him L. H. Reynolds, and then and there, not J. O. Middleton alone, but he and L. H. Reynolds, together with G. W. Edwards, did assail me and my party, and at Corinth church not only did he (J. O. M.) but L. H. Reynolds, A. C. Smith, Anderson Baker and others did assail me and my party (the Democrats) and thereby did violate the rules of justice and common courtesy which each of us was due the other.

Now, this shall in no wise affect my canvass, but I shall go forth with renewed vigor in my effort to dethrone this opposition to the peoples' interest in Chilton County. You hear them cry out, "Don't send Gulledge to the Legislature, he will pass a law that will hurt the people." Rot! How could I hurt the people without hurting my own interest?

Then figure the adaptability of Mr. Middleton and myself to the position we seek. See what each of us have done and is doing for the people. My taxes is nearly five hundred dollars a year. See how much he pays. I worked the public roads from 14 to 45 years and never missed but two workings. Look up his record. I have always paid all taxes and other assessments imposed upon me by the laws of my State. Look and see if he has. The schools of Alabama got $130 taxes out of me in 1905. How much did J. O. M. pay them? Please look it up.

At his primary election in my home beat he got 7 votes. At my primary I got 79 votes, or a little over eleven to his one, while at his home box (Clanton) he got 145 while I got 122. To this I wish to add that while he is a "Coat of many colors" I have ever been a Democrat.

Then if elected he will go to the Legislature as one of only two or three so called Republicans, with little or no experience nor acquaintance, while I am a man of much experience and wide acquaintance, and hence ask your suffrage.

I call attention to my original platform, by and to which I swear allegiance. My opponent, Mr. J. O. Middleton, has no platform.

Faithfully yours,

F. A. GULLEDGE.

Verbena, Oct. 8, 1906

Editor Banner—Please allow me space in your paper to say a few words to the voters of Chilton county. I wish to say in the beginning that I was raised a Republican, as anyone who knows my father, knows he always voted the Republican ticket, in fact he served in the Federal army, and I have been taught to love the name of Republican. But I think the time has come when we should lay aside party lines and vote for the man, and I wish to say to the Republican voters that I think it will be to our interest to vote for Mr. Gulledge. Anyone knows that we will have a Democratic House of Representatives and that a Democrat could come nearer having his platform enacted into law than a Republican. In the person of Mr. Gulledge we have a man that can represent Chilton county with honor to himself and county second to no man. Let every man look at his wife and say shall I vote for Mr. Gulledge and get more and better schools, right adjustment of road laws, etc., or Middleton, and get nothing. I hope no one will be deceived by what Just a Voter or Verbena Billy Goat says. I suppose he is a billy without a collar and with a clipped tail, as he put it down kid. If Just a Voter and Kid are Republicans, I must say they don't favor any I ever seen. Anyone who will hide behind a little dog tail name to say hard things about a gentleman is of very small calibre and deserves no place among the just. I have known Mr. Gulledge a long time, must say he is one of the nicest gentlemen I ever met, and if sent to the Legislature, will do the farmers and all citizens of this county more good than any other man in this county, for when Mr. Gulledge puts his shoulder to a wheel it always rolls. So gentlemen, lay aside party lines and vote for the man that can do us the most good. I am not supporting Mr. Gulledge because he is my friend, but I believe it to be to the interest of every man who wants free schools and right adjustment of road laws. I consider these two things to be of most interest to us as a county. I want to say that I am not the only Republican that is going to vote for Mr. Gulledge here, most all of them here are Gulledge men. With best wishes for the Banner, I am yours for the right.

Letter to O. E. Latham.

Clanton, Ala.

Dear Sir: Our agent ought to sell nine-tenths of the paint of his town and region; no use to try for the other tenth The proportion of men, who won't take good advice. and use the least-gallons paint, is about one in ten among even owners of houses and stores and shops and barns and fences

One man in ten will buy a gold brick or green goods, if he has the money and gets a good chance

Devoe at $1 75 a gallon is better than gold; adulterated and short-measure paints are green goods and gold bricks.

Devoe saves half, more or less, of the labor and wages of painting; it is all paint; full strength and full measure. There is no other such paint within ten per cent. Ten per cent of labor and paint is worth saving; and ten is the least. There are scores of paints that throw away half of both gallons and labor on whiting. china-clay, ground stone, barytes, benzine, water—all they are good for is to make gallons of nothing and look like paint in the can; more gallons to buy and more gallons to pay for putting on—gold bricks and green goods. Here's how they work.

Judge I D Fairchild owns two houses exactly alike in Lufkin, Texas. J H Torrence painted both houses; one Devoe, 15¼ gollons; the other with another paint sold at the same price; 25 gallons. That 25 gallon paint is weak and 15% whiting; that's why it took 9¾ gallons more.

Yours truly

Invitation for Bids to Purchase Bankrupt Property.

In the matter of the Denison Lumber and Manufacturing Company, a corporation, Bankrupt.
In the United States District Court, Middle District of Alabama.

In compliance with an order of Judge Asa E. Stratton, Referee in Bankruptcy made and entered in the above stated cause: Notice is hereby given that sealed bids will be received by me, as Trustee of the Estate of said Bankrupt, until 12 o'clock m October 15, 1906, for the purchase of the property of said Estate, consisting of two and one half acres of land, being Block numbered 8, in the City of Thorsby, in Chilton county, Alabama, with the improvements, buildings and machinery thereon, said buildings being one frame building forty feet wide and one hundred and sixty feet long with an L thereto, heretofore used by the said Bankrupt for a planing mill and wood-working plant, one dry kiln 12x18x53 feet, one shed stable 16x20 feet, one six room frame dwelling house; and the engines, boilers and fixtures and other machinery now in said first hereinbefore described building; certain personal property and choses in action. A more particular description of said property, or an inspection of the same, may be had upon application to me.

Bids may be made for the said property as a whole, or for the real estate, and for the machinery, personal property and choses in action separately.

Oh little afterthought, I wish
You had not come to me,
For with myself I otherwise
Quite satisfied should be.
You're excellent, but I deplore
That you should not have come before.

Why is it that you are not prompt,
But saunter in instead,

THE LITTLE MOUSE-PIE.

By Rebecca Palfrey Utter.

Of all the stories Tommy's mother used to tell him, Tommy's favorite was "The Little Mouse Pie." This is the way she used to tell it.

Once there was a nice old mother cat who lived in the coal-shed at No. 13 Twenty-second street. She had four children: two were yellow, one was black, and one was white. The two yellow ones were named Mustard and Custard, and the other two were Donder and Whitey. The mother's name was Mrs. Gray.

One day the lady and the little boy who lived in the house came out into the back yard. They did this every pleasant morning after breakfast. The lady came to look at the lake and to get some fresh air, and the little boy came to give the kittens some milk. Mrs. Gray saw them coming, and called her children.

"Come, Custard and Mustard," she called, "come Whitey. Wake up, Donder, breakfast is ready."

Donder and Mustard put their paws on the edge of the box, and looked over and saw the little boy pouring milk into their tin plate. So they scrambled over, and fell with a thump on the floor, and Custard came tumbling after, and they all ran as fast as they could. They did not know how to run very well yet. Sometimes their hind legs ran faster than their fore legs, and made them turn round backward; and sometimes their tails got crooked, and made them run sideways. But they got there at last, and then they tried to lap milk with all their might. They had not yet learned to do it just right, and sometimes the milk got into their eyes and made them wink, and sometimes it got into their noses and made them sneeze. Then Mrs. Gray lapped a little to show them how, and for a while they got along better.

By and by Mrs. Gray noticed that Whitey was not there.

"Why didn't Whitey come?" she asked the other children.

"Whitey's cross," "Whitey's sick," "Whitey's lazy," said Custard and Mustard and Donder all together.

Then Mrs. Gray went to the box and looked in, and there lay Whitey, with her eyes half shut.

"What's the matter?" she asked. "Why don't you come to breakfast?"

"I'm sick," said Whitey. "My nose feels hot, and my tail feels cold, and my head aches."

Then Mrs. Gray ran as fast as she could and got four little cups of hot water, and made Whitey stand with one paw in each. Then she brought a piece of ice and put it on her head, and then she put a hot brick on her tail, and then a mustard plaster on her back.

"Now don't you feel better?" she asked anxiously.

"No, I don't," said poor Whitey. "I feel worse."

(When Tommy's mother said this, she used to speak in a very squeaky little voice, and hang her head on one side and pucker up her eyes and mouth, and try to look like a sick kitten, which Tommy thought very funny indeed.)

"Dear me! I must send for a doctor at once," said Mrs. Gray. So she jumped out of the coal-shed window and ran down the alley past two stables, and went into the third stable where her friend Tabitha Brown lived.

"O Tabby," she said, "won't you send your boy round to the barn behind the grocery, and the corner of Cottage Grove avenue and Twenty-fourth street, to ask doctor to come and see Whitey? She's so sick I don't dare to leave her, for fear she may go into fits any minute."

"Why, yes, yes, yes, of course!" said Tabby, quite excited, "and I'll just drop everything, and go and help you take care of her till the doctor comes." And she sent her boy on the errand that very second, and dropped everything, and went home with Mrs. Gray, and the two sat down, one on each side of the box, and watched Whitey without moving or winking for an hour and twenty-five minutes which prevented her from going into fits.

At the end of that time a very large tortoise-shell cat jumped in through the coal-shed window. He bowed to the two ladies, laid his hat and cane and gloves on the pile of kindling-wood, and then put on his spectacles, and came to the side of the box and looked at Whitey's tongue and felt of her pulse. Then he sat very still, thinking, for four minutes; and then he said very solemnly:

"I think she's threatened."

Mrs. Gray and Tabitha Brown looked at each other with tears in their eyes.

"Now, don't get excited," said the doctor. "Keep calm, and I think we can pull her through. Has she been exposed to kittenpox?"

"I don't know," said Mrs. Gray. "She went to kitten-garten last week and she might catch it there."

"What has she been eating?" asked the doctor.

"Not a thing to-day!" answered the mother, "and it is now past ten o'clock. I can see she's getting weaker every minute."

"Exactly," answered the doctor. "You did well to call me so promptly. Now, if you can get her a Little Mouse Pie within two hours, her life is saved. The mice must be six weeks old, and fresh, not pickled. There are two places in the city where they can probably be obtained: one in Gillespie's, on the corner of Indiana avenue and Twenty-second street, and the other is P. K. Bowen's on South Park avenue and Twenty-ninth. Do you trade at either of these places?"

"No," said Mrs. Gray.

"Well, there is a cat's annex in the rear, where they keep a large and excellent assortment of this class of goods. They are perfectly reliable. Now there is no time to be lost."

"Tabby," said Mrs. Gray, "if you'll stay with the children, I'll go for the mice myself." And she put on her bonnet and gloves almost before Tabby had time to answer; and, taking a parasol in one hand and a small tin pail in the other, she walked very fast till she came to Gillespie's. She hurried round to the cat's annex in the rear.

"Have you any little mice?" she asked.

"Fresh or pickled?" asked the salesman.

"Fresh," said Mrs. Gray, "and six weeks old."

"We have plenty of fresh seven weeks mice," answered the salesman; "and we have a good supply of the sixes, but only half an hour ago I filled a large order, and now there are only eight left."

"Eight will do," said Mrs. Gray eagerly, handing him the small tin pail. "Give them to me at once. I will take them home myself, for the need is urgent."

She hurried home with the mice; and, as soon as she was inside the shed, without even stopping to take off her bonnet, she tied a large gingham apron round her waist, and made up a fire in the kitchen stove. Then she went quickly to the pantry, and took out the kneading-board and rolling-pin, and a yellow dish and a knife. Then she put in the dish a cup of flour and half a cup of lard and a level teaspoonful of salt, and cut up the lard and mixed it all in with the flour, and poured in some water and made it up into dough, and sprinkled flour on the board and rolled half the dough into a thin sheet, and laid it on a plate for the undercrust, and trimmed off the edges and laid little mice on it, taking them up carefully by their tails and sprinkling over them a little salt and a little pepper and a little mustard and a little nutmeg and three drops of lemon juice and five drops of vanilla and half a tablespoonful of cream and a piece of butter as big as your thumb, and rolled out the top crust and laid it over and trimmed it off with a knife, and crimped it round the edge with a fork.

This is the correct way to make a Little Mouse Pie.

Then she put it in the oven, and sat down in a rocking-chair, and rocked very hard, and fanned herself while waiting for it to bake.

In twenty minutes it was done. She took it out of the oven, and let it stand on the window-sill a few minutes to cool. The crust was brown and flaky, and the smell of it was delicious. Donder and Mustard and Custard were in the yard just outside the kitchen window; and, when they smelled it, they looked at each other, and said:

"Oh, my!"

Then Mrs. Gray took the pie in where Whitey was, and said, "Whitey, dear, couldn't you take a taste of Little Mouse Pie?"

"Oh, no," said Whitey, "I don't want any."

"Just smell of it, dear, it's so good." And she held it close to Whitey's nose.

Whitey opened her eyes, and said: "I believe I'll taste it."

Her mother put a little crumb in Whitey's mouth; and immediately she sat up very straight, and said:

"Gimmesommore."

Then Mrs. Gray knew that Whitey's life was saved.

"Now, that's a good child," she said; "let mother see how much of it you can eat." She set the pie before Whitey, and in about two minutes Whitey had eaten the very last crumb, and was licking the plate. Then she jumped out of the box, and ran out in the yard to play.

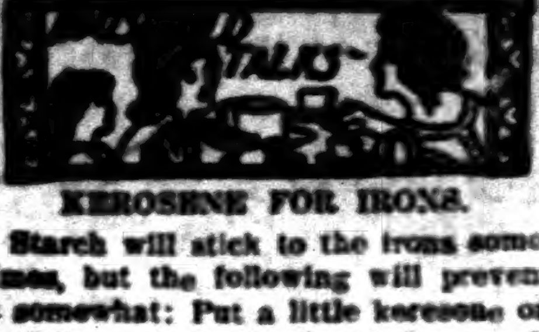
"Bless the child!" said Mrs. Gray. And she was so happy that, when the doctor sent in his bill for fifty dollars, as he did the next morning, Mrs. Gray gave him a hundred, and thanked him, too.

Then Tommy would give a long sigh of satisfaction, and say:

"That's a nice story, mamma. Now tell it all over again."—Christian Register.

Anger's Sting.

No word spoken against a person is ever justified. It matters not how wrong, or unjust, or cutting, or ill-mannered, or wilfully untruthful, that person may be; to give vent to one's anger in return only lowers one to the level of the other, accomplishes no good, and leaves one with a rankling sense of defeat. Most of us have put this to the test, and then have wished we had not. The times of stress upon which all look back with most lasting satisfaction are those times when they have kept their self-control, not when they have lost it. The reason why an outburst of anger leaves such a sting with the one who gives way to it—is because it is a defeat self-inflicted. It hurts more than any wound from another.—Sunday-School Times.



KEROSENE FOR IRONS.

Starch will stick to the irons sometimes, but the following will prevent it somewhat: Put a little kerosene on a cloth and rub the hot iron over it three or four times, or take a cloth your lamps have been wiped off with. This keeps the starch from sticking and removes soot or stove polish that collects on the bottom of a hot iron and soils the garment. It also gives a gloss to the clothes. There is no danger, as very little oil is necessary. —New York Mail.

REST IN THE KITCHEN.

Be sure to have an easy lounge or chair in the kitchen, where you may spend the few waiting moments between acts, as it were, in rest. If you can not afford to buy a lounge especially for that purpose make one. This is easily done. Get two long boxes from the dry goods store; place them end to end and nail together. Make a mattress and fill it with any desired materials. Shredded shucks are clean and excellent. Over this drape any kind of cover to suit the fancy. Be sure to get something that can be washed and ironed. Red and white bed ticking is pretty and desirable, and never fades, and when laundered looks as good as new. Make a pillow to match. Now, while you are watching the cakes, bread, pies and the like, remember there is your lounge. Rest. Do not say you have no time. You have to wait for your baking to brown. Why not rest while you wait? You will be surprised how much refreshment you will gain even for one minute's relaxation upon this improvised lounging quarter.

ARTISTIC FLOORS.

Our floors are constantly before us, always needing renewing and anything new in the way of suggestions is always accepted. A housekeeper in McCall's Magazine gives us some suggestions worth noting. She says:

Try painting your floors, you women whose arms ache from wielding the broom over dusty, stuffy carpets, yet you find a hard-wood floor is luxury beyond your present attainment.

I have a young artist friend who has transformed her home simply by discarding carpets and painting her floors, using some prevailing color in the rugs which she has adopted in place of carpets for the color scheme of her floor.

A dull green was one color chosen, with the same color showing in wall paper and rugs; and the effect was very pretty, besides being restful to the eyes, as it is the color Nature uses to set off her most glowing pictures.

Floors that display yawning cracks may be skillfully treated with putty filling, which, when several coats of paint have been added, never will be noticed.

Another friend, whose parlor is a large one running the entire width of the house, found it such a tax upon the purse-strings to replace her worn-out carpet with a new one of the same kind, that she covered her floor with a dainty rice matting having pretty Japanese figures scattered over it. Not even a rug would she have to muss up and stumble over—nothing but the smooth, unbroken surface of the matting; yet every woman who entered the room after the transformation heaved a sigh of supreme content as her eyes took in the easy house-cleaning possibilities of the daintily furnished apartment.

Dry mops used over painted or hard-wood floors, and even on straw matting, will effectually remove dust, so that a broom is only a semi-occasional necessity. Dusting, also, is reduced to its minimum, and the burden of housework greatly simplified; while from a hygienic point of view, such floors cannot be too highly advocated.

RECIPES.

Rice and Meat Croquettes—One cupful boiled rice, one cupful of finely chopped cooked meat—any kind—one teaspoonful of salt, a little pepper, two tablespoonfuls of butter, half a cupful of milk, one egg. Put the milk on to boil, and add the meat, rice and seasoning; when this boils add the egg, well-beaten; stir one minute. After cooling, shape, dip in egg and crumbs and fry as before directed.

Red Vegetable Salad.—One pint of cold boiled potatoes, one pint of cold boiled beets, one pint of uncooked red cabbage, six tablespoonfuls of oil, eight of red vinegar (that in which beets have been pickled), one teaspoonful of salt, half a teaspoonful of pepper. Cut the potatoes in thin slices and the beets fine, and slice the cabbage as thin as possible. Mix all the ingredients. Let it stand in a cool place one hour; then serve.

Codfish Cakes—Wash one pound of salt codfish (the whole fish is decidedly preferable to the boneless codfish bought in packages), put in cold water to soak for three hours, then place over the fire in fresh water, bring to boiling point and strain. Pick into fine shreds. To each cup of codfish thus shredded, add one cupful freshly boiled potatoes, one egg, small piece of butter, tablespoonful milk or cream, and pepper to season. Mould into cakes, dip lightly in flour, brown in oil or butter and serve piping hot.

During 1905 there were wrecked, burned, and foundered at sea 297 steam vessels, of a net aggregate tonnage of 253,611, and 296 sailing vessels of 214,600 tons.

The famous Alabama was afloat twenty-two months. In that time she destroyed fifty-one vessels.

THE PULPIT.

AN ELOQUENT SUNDAY SERMON BY BISHOP JOHN J. TIGERT.

Subject: The God of Grace.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Union services of the First Reformed, the Grace M. E. Church, the Memorial Presbyterian and the Sixth Avenue Baptist were held in the last-named church. Sunday morning the preacher was Bishop John J. Tigert, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, who was elected to the bishopric in May last, at which time he was the editor of the Southern Christian Advocate. The bishop is a vigorous and lively preacher of the old-time Methodist order. His subject was "The God of Grace," and he took for his text the passage, II Corinthians, iv:6: "For God, who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, hath shined in our hearts to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ." He said:

The great lesson that lies on the surface of this text is that the God of creation is also the God of grace and salvation. If you and I should think about it superficially we should be inclined to believe that the God who built the universe is a greater God than the One who saved the soul, but therein would lie a radical mistake. Many a man of great wealth and resources has found it easier to build a palace than to frame the life of a son, and many a man so situated would give all he ever earned in order that he might have a boy after his own liking. The Czar found it easier to accumulate resources, including men and material, for the war against Japan than he is finding it to pacify the people of Russia today. The more we think about it the more we shall be compelled to believe that every problem involving the government of moral matters is more difficult than the fashioning of material things. For the element of freedom enters into the former proposal; and wherever we are dealing with those who are free we cannot count on the result as we can when dealing with forces that are fixed. The free and the fixed—these are two realms, but the God of the fixed is also the God of the free; and the God of creation is also the God of revelation and grace and the salvation of the human soul: "For God, who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, hath shined in our hearts to give the light of knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ." Now there is certainly in this phrase as express reminiscence of the first chapter of Genesis: "God said, Let there be light: and there was light." It is very easy for us to imagine the annihilation of the world. I can conceive the sun to be blotted out; the moon and the stars no longer to shine; the foundations of the earth removed. But after I shall have imagined this I shall find that there is a void, eternal, infinite, that by no effort of thought can I annihilate. It may be nothing, and yet I cannot conceive it as if it were nothing. If I think a little more closely about it I am obliged to conceive this void as absolutely dark. That is to say, light is a positive entity; darkness is nothing. The removal of the source of light brings darkness, and since in this darkness there is no source of light it must be altogether dark. Now, just as darkness is the absence of light, so cold is the complete absence of heat. Everything, even ice, possesses a little heat; we cannot imagine what infinite cold is. Yet this void, eternal, infinite, is at once completely cold. Again, silence is the absence of sound. Silence does not require any absolute cause; in order to create silence in this house I have but to cease talking. Once more: This void cold, silent, dark, is also dead. Did you ever think about it? Death is nothing. Yet you will never meet death, for while you are death is not, and while death is you are not. And so you and death can never come face to face. What terror you have of the gave is born of a false imagination. The horrors that creep over us and constitute physical fear of death are the imposition of imagination because we conceive of ourselves as being sensitive; as feeling the cold, damp cold of the grave, overwhelmed by its darkness. But death is only absence of life. Fix these four conceptions upon your mind for the sake of the lesson to follow: Silence is the absence of sound; Darkness is the absence of light; Cold is the absence of heat; Death is the absence of life.

Now, it was in these circumstances—this void, eternal, infinite, silent, cold, dead, that the voice of the Almighty was heard, breaking the silence of eternity, flinging the light out into this infinite and eternal void, and saying "Let there be light; and there was light." And Paul says that very God, who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, "hath shined in our hearts to give the light of the knowledge of God in the face of Jesus Christ." I believe in depravity, in total depravity. That is to say, I believe the natural heart is totally dark and cold and silent and dead. That babe born into the world is a mere lump of flesh through which the blood is coursing: in which the sinews and bones and muscles are forming. It is the possibility of a man. It must be built up into a man. It must "attain unto the fullness of the stature of manhood in Christ Jesus." It requires God to handle the situation; to illuminate that natural darkness; to impart spiritual light and heat and life. It requires God to break the silence of nature. After all, this depravity arises from deprivation. It is not that there was any injection of a moral poison into the system by the hand of the Almighty. The human heart is not a foul pool sending up a stench. Depravity is pre-eminently a deprivation. It does not involve guilt. It involves a beginning. It is that it may be made a habitation of God through the Spirit of God. The God who commands the light to shine out of darkness shines in those dark, sad, cold, dead hearts of ours, and shows to us the beauties of religion and exhibits His matchless grace in the gift of His Son, in order that we may see "the light of the knowledge of the true knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ." Now there is a depravity that is not negative. It would be the greatest boon granted to many a man if past sin was easily shaken off; but there is not a single act of your life that has not left its deposit in your character. Although, on the authority of Huxley, the human body is completely renewed every twelve months, yet the old scars remain as a perpetual memorial. So, deep down in your moral nature, there is the record of your first lie, first impure thought and all that has blasted your life from then until now. It takes the power of God to break that bondage and it is only through Jesus Christ that you and I can shake off the awful incubus of the past.

There are vast differences in the forms and degrees of sin, and there are vast differences between becoming a Christian in early life, in advanced life and in old age. If you have not already become a Christian the practical thing is to begin now. There is no moment so absolutely sane and solid, so certain or altogether utilizable, as the present. There will never be another moment so golden as the moment you are allowing to slip away. The longer the devil has you in his grasp the more deadly the grip becomes and the severer will be the struggle required to secure your freedom in Christ Jesus. If I were an unsaved man, before all other duties I would assert the supreme duty of saving my soul. The supreme duty of life is to shake ourselves clear of the domination of sin by the help of Almighty God. But you say everybody does not see it that way. It was so in the apostle's day, and here in the context it gives the reason, "If our gospel is hid it is hid in them that are lost." Do you call a blind man to give testimony of the beauties of an electrical display? The devil has constructed many kinds of veils to blind the eyes of men. These are the veils of selfishness, worldliness, pride of life, the lust of the flesh, avarice and many others, to pull over the human heart. My friends, there is no more fatal mistake than to belittle and underestimate the task of the religious life and what has to be done in order that a human soul may be recreated in the likeness of God. It is a task of infinite delicacy, requiring divine power and wisdom and one which, if accomplished, ends in glories as eternal as the throne of God. Thank God that if we get the victory the victory is one that shall become greater and greater, certain and more certain in the midst of all this conflict we wage in this world with the enemy of our souls. I was not brought up to believe in the doctrine of "final perseverance," but I honor the doctrine and those who believe in it, but since the day when I first experienced the joy of sins forgiven I have been a fairly good soldier of Jesus Christ, and sometimes, in my middle age I experience a joy so satisfying that I can scarcely contain myself. That joy seems to be grounded upon this hope: that I am going to win the last fight and obtain the final victory; that I am in an enemy's land and assaulted by a powerful foe who hates me with diabolical hatred and would ruin me when I am setting my feet on the footsteps of the throne; that, by God's grace, I am going to win and celebrate the victory within the gates and at the footstool of Him who sits upon the throne. God grant that against all our spiritual foes we may "fight the good fight of faith and lay hold on eternal life!"

Sermons in Miniature.

Weariness is the only condition on which God gives rest.

Your devotion to Christ may be known by your deeds for His people.

The discussion of the creed does not excuse from its demonstration.

Believing about the Holy Spirit will not take the place of receiving Him.

It's hard seeing Christ in His church while your eyes are on the clock.

If you wait on the Lord you will always keep ahead of the devil.

When the troubled soul calls up heaven it never gets the "busy" signal.

There is none of the music of heaven in a holy tone.

The worldly Christian will never make the Christian world.

The fiercest fighting may be but the polishing of the crowns.

You cannot prove your holiness by putting your head into heaven.

There can be no social stability apart from Christ's great law of service.

Work for God leads to knowing the will of God.

An Unsafe Investment.

It is not considered a good business transaction to invest all one's capital in a single venture. Yet so does every one who "layeth up treasure for himself, and is not rich toward God."

Two business men met. One said to the other: "Have you heard the sad news?" "No; what is it?" "Our neighbor, B——, is dead." "Ah! Is is so? How much did he leave?" "All."

Practically that story is as old as the race. No one of us brought anything into the world, and it is certain that no one of us can take anything out. We all leave all earthly possessions. Not every rich man is rich toward God, else our Saviour would never have uttered the parable of the rich fool. We know what the man said to his soul, but it would be worth a good deal to know also what the soul would have said to the man. —Rev. G. B. F. Hallock, D. D.

The Law That Gives Liberty.

The one and only law of life that sets a man free from all the forces that blight and destroy is the will of God. Show me a man who lives for one day wholly in word and thought and deed in the will of God and I will show you a man who is antedating heaven, and who for that day reaches the plane of life which is at once broadest, freest and gladdest.—Campbell Morgan.

Many Like This Well.

Some Christians are like the well of a man I know. The well is all right, with two exceptions—it freezes up in winter, and dries up in summer. —Moody.

The Eskimo Canoe.

It is in Greenland that the hunting ability of the Eskimo reaches its highest development. He has a fine mechanical skill. Bones, ivory, stones, a little driftwood, skins and the sinew of the reindeer are the materials from which he must make his boat and weapons. There is nothing else. Says a Greenland traveler: "Of these the Eskimo builds a canoe, its frame of bones and driftwood, its covering of translucent seal skin sewed together with sinew. This kayak is decked over, except for a hole in the middle framed with a wooden ring. The Eskimo wriggles into his hole, his legs extended into the fore part of the boat.

"Round his waist there is a cylinder of sealskin, the lower edge of which draws over the wooden ring and is pulled tight with a thong, making all water-tight to the armpits. For heavy weather the cylinder is part of a skin-shirt with a hood. Strings tighten this hood to the face and cuffs to the wrists, while a pair of long-sleeved mitts protect hands and arms.

"So rigged a good man can turn his canoe bottom upward and right himself again with sliding strokes of his paddle, for he is as waterproof as a duck. Moreover, his vessel is so flexible that it is almost safe from being crushed in the ice drift and, being limber, is extremely swift when propelled by the double-ended paddle.

"On the other hand, the vessel is so cranky that only about two-thirds of the native men have nerve and balance enough to hunt. Only three or four Danes in all Greenland have dared use a kayak."—New York Evening Post.

HANDS RAW WITH ECZEMA.

Suffered For Ten Years—Spread to Body and Limbs—Cured by the Cuticura Remedies.

"I had eczema on my hands for ten years. At first it would break out only in winter. Then it finally came to stay. I had three good doctors to do all they could, but none of them did any good. I then used one box of Cuticura Ointment and three bottles of Cuticura Resolvent, and was completely cured. My hands were raw all over, inside and out, and the eczema was spreading all over my body and limbs. Before I had used one bottle of Cuticura Resolvent, together with the Ointment, my sores were nearly healed over, and by the time I had used the third bottle I was entirely well. I had a good appetite and was fleshier than I ever was. To any one who has any skin or blood disease I would honestly advise them to get the Cuticura Remedies, and get well quicker than all the doctors in the State could cure you. Mrs. M. E. Falin, Speers Ferry, Va., May 19, 1905."

Simple Remedies.

For bee and wasp stings, carbolic acid, soda or ammonia.

For poison ivy, a solution of baking soda or a weak solution of lead. Mackerel brine from the kit in the farm cellar or tomato from the vines will also be found effectual.

For burns, a dressing of saturated soda or equal parts of linseed oil and lime water, vaseline, sweet oil, butter—any bland oil—but on no account glycerin, which is irritating.

For sunburn, cloths wet in saturated soda and soft powders, like flour, laundry starch or cornstarch, dusted on.

For slivers, a fine needle. If too deep in the flesh to be reached by ordinary means, fill a rather wide-mouthed bottle two-thirds full of boiling water and hold the injured spot close over the opening. The suction draws the flesh down and a little additional pressure will take out the splinter.

For a bruise the best treatment is an immediate application of hot fomentations. After that witch hazel, vinegar, and hot water, or alcohol and water, put on with a bandage and often moistened.

TIRED BACKS.

The kidneys have a great work to do in keeping the blood pure. When they get out of order it causes backache, headaches, dizziness, languor and distressing urinary troubles. Keep the kidneys well and all these sufferings will be saved you. Mrs. S. A. Moore, proprietor of a restaurant at Waterville, Me., says: "Before using Doan's Kidney Pills I suffered everything from kidney troubles for a year and a half. I had pain in the back and head, and almost continuous aching in the loins and felt weary all the time. A few doses of Doan's Kidney Pills brought great relief, and I kept on taking them until in a short time I was cured. I think Doan's Kidney Pills are wonderful."

Discriminating Chemical.

A chemical weed killer has been developed or tested by the Wisconsin experiment station in attempts to kill wild mustard mustard, cockle burr, yellow dock, etc. The peculiar thing claimed for this poison is that when sprayed on a growing grain crop infested by weeds it kills the weeks without injury to the cultivated crop. The solution used consists of 100 pounds of iron sulphate disolved in fifty-four gallons of water, which amount will spray an acre.—Farm and Ranch.

Verdict for Dr. Pierce

AGAINST THE

Ladies' Home Journal.

Sending truth after a lie. It is an old maxim that "a lie will travel seven leagues while truth is getting its boots on," and no doubt hundreds of thousands of good people read the unwarranted and malicious attack upon Dr. R. V. Pierce and his "Favorite Prescription" published in the May (1904) number of the Ladies' Home Journal, with its great black display headings, who never saw the humble, groveling retraction, with its inconspicuous heading, published two months later. It was boldly charged in the slanderous and libelous article that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, for the cure of woman's weaknesses and ailments, contained alcohol and other harmful ingredients. Dr. Pierce promptly brought suit against the publishers of the Ladies' Home Journal, for $200,000.00 damages.

Dr. Pierce alleged that Mr. Bok, the editor, maliciously published the article containing such false and defamatory matter with the intent of injuring his business; furthermore, that no alcohol, or other injurious, or habit-forming, drugs are, or ever were, contained in his "Favorite Prescription"; that said medicine is made from native medicinal roots and contains no harmful ingredients whatever, and that Mr. Bok's malicious statements were wholly and absolutely false.

In the retraction printed by said Journal they were forced to acknowledge that they had obtained analyses of "Favorite Prescription," from eminent chemists, all of whom certified that it did not contain alcohol or any of the alleged harmful drugs.

These facts were also proven in the trial of the action in the Supreme Court. But the business of Dr. Pierce was greatly injured by the publication of the libelous article with its great display headings, while hundreds of thousands who read the wickedly defamatory article never saw the humble groveling retraction, set in small type and made as inconspicuous as possible. The matter was, however brought before a jury in the Supreme Court of New York State which promptly rendered a verdict in the Doctor's favor. Thus his traducers came to grief and their base slanders were refuted.

Spoiled a New One.

There was a slightly injured look on Mrs. Compton's face, and her husband hoped that his sister, who had been passing the day, had not attempted to give his wife advice about domestic affairs.

"Did you have a good time with Mildred?" he ventured at last.

"Oh, yes, very nice," and Mrs. Compton sighed. "We shopped together this morning, and this afternoon we went to the organ recital. It sprinkled when we came out, and I had to lend Mildred my umbrella," with a second sigh.

"Well, she'll return it all right," said Mr. Compton, slightly flushed at his wife's tone. "Mildred isn't the forgetful kind."

"It's not that, Henry," said Mrs. Compton, hastily. "It's only that it poured before Mildred got home, long before she could have, and it was my new umbrella. You know how a person feels about a new umbrella, Henry."

The Wizard of Flowers.

The man who was so-called was Anthony Cook, who died in Baltimore recently at the age of ninety. He was born in Germany, where his father was a florist to a royal family. He claimed to have introduced the geranium into the United States, bringing it from his old home, and to have propagated the American Beauty rose. While he loved all flowers, his favorite was the rose, and its cultivation was a specialty in which he accumulated a considerable fortune. He raised about six thousand rose plants a year, and sometimes grafted as many as 16,000 buds in a single season. In good years, when the rose plants flourished, he cut between 50,000 and 60,000 blossoms. With his vast knowledge of flowers, Mr. Cook not only grafted bud with bud, but was cognizant of the sexes, and hybridized them. It was in this manner, according to him, that he propagated the American Beauty. It was his story that he first raised the flower under the name of the Apollona and under that name sold it to a woman enthusiast of Washington. A florist there finally secured an interest, and exported the rose to England, from which country it returned to its native land under its present name.—American Cultivator.

Mica Axle Grease

Makes the Load Lighter

An ounce of grease is sometimes the only difference between profit and loss on a day's teaming. You know you can't afford a dry axle—do you know as well that Mica Axle Grease is the only lubricant you can afford? Mica Axle Grease is the most economical lubricant, because it alone possesses high lubricating property, great adhesive power, and long-wearing quality. Hence, the longest profitable use of your outfit is to be had only when the lubricant is Mica Axle Grease.

Mica Axle Grease contains powdered mica. This forms a smooth hard surface on the axle, and reduces friction, while a specially prepared mineral grease forms an effective cushioning body between axle and box. Mica Axle Grease wears best and longest—one greasing does for a week's teaming. Mica Axle Grease saves horse power—consequently saves feed. Mica Axle Grease is the best lubricant in the world—use it and draw a double load. If your dealer does not keep Mica Axle Grease we will tell you one who does.

Love Will Find a Way.

A new record in elopements was set today when a loving couple escaped from a third-story window. The elopers came from Marengo, a small town near here, the girl being Miss Ruth Wilson and the man giving his name as L. S. Cummings of New York. They were stopped by the police and Miss Wilson spent the night in a third-story room of the St. James' Hotel. Cummings remained up all night playing cards, and when Miss Wilson rang for water at 5 o'clock in the morning he was allowed to take it up to her. He did not return, and when the officer searched the hotel he found his prisoners had flown.—Iowa City Special to Chicago Record-Herald.

A Novel Dog Market.

The Vienna Fancy Dog Club has established a novel dog market. Persons with dogs for sale are invited to send the animals to the clubrooms every Wednesday, where they will be exhibited. Each animal will be examined by a veterinary surgeon, and also appraised by experts. Purchasers can therefore be assured that the dogs are quite free from disease and also worth the price demanded. And all this service will be performed entirely free of charge; neither buyer nor seller will be asked to contribute a penny. The club will bear all the expenses, as its only object in instituting the market is to promote the breding and traffic in dogs of good race.

NOTICE

To the Churches of the Chilton County Association—Greeting:

I have sent blank associational letters to the clerks of all the churches of this Association except two, viz: Pleasant Hill and Thorsby, not knowing the names of the clerks, I could not send the letters. If the clerks will write me, I will gladly send them. The Association meets at Pilgrim's Rest, near Pletcher on M. & O. Oct. 17 and 18. I earnestly hope that the churches will use the blanks, send up a full quota of messengers and endeavor to do all they can for the great work fostered by our denomination.

P. G. MANESS, Mod.

When a horse is overworked it lies down and in other ways declares its inability to go further, you would consider it criminal to use force. Many a man of humane impulses, who would not willingly harm a kitten, is guilty of cruelty where his own stomach is concerned. Overdriven, overworked, when what it needs is something that will digest the food eaten and help the stomach to recuperate. Something like Kodol For Dyspepsia that is sold by Upchurch Drug co.

Editor Banner—Will you allow me space in your valuable paper to say a few words as stock law in beat five and the post office at Verona seems to be the issue of the day. But did you see the Kid's statement in the Union? He is a sharp little kid, he is well posted in regard to Mr. Gulledge's business, but he wants to take lessons in interest under Mr. Griffin, going to lending money, I guess. If ships were selling at fifteen cents a hundred I guess a little kid would be allowed to holler hallon at the captain. But that bought Legislature. Didn't he speak well for his party? I wonder who represented Chilton county at that time? Oh hush, boys, they will call us cheap Johns, they will say we sell like goats—40 cents per head, and they will think of you keep calling Gulledge a money king, he is able to buy the whole bunch. But at questions in interest is not all, he is now knocking at the door of Mr Gulledge's law office since the Republican primary has passed and gone; he wishes to know some points in law governing the same Knock, and it shall be opened unto you. Come again, Kid, I have many things to say unto you, but you can't bear them now.

I am going to see if ——— is sober today. Oh, my! my! did you see the letters in the Banner last week? See the list of witnesses. By the mouth of two or three witnesses all things shall be established. According to Mr Latham's statement Mr. Fitts speaks as well for his party as did the Kid. Enough whiskey drinkers in Chilton county to elect him Probate Judge if he was disposed to run for it. Where is Chilton's prohibition? Who is the majority of the voters, are they drunkards or church members? Who authorized him to make such a statement? Did you ever hear of a prohibition county that the majority of the voters were whiskey jugs. What shall we say then, continue in political prejudice and partyism that justice may abound. I think it is time we were looking after our own interest when you begin to talk about bought legislation. We should send a man that is not for sale, a man that is not jumping and leaping from party to party just for office sake. How about J. O? He is a good boy. Yes, but his mind changes so fast he may be a Socialist by now, though he may be called blessed. I will ring off with best wishes to all.

Sour Stomach

No appetite, loss of strength, nervousness, headache, constipation, bad breath, general debility, sour risings, and catarrh of the stomach are all due to indigestion. Kodol cures indigestion. This new discovery represents the natural juices of digestion as they exist in a healthy stomach, combined with the greatest known tonic and reconstructive properties. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure does not only cure indigestion and dyspepsia, but this famous remedy cures all stomach troubles by cleansing, purifying, sweetening and strengthening the mucous membranes lining the stomach.

Mr. S. S. Ball, of Ravenswood, W. Va., says:—"I was troubled with sour stomach for twenty years. Kodol cured me and we are now using it in milk for baby."

IN MEMORIAM.

On the 8th of September, the death waves overtook our beloved friend, Mr. Hudson Hosey, and wafted away his lovely spirit. While on his way home from work he fell from a hand car and was instantly killed without speaking a word. A lovely wife age 16 and one sweet little girl survive him. He was happily united to Miss Essie Klinner about two years ago and lived a few days over two years of happy life together.

Mr. Hosey was quite young to depart this life, yet God in His goodness and mercy saw fit to call him away while in the bloom of life. God surely had a purpose in calling him at so early an age, yet God doeth all things well. He joined the Baptist church a few weeks previous to his death and lived a constant member until he was called from this unfriendly world, into the realms of eternal glory. He leaves a father, mother and a number of brothers and sisters and relatives and countless host of friends to mourn his loss. His face always bore a good expression and lovely smile which seemed to scatter sunshine among his many associates; to know him was to love him. Dear friends, we know not many consoling words to speak to soothe your aching hearts, we can only say: weep not, dear friends, he has just passed over the river to await your coming, remember that he cannot come to us, we can only go to him. We know he will be sadly missed by his many associates but we are taught that time is short that we will soon cross the river to the same shore to which he has gone, where sorrow and trouble are unknown and parting is no more.

He was laid to rest at Sardis cemetery on the 9th day of September. Bro. Till Deason preached the funeral.

Good-bye proud world, I'm going home,
Thou art not my friend I am not thine
For long through weary crowds I roam
A river ark on the ocean brine.
For long I'm tossed like the ocean foam
But now proud world I'm going home

TYNER'S DYSPEPSIA REMEDY.
Many Have Dyspepsia and don't Know It
Read Symptoms.

Do you belch up wind? Do you taste your food for an hour or more after eating? Do you see specks or haze before your eyes? Are you pale and haggard? Does your heart flutter? Are you dizzy at times? Do you have pains in side or back? Do you have risings or pimples on the skin? Are you low spirited? Is there a sour taste in your stomach? Is your breath bad? If so you have Dyspepsia, and it is a dangerous condition, don't delay, but take Tyner's Dyspepsia Remedy as directed on label. It is made for just such troubles and symptoms. Tyner's Dyspepsia remedy removes acids from the stomach, strengthens weak stomachs, helps digest your food, stops all achs and pains, stops fluttering of the heart, (sometimes called heart disease.) By making the food digest, new blood is made and all pimples disappear. Tyner's Dyspepsia Remedy, sold by druggists, 50c a bottle. Money refunded if it fails to cure. Sold in Clanton by Florence Drug Store; call or write; remedy sent by express.

MAKE MONEY.

Here is an interesting study: Make out a list of all the people you know, and estimate the amount of money each one earns in a year. Total it up The amount will be surprisingly large. Now, of all those people, only the few who SAVE SOMETHING really MAKE anything at all. Simply earning money isn't making it; what slips through the earner's fingers is finally "made" by somebody else. Don't forget to count yourself in on the list, and if you are not "making" money, begin now to save with us. One dollar will open your bank account.

Lawley, Oct. 13, 1906

Editor Banner—In last week's Union I noticed an article signed by Crocket Fountain, in which he states that last April he received a letter 47 days after it was post marked at Lawley. In justice to myself, I wish to say that I was not postmaster at that time. I did not get the office until June 12, 1906 I attend strictly to my own business; try to treat everybody right. No letter is kept in this office overtime In regard to changing the R F D route here, I had nothing whatever to do with it. A petition properly signed was sent up for that purpose. Neither am I related to Mr. Arthur D. Latham except by marriage. Kinship should not count when it comes to truth and honesty. So saying I am done with the controversy.

CLANTON, ALA.

According to the recent report of the British consul for New Caledonia, the indigenous Canaques are rapidly becoming an extinct race. Owing to the inroads of disease, more especially the more virulent maladies of phthisis and leprosy, combined with the abuse of alcoholic liquors, the natives are becoming greatly degenerated, and the people do not now numb more than 17,000 souls in all. Although the disposal of spirits is forbidden to the natives, they yet obtain enormous quantities by surreptitious methods, and it kills them very quickly. Moreover, the children now born are for the most part very stunted and seldom attain adult age. The consul is of the opinion that it will not be many years before the Canaques become totally extinct.

It is to be hoped that persons with a ghastly taste for joking may in some way enjoy their merry jests after they have passed from this sphere of humor. A Toronto woman, now deceased, played a joke on heirs which she could not by any possibility hope to enjoy while living. While on a trip through Canada six years ago she deposited a box with a Toronto trust company for safekeeping. She mentioned it in her will; and after her death the lawyers representing claimants to the estate gathered from afar to witness the opening of the package. It was elaborately sealed, and contained merely a pair of corsets. There has been much amusement over the discomfiture of lawyers and heirs. Who will say after this that woman has no sense of humor?

There is a tree on the island of Cos, in the Aegean Sea, under whose branches, it is said, both St. Luke and St. Paul rested. It is a huge plane tree, eighteen yards in circumference, and over two thousand years old. It is surrounded by a podium, or raised platform, breast high, doubtless built to support the trunk of the tree after it had become hollow and weak from age. The lower branches are still well preserved, and have been shored up by pieces of antique columns, over the upper ends of which the branches have grown like caps, in consequence of the pressure of their own weight. Close by the tree is a solid marble seat, which is said to be the chair of Hippocrates, the father of medicine, and it is supposed that he taught the art of healing from that seat. He was born at Cos, 460 B. C. This gives a clew to the age of the celebrated plane tree, which must be considerably more than two thousand years old. The Sultan has the tree carefully guarded against the depredations of relic hunters.

ALABAMA GLEANINGS.

Items of Interest Gathered as They Transpire Over the Entire State.

Bucket Shops Win Out.

Birmingham, Ala.—Judge Feagin, of the inferior criminal court, in the case of C. H. Cothran and other managers of wire brokerage houses, who have been contesting the validity of the new city ordinance excluding all forms of wire brokerage houses from operating in Birmingham, rendered a decision in favor of the brokers. The case was submitted on an agreed statement of facts. The exchange men contended that the city had no power to restrain a legal business which the supreme court of the United States had held valid. It is said that the city attorney is undecided as to whether he will appeal from Judge Feagin's decision or seek to get an adequate law passed by the next legislature.

Depot Caught Fire.

Wetumpka, Ala.—What might have been a disastrous fire if it had not been discovered in time occurred at the depot.

There were several hundred bales of cotton, as well as a number of barrels of rosin, on the platform awaiting cars for shipment. In some manner fire broke out in this cotton near the rosin, and was making considerable headway when discovered. Several bales of the cotton and a barrel of rosin was afire. The fire had not burned its way through the barrel to the rosin when discovered, which fortunately prevented a serious conflagration.

Tendered to Smith.

Selma, Ala.—The chairmanship of the campaign committee of the democratic party of Alabama has been tendered to J. Craig Smith by Chairman Mallory, of the state committee. Mr. Mallory returned to Selma Saturday from Montgomery, where Friday night, after a telephone conference with Mr. Comer, he offered the campaign chairmanship to Mr. Smith, who it is known is Mr. Comer's son-in-law.

Reunion at Richmond.

Mobile, Ala.—Gen. William E. Mickle, adjutant-general, makes official announcement that the seventeenth annual reunion of the United Confederate Veterans will be held in the city of Richmond, Va., on the 30th and 31st of May and the 1st, 2nd and 3d of June. The local committees, composed of the most influential citizens, are already at work, and they promise that this reunion shall far surpass all heretofore held.

Building Bonded Warehouse.

Decatur, Ala.—The Farmers' Union will commence work at once on a large cotton bonded warehouse at Hartselle, fourteen miles south of this city. The building wil be of concrete and will cost $7,000. It will be used for the farmers to store their cotton in. Farmers' unions have been organized all over this portion of the state. The farmers are of the opinion that by organizing they can control the price of cotton.

Hill's Houses Burn.

Gadsden, Ala.—Two houses of State Superintendent of Education Hill, on South Sixth street, were destroyed by fire and two others were badly damaged. The loss was about $3,000 and was partly covered by insurance. The occupants of the houses lost considerable household goods. A stiff wind was blowing at the time, and this, with the poor water pressure made the work of the firemen very difficult.

Confederates at a Barbecue.

Decatur, Ala.—An old-fashioned barbecue was enjoyed by the old ex-Confederate soldiers, given by Joe Wheeler Chaper, Daughters of the Confederacy. Speeches were delivered by Capt. Dan Walden, Maj. W. H. Francis and Mr. Cook. Over a dozen crosses of honor were bestowed on the old soldiers by the Daughters of the Confederacy.

Mrs. Wade Stricken.

Montgomery, Ala.—Mrs. Mary Jane Wade, widow of the late Collin B. Wade, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. T. W. Cargill, on Park View avenue, as the result of a paralytic stroke.

Delegates to Road Convention.

Florence, Ala.—Probate Judge George W. Porter has named the following county at the good roads convention to be held in Birmingham: Judge J. J. Mitchell, Lee Ashcroft, J. E. F. Westmoreland, A. B. Camper, H. E. Mooers, R. C. Smith, A. L. Phillips, C. H. Hamm, J. T. Reeder, J. A. Lentz, H. A. Killen.

Sends Bullet Through Brain.

Bristol, Tenn.—Dr. Connelly Church, a prominent physician, 35 years of age, committed suicide at his home at Mountain City, Tenn., sending a pistol bullet through his brain. Excessive drinking, followed by a divorce from his handsome young wife, was the cause of the deed. He was prominently connected, being a grandson of the late R. R. Butler, who was for ten years a congressman from this of Tennessee.

New Corporations.

Montgomery, Ala.—A certificate of incorporation was filed with the secretary of state by the Osment Grocery Company, of West End, Birmingham. The new company begins operations with a capitalization of $2,500, the incorporators being C. E. Osment, Mary O. Osment and J. Milton Osment.

The Muscle Shoals Hydro-Electric Power Company, the $1,000,000 corporation formed in Montgomery for the purpose of developing the water power of the Tennessee river, filed its certificate of incorporation with the secretary of state. The names appended to the papers as incorporators included Frank S. Washburn, Charles H. Baker, William H. Lindsay, J. W. Worthington and Massey Wilson.

Court at Greensboro.

Greensboro, Ala.—The fall term of the Hale county circuit court convened here Monday, with Judge Coleman, of Birmingham, presiding, Judge Miller having exchanged circuits with Judge Coleman.

Judge Coleman gave a specially strong charge to the grand jury. Solicitor Thompson was at his post. The civil docket being docket of. Judge Coleman returned to Birmingham, after many a cordial greeting from friends here in his old home.

Judge Miller will take up the criminal docket next week.

Money for Lauderdale Schools.

Florence, Ala.—The Lauderdale county board of education finished its labors and adjournea after apportioning $13,000 among the schools of the county, $1,200 more than last year. Of this sum $11,241.06 goes to the country schools, and the balance to the city schools. The number of white children in the county outside of Florence is 5,625; colored, 1,581. Total, white and colored, 7,206. The average term last year for the country schools was five months, and this will be lengthened in proportion to the increased funds.

Court at Columbiana.

Columbiana, Ala.—The civil docket in the circuit court was gone through with last Thursday, and Judge Pelham and Solicitar Barr went to their homes.

The grand jury made its final report just before the adjournment of court. Their report showed an investigation of 142 cases, and forty indictments were found. Twelve of these were capital felonies.

Sues for Divorce.

Montgomery, Ala.—Divorce proceedings have been filed in the city court in equity by Thomas M. Barnett, of Chilton county, against his wife, Mrs. Jessie Forbes Barnett, who resides in Montgomery.

Hill Will Speak.

Scottsboro, Ala.—Hon. I. W. Hill, state superintendent of education, has appointments to address the citizens in several different towns in Jackson county this month. He will address the people at Scottsboro October 17, at night.

Twenty Men Burned.

Chicago, Ill.—A terrific explosion, in which fully twenty men are reported to have been injured, occurred at the plant of the Illinois Steel Company, South Chicago.

Tons of molten metal were scattered in all directions, and a huge converter was wrecked.

The victims were taken to the company's private hospital. Seventeen were able to proceed to their homes with th assistance of companions. Some of them were struck by flying missiles and others were burned or scalded.

The explosion was the second within a week, and was caused by some foreign matter getting into the converter.

Hearst Will Use Phonograph.

New York.—Both the phonograph and moving picture machine will be called to the aid of the democratic candidate for governor in an attempt to have his voice heard and figure seen in every town and hamlet of the state. Records of several of Mr. Hearst's campaign speeches already have been made and films for the picture machaines depicting the candidate in various attitudes are now being prepared for use.

It is expected they will be completed by next Wednesday, it was announced at Tammany Hall speakers' bureau. The plan, as outlined, is to have a large number of machines and to have them operated before gatherings in all parts of the state between next Wednesday and the close of the campaign.

Mrs. "Jeff." Davis Reported Better.

New York.—Mrs. Jefferson Davis, who has been ill at the Majestic Hotel for the past few days, was reported to be better.

Can't Evade Law.

Washington, D. C.—Financial New York, even financial London, is exercised over the story from Findlay, O., that one of the Standard Oil concerns is owned by a London holding concern.

In two cases the department of justice has demonstrated that the foreign holding company is an ineffectual means to evade the law of this country.

MRS. JEFFERSON DAVIS IS DEAD

After Lingering Illness in Apartments at Hotel Majestic.

DIES IN NEW YORK.

Death Due to Pneumonia Induced by Severe Cold—Surrounded by Relatives.

New York.—Mrs. Jefferson Davis, widow of the President of the Confederacy, who had been ill for a week at the Hotel Majestic in this city, died at 10:25 o'clock Tuesday night.

Death was due to pneumonia induced by a severe cold which Mrs. Davis contracted upon her return from the Adirondacks, where she had spent the summer months. Although grave fears were felt from the first, Mrs. Davis' wonderful vitality, which brought her safely through a similar attack a year ago, gave hope of ultimate recovery until Tuesday night, when a decided change for the worse was evident and the attending physicians announced that the end was near. It was then believed that Mrs. Davis could not survive the night, but she rallied slightly during the early hours.

Shortly after 7 o'clock she had a sinking spell, and Rev. Nathan A. Seagle, rector of St. Stephens Protestant Episcopal church, was hurriedly summoned to give religious comfort to the patient in her last moments of consciousness. The clergyamn remained some time. An hour later it was announced that Mrs. Davis had lapsed into a state of coma. The period of unconsciousness continued to the end.

At the bedside when death came were Mrs. Addison Hayes, of Newark N. J., the only surviving daughter of Mrs. Davis; Jefferson Davis Hayes, a grandson, who is a student at Princeton University; Mrs. Charles E. Bateson, a niece; Dr. and Mrs. Gustav Webb, the latter a granddaughter, and Dr. Robert H. Wylie, who with Dr. Webb cared for Mrs. Davis throughout her illness.

J. Addison Hayes, husband of Mrs. Davis' only living child, had been summoned from Colorado Springs and was hurrying across the continent when a message announcing Mrs. Davis' death intercepted him. Mrs. Davis had for some years made her home in this city, where she had a wide circle of friends. Throughout her illness solicitous inquiries in regard to her conditions were continually made at her apartments.

.. the Majestic it was said that the body would be taken to Richmond, Va., on Thursday. Definite plans for the funeral had not been made Tuesday night, but it is understood services would be held here by her pastor, and it is definitely known that the body will repose beside that of the late President of the Confederacy in Richmond.

Four New Cases.

Havana.—Four new cases of yellow fever were reported in Havana, making a total of eight, against the largest previous total, six. No more new cases have been reported throughout the rest of the island and there is no special anxiety regarding the situation.

Peary Despaired Of.

New York.—The middle of October having been reached, the time-limit set for receiving news from the Peary Arctic expedition, hope was practically abandoned of hearing this year from the band of explorers who started from this port fifteen months ago.

The first word from Peary was expected to come to Morris K. Jesup, the principal backer of the expedition. At his office it was said that the hope of hearing from the explorer this year was abandoned.

Three Workmen Killed.

Roanoke, Va.—Three workmen employed at a quarry near Roanoke were killed by the premature explosion of a quantity of dynamite.

The dead, white: Wm. L. Switzer, Lithia, Va., aged 35, unmarried; John T. Purcell, Roanoke, aged 29, unmarried. Colored: Melvin Pollard, Lithia, Va., aged 25, married.

The men were thawing the dynamite in front of a fire and it is thought one of them kicked a stick of the explosive in the fire. Their bodies were horribly mangled. Other men at the works were not injured.

Storm Warning.

Washington.—The weather bureau has issued a storm warning announcing a disturbance over the Atlantic coast southeast of Hatteras, a second disturbance over southern Texas, and a third northwest of Montana. High winds are probable along the Atlantic coast from southern New England to the Carolinas. Storm warnings are displayed on the Atlantic coast from Cape Cod to Florida, and on the Pacific coast from Eureka northward.

SAM JONES DEAD.

Noted Evangelist Died in Berth on Sleeping Car Monday.

Little Rock.—The Rev. Sam P. Jones, the well known evangelist of Cartersville, Ga., died Monday of heart failure in a sleeping car on train No. 4 of the Rock Island railroad near Perry, Ark. Mr. Jones had been conducting a most successful revival at Oklahoma City, I. T., and left there for his home in Georgia. He desired to attend a family reunion, it being the fifty-ninth anniversary of his birth. Mrs. Jones and his daughters, Mrs. Annie Pyron and Miss Julia Jones, were with him when he passed away.

The body was embalmed and shipped to Cartersville, where interment was made. The funeral services were conducted by the Rev. George Stuart, the Rev. J. A. Bowen, of Mississippi, and the Rev. Holcomb.

Birmingham Fair.

Birmingham.—The annual fair in Birmingham opened Monday and will be in operation for a week.

Despite the cool weather there was quite a number of people out. All the buildings are well filled and some nice exhibits are to be seen. The racing program began Moneay.

A large number of good trotting and pacing horses are here for the event and some fine sport was presented.

The horse show was held every evening during the week and was well attended. The registration for home-comers showed quite a number of people in the city. The formal home-comers' exercises took place Tuesday at noon at the fair grounds. Mayor Ward delivered the address of welcome in behalf of the city.

Governor Jelks delivered the address of welcome in behalf of the state. Judge J. J. Banks, of Denver, Col., a former resident of Birmingham, made the reply for the home-comers. Mr. T. V. Boardman sang the home-coming song, which was awarded the prize. The song was composed by Miss Heeb and is a splendid piece of work.

Kopp's military band, of Cincinnati, rendered national airs and a specially prepared home-coming march.

A booth for registering was opened in the lobby of the city hall and every bona fide home-comer was given a pretty badge to be worn during the week.

Greensboros' Bad Fire.

Greensboro.—About 11 o'clock a. m. almost a panic was created here when it was found that the warehouse of Blunt & Ward, at the railway station, was on fire. The fire was caused by sparks from the engine of a gravel train coming by at the rate of thirty miles an hour. A thousand bales of cotton, a small store and a negro house were consumed in a short time. A number of bales inside the warehouse ready for shipment were saved. The entire loss is estimated at about $60,000. Blunt & Ward's $10,000 warehouse is partially covered by insurance. Most of the cotton destroyed was insured.

Awarded $500.

Montgomery.—Because she was taken to Cuthbert, Ga., from Montgomery, instead of her destination, Andalusia, Mrs. F. E. Ashley was awarded $500 damages against the Central Railway of Georgia by a city court jury. The railway company will appeal the case to the supreme court.

Campbell Makes Bond.

Gadsden.—Marion Campbell, of Mountainboro, who has been confined in the Birmingham jail in default of $5,000 bond upon a charge of operating an illicit distillery and conspiring to assault United States officers, has succeeded in making bond and has been released.

Street Railway to Issue Stocks.

Gadsden.—The stockholders of the Alabama City, Gadsden and Attalla Railway Company met in this city for the purpose of securing the consent of the owners of a majority of the capital stock to the proposed issue of $300,000 in thirty-year 5 per cent gold bonds. A resolution was introduced and passed authorizing the proposed issue and instructing the secretary to file same for record. The money will be used for paying for a power house and car barn now under construction and several additional lines of street railroad, including one to the top of Lookout mountain.

Flagman's Escape Miraculous.

Jonesboro, Ga.—Freight train No. 95 at a point almost in the center of the city ran into the rear of train No. 33, completely telescoping the caboose and demolishing four cars.

The flagman on train No. 95 had a miraculous escape from death, but was only slightly injured, and was sent to the hospital at Macon.

The track was cleared and traffic resumed.

Line From Statesboro to Atlanta.

Atlanta, Ga.—A charter has been granted the Savannah, Statesboro and Western Railroad Company to construct a line 210 miles long, from Statesboro to Atlanta. The authorized capital is $1,000,000 in common stock, with the privilege of issuing $50,000 of preferred stock. This will give a new line to Savannah, connecting at Statesboro with the Savannah and Statesboro road.

Supreme Court Rules Adversely in Senator Burton's Case.

Burton Declares He Will Not Ask Pardon or Accept Any Clemency If It Is Offered.

Washington.—The supreme court of the United States denied the petition of former United States Senator Burton, of Kansas, for a rehearing in the case in which he is under sentence of imprisonment and fine on the charge of accepting an attorney's fee in a case in which the government was interested while he was serving as senator.

The effect of the decision will be the immediate imprisonment of Burton, unless his attorneys devise some other means of postponing the execution of the sentence.

There was no formal announcement of the decision of the Burton case in open court, the chief justice simply handing a brief memorandum to the clerk of the court just before adjourning.

The case of Senator Burton has been before the court since 1903, when he was indicted in St. Louis on the charge of accepting a fee for representing the Rialto Grain Company of that city, in an eoffrt to debar it from the use of the United States mails.

He was found guilty and sentenced to serve six months in jail and pay a fine of $2,500. On appeal to the supreme court the decision was reversed on a technicality and a second trial was ordered. The second verdict was identical with the first and it was affirmed by the supreme court.

This affirmation was announced just before the close of the term of court in May last. The motion for rehearing was then filed. It was claimed in Burton's behalf that the court had not had the real facts before it in considering the case.

Bailie Waggoner, of this city, one of Mr. Burton's attorneys said that he had not up to the present time received any communication from the former senator regarding his wishes in the matter, but said that Mr. Burton had previously expressed to him the wish to begin serving his sentence immediately if the supreme court should finally decide against him.

Mr. Waggoner expressed it as his opinion that the mandate of the court would be sent by the supreme court immediately to the district court at St. Louis, in which case it would be possible for Burton to begin serving his sentence some time this week.

Will Increase Salaries.

New York.—An important announcement was made in this city by First Assistant Postmaster General Frank H. Hitchcock, which will bring joy to the thousands of postal employes in the United States.

It was to the effect that in the postal estimate for the next fiscal year to be submitted by the postoffice department to the treasury department a radical change will be made in the regulations affecting salaries. Betterment in pay involving the entire postal system of the United States will be advised, Mr. Hitchcock said. The statement followed a prolonged conference between Mr. Hitchcock and Postmaster Wilcox, of New York.

New Orleans Protests.

New Orleans.—A protest against the decision of the Panama canal commission, stipulating half rates for contractors, supplies and employes to Panama over steamship lines which operate almost exclusively out of New York and San Francisco was adopted by the directors of the New Orleans Progressive Union.

The protest was based on the argument that New Orleans would be unable to meet the competition of other cities in shipping to Panama.

Entombed in Mine.

Durham, Eng.—As the result of an explosion in the Wingate colliery here, twenty-five miners were killed and fifty are temporarily entombed. It is fortunate that only a small part of the thousand men employed in the mine were down when the explosion took place. The cause is supposed to have been fire damp. The explosion was of terrific force and in Wingate town many windows were broken.

Hearing Is Continued.

Wetumpka.—The preliminary hearing of the Rigsbys, charged with the murder of W. L. McCain, which was set for Tuesday, has been postponed until Friday.

Discriminate Against Americans.

St. Johns, N. F.—The colonial ministry has refused the American tug Potomac, which is now at the islands, free entry for stores, in spite of the fact that this concession is accorded French warships in these waters. The Potomac has on board H. B. Alexander, chief of division of statistics and methods of the bureau of fisheries for the department of commerce and labor, which is studying Newfoundland fisheries dispute.

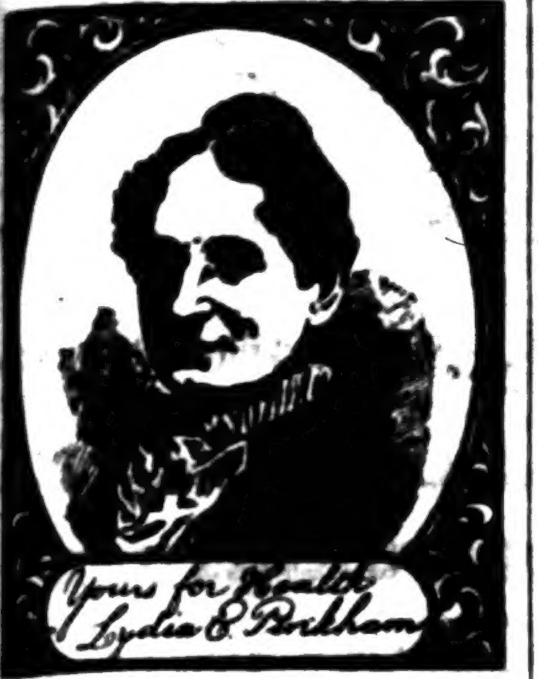
SKETCH OF THE LIFE OF LYDIA E. PINKHAM

And a True Story of How the Vegetable Compound Had Its Birth and How the "Panic of '73" Caused It to be Offered for Public Sale in Drug Stores.

This remarkable woman, whose maiden name was Estes, was born in Lynn, Mass., February 9th, 1819, coming from a good old Quaker family. For some years she taught school, and became known as a woman of an alert and investigating mind, an earnest seeker after knowledge, and above all, possessed of a wonderfully sympathetic nature.



In 1843 she married Isaac Pinkham, a builder and real estate operator, and their early married life was marked by prosperity and happiness. They had four children, three sons and a daughter.

In those good old fashioned days it was common for mothers to make their own home medicines from roots and herbs, nature's own remedies—calling in a physician only in specially urgent cases. By tradition and experience many of them gained a wonderful knowledge of the curative properties of the various roots and herbs.

Mrs. Pinkham took a great interest in the study of roots and herbs, their characteristics and power over disease. She maintained that just as nature so bountifully provides in the harvest-fields and orchards vegetable foods of all kinds; so, if we but take the pains to find them, in the roots and herbs of the field there are remedies expressly designed to cure the various ills and weaknesses of the body, and it was her pleasure to search these out, and prepare simple and effective medicines for her own family and friends.

Chief of these was a rare combination of the choicest medicinal roots and herbs found best adapted for the cure of the ills and weaknesses peculiar to the female sex, and Lydia E. Pinkham's friends and neighbors learned that her compound relieved and cured and it became quite popular among them.

All this so far was done freely, without money and without price, as a labor of love.

But in 1873 the financial crisis struck Lynn. Its length and severity were too much for the large real estate interests of the Pinkham family, as this class of business suffered most from fearful depression, so when the Centennial year dawned it found their property swept away. Some other source of income had to be found.

At this point Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was made known to the world.

The three sons and the daughter, with their mother, combined forces to restore the family fortune. They argued that the medicine which was so good for their woman friends and neighbors was equally good for the women of the whole world.

The Pinkhams had no money, and little credit. Their first laboratory was the kitchen, where roots and herbs were steeped on the stove, gradually filling a gross of bottles. Then came the question of selling it, for always before they had given it away freely. They hired a job printer to run off some pamphlets setting forth the merits of the medicine, now called Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and these were distributed by the Pinkham sons in Boston, New York, and Brooklyn.

The wonderful curative properties of the medicine were, to a great extent, self-advertising, for whoever used it recommended it to others, and the demand gradually increased.

In 1877, by combined efforts the family had saved enough money to commence newspaper advertising and from that time the growth and success of the enterprise were assured, until to-day Lydia E. Pinkham and her Vegetable Compound have become household words everywhere, and many tons of roots and herbs are used annually in its manufacture.

Lydia E. Pinkham herself did not live to see the great success of this work. She passed to her reward years ago, but not till she had provided means for continuing her work as effectively as she could have done it herself.

During her long and eventful experience she was ever methodical in her work and she was always careful to preserve a record of every case that came to her attention. The case of every sick woman who applied to her for advice—and there were thousands—received careful study, and the details, including symptoms, treatment and results were recorded for future reference, and to-day these records, together with hundreds of thousands made since, are available to sick women the world over, and represent a vast collaboration of information regarding the treatment of woman's ills, which for authenticity and accuracy can hardly be equaled in any library in the world.

With Lydia E. Pinkham worked her daughter-in-law, the present Mrs. Pinkham. She was carefully instructed in all her hard-won knowledge, and for years she assisted her in her vast correspondence.

To her hands naturally fell the direction of the work when its originator passed away. For nearly twenty-five years she has continued it, and nothing in the work shows when the first Lydia E. Pinkham dropped her pen, and the present Mrs. Pinkham, now the mother of a large family, took it up. With woman assistants, some as capable as herself, the present Mrs. Pinkham continues this great work, and probably from the office of no other person have so many women been advised how to regain health. Sick women, this advice is "Yours for Health" freely given if you only write to ask for it.

Such is the history of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; made from simple roots and herbs; the one great medicine for women's ailments, and the fitting monument to the noble woman whose name it bears.

The Exploitation of the West.

Five years ago we who lived in the far west were wondering when the marvellous resources of one-third of the United States would be discovered and exploited. To-day we awaken to find our forest stripped, and the places where we pitched our tents, built our smudges, and fried our bacon and game made desolate by the steam saw and the freight car. The rivers where we speared our salmon and the rushing waters of the northwest where we cast our seins have been made to fill the labelled tins of highly capitalized syndicates, until the preservation of the "sock-eye," the most delicious of all salmon, has become the subject of interstate conference. The immense plains, whose phenomenal productivity made legends of our "Mussel Sloughs" and our "Yuba Dams," are being turned into irrigated plaisances, into trolley-strewn highways, into the dense social conditions of Ohio, Iowa and Illinois.—Reader.

London's population doubles in about forty-five years.

The funny man in some western paper tells of a farmer who hired a city boy. One morning he told the boy to go and salt the calf. The boy took a quart of salt and rubbed it all over the calf, working it into the hair. A lot of colts scented the salt and hunted the calf up. They licked all the hair off the poor calf's back. The farmer tried to catch the calf to wash it, but the calf, thinking he wanted to lick, too, ran through a hole in the fence and disappeared down the road.

A Lost Chance.

The children at the Neighborhood club were telling their embroidery and sewing teacher of a little girl who they thought would be much benefited by a course of settlement instruction.

"She's kind of simple, Nora is," said one of Nora's acquaintances. "There's a lot of things she ought to learn. She doesn't know how to take the best advantages, Miss Marvin."

"How do you mean, Maggie?" asked the teacher, looking with inward amusement at the sober young face bent over a somewhat grimy square of linen.

"Well, like this," said Maggie, raising her eyes for a moment. "Yesterday she was with me into the provision store, and she was sniffing away at the pineapples, that you can smell any time, and there was a piece of venison, that the man hardly ever has, just behind her back."

At Morgantown, N. Y., one of the sights witnessed in the harvest field of Jacob Hartz last season was his father, Moses Hartz, who although eighty-seven years of age, worked in the field binding wheat. He worked leisurely and stood it very well. The family is noted for logevity. Elias Hartz, of Reading, the goose-bone weather prognosticator, is a brother.

INTERESTING CONTEST.

Heavy Cost of Unpaid Postage.

One of the most curious contests ever before the public was conducted by many thousand persons under the offer of the Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., of Battle Creek, Mich., for prizes of 31 boxes of gold and 300 greenbacks to those making the most words out of the letters Y-I-O-Grape-Nuts.

The contest was started in February, 1906, and it was arranged to have the prizes awarded on Apr. 30, 1906.

When the public announcement appeared many persons began to form the words from these letters, sometimes the whole family being occupied evenings, a combination of amusement and education.

After a while the lists began to come in to the Postum Office, and before long the volume grew until it required wagons to carry the mail. Many of the contestants were thoughtless enough to send their lists with insufficient postage and for a period it cost the Company from twenty-five to fifty-eight and sixty dollars a day to pay the unpaid postage.

Young ladies, generally those who had graduated from the high school, were employed to examine these lists and count the correct words. Webster's Dictionary was the standard, and each list was very carefully corrected, except those which fell below 8000, for it soon became clear that nothing below that could win. Some of the lists required the work of a young lady for a solid week on each individual list. The work was done very carefully and accurately, but the Company had no idea, at the time the offer was made, that the people would respond so generally, and they were compelled to fill every available space in the offices with these young lady examiners, and notwithstanding they worked steadily, it was impossible to complete the examination until Sept. 29, over six months after the prizes should have been awarded.

This delay caused a great many inquiries and naturally created some dissatisfaction. It has been thought best to make this report in practically all of the newspapers in the United States and many of the magazines in order to make clear to the people the conditions of the contest.

Many lists contained enormous numbers of words which, under the rules, had to be eliminated. "Pegger" would count, "Peggers" would not. Some lists contained over 50,000 words, the great majority of which were cut out. The largest lists were checked over two and in some cases three times to insure accuracy

The $100.00 gold prize was won by L. D. Reese, 1227-15th St., Denver, Colo., with 9941 correct words. The highest $10.00 gold prize went to S. K. Fraser, Lincoln, Pa., with 9921 correct words.

A complete list of the 331 winners with their home addresses will be sent to any contestant enquiring on a postal card.

Be sure and give name and address clearly.

This contest has cost the Co. many thousand dollars, and probably has not been a profitable advertisement, nevertheless, perhaps some who had never before tried Grape-Nuts food have been interested in the contest, and from trial of the food have been shown its wonderful rebuilding powers.

It teaches in a practical manner that scientifically gathered food elements can be selected from the field grains which nature will use for rebuilding the nerve centres and brain in a way that is unmistakable to users of Grape-Nuts.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR OCTOBER 21.

Subject: The Parable of the Talents, Matt. xxv., 14-30—Golden Text, Prov. xxviii., 20—Memory Verse, 21—Topic: Fidelity to Duty.

I. The servants receive the talents (vs. 14-18). 14. "A man." Christ represents Himself as a man going into another country, or heaven. "Called his own servants." The outward framework of the parable lies in the Eastern way of dealing with property in the absence of the owner; the more primitive way being for the absentee to make his slaves his agents. The apostles, ministers, all true Christians, are the servants of Christ. "His goods." The "goods" are the Lord's; all we have belongs to God.

15. "Five talents." The International Bible gives the value of a talent of silver in the Old Testament period at $1920, and in the New Testament period at $1146. The talents represent all of those peculiar gifts which God has given us in this world. "His several ability." The slaves of the Greeks and Romans were often men of great attainments and skill.

16. "Then." "Straightway." R. V. We are here taught a lesson in promptness. "Went and traded." We now see the use that the servants made of their master's goods. Two out of the three improved upon the trust committed to them. "Other five." He who receives much from God must make an improvement upon the whole, while of the one who receives little but little is required.

18. "Digged in the earth." This is the peculiar temptation of the man who has little ability, and he sullenly retires from a service in which he cannot shine and play a conspicuous part. "Hid his lord's money." He did not embezzle or squander it, but he hid it. How sad to bury one's talent!

II. Faithful service rewarded (vs. 19-23). But while this no doubt refers to His second coming, yet there are many comings — in the great crises of life, in times of trouble, and especially in the hour of death. 19. "A long time." Time enough was given for improvement. "Cometh." Christ is certain to come. The time may seem long, but let us not be deceived—He is coming again.

20. "Brought other five." 1. The good servant was ready. 2. There was nothing hid; he rendered a full account. 3. He came joyfully. 4. Quickly. 5. Without fear; there was no confusion. He knew he was right and he came with confidence. "Thou deliveredst unto me." Recognizing that all he had belonged to his master. "I have gained." He had put forth an effort. Those people who fold their arms and talk about trusting God will find, sooner or later, that God does not help the idler.

21. "Well done." The master gives his full and hearty approval. "Thou good." It is possible to be "good" even in this sinful world, to be pure and upright within. "Faithful." Faithfulness rather than success was rewarded. "Over a few things." At best we can do but little for the Lord here. "Ruler over many things." The faithful one is made ruler over a larger sphere. "Joy of thy lord." We are not only to have the joy of the Lord in us, but we are to enter into His joy.

22. "Two talents." This servant had been as faithful and successful as the one who received five talents. 23. "Well done." The rewards were according to his ability. He could not have handled or enjoyed more.

III. Unfaithfulness punished (vs. 24-30). 24. "I knew thee." No person really knows Christ who thinks Him a hard master. "An hard man." This servant entertains hard thoughts of his lord. "Gathering where thou didst not scatter" (R. V.) This was not a true charge, for each one received much more than he had gained; God always liberally rewards all who serve Him.

25. "I was afraid." All sinners are afraid. "Thou hast thine own" (R. V.) He seems to boast of his honesty and uprightness. 26. "Wicked and slothful." His master was not to be trifled with. "Thou knewest." Out of thine own mouth shalt thou be judged.

27. "Thou oughtest." The fact that he knew what his master required was a reason why he should have used the talent. God appeals to us as "reasonable" beings and tells us what we "ought" to do. "Exchangers." "Bankers." R. V. Literally, "To those who stand at tables," because the bankers had tables before them. "With interest" (R. V.) His master had a right to expect a reasonable profit from the labors of his servant. 28. "The talent from him." The unfaithful servant is not only reproached by his master, but he is actually punished. He loses what he had failed to use.

29. "Shall be given." The one who really has powers and abilities, and makes good use of them, to him shall be given greater possessions. "Shall be taken away." From him that hath not, even that which he seemeth to have (Luke 8:18) shall be taken away. 30. "Unprofitable." He was cast into outer darkness, merely because he was unprofitable and idle and buried his talent. "Outer darkness." Those who fail to obey Christ will be cast from His presence. The punishment of the wicked will be terrible and eternal.

Robbers Get $125,000.

An armed band numbering forty men held up a mail train near the bridge over the Bjela River, in Russia. After killing a soldier and wounding three others who were in charge of the mail, the robbers decamped with $125,000.

Cavalry For Cuba.

The transport Panama sailed from Newport News, Va., for Cuba with two squadrons of the Fifteenth Cavalry.

What Ails You?

Do you feel weak, tired, despondent, have frequent headaches, coated tongue, bitter or bad taste in morning, "heart-burn," belching of gas, acid risings in throat after eating, stomach gnaw or burn, foul breath, dizzy spells, poor or variable appetite, nausea at times and kindred symptoms?

If you have any considerable number of the above symptoms you are suffering from biliousness, torpid liver with indigestion, or dyspepsia. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is made up of the most valuable medicinal principles known to medical science for the permanent cure of such abnormal conditions. It is a most efficient liver invigorator, stomach tonic, bowel regulator and nerve strengthener.

The "Golden Medical Discovery" is not a patent medicine or secret nostrum, a full list of its ingredients being printed on its bottle-wrapper and attested under oath. A glance at its formula will show that it contains no alcohol, or harmful habit-forming drugs. It is a fluid extract made with pure, triple-refined glycerine, of proper strength, from the roots of the following native American forest plants, viz., Golden Seal root, Stone root, Black Cherrybark, Queen's root, Bloodroot, and Mandrake root.

The following leading medical authorities, among a host of others, extol the foregoing roots for the cure of just such ailments as the above symptoms indicate: Prof. R. Bartholow, M. D., of Jefferson Med. College, Phila.; Prof. H. C. Wood, M. D., of Univ. of Pa.; Prof. Edwin M. Hale, M. D., of Hahnemann Med. College, Chicago; Prof. John King, M. D., Author of American Dispensatory; Prof. Jno. M. Scudder, M. D., Author of Specific Medicines; Prof. Laurence Johnson, M. D., Med. Dept. Univ. of N. Y.; Prof. Finley Ellingwood, M. D., Author of Materia Medica and Prof. in Bennett Medical College, Chicago. Send name and address on Postal Card to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., and receive free booklet giving extracts from writings of all the above medical authors and many others endorsing, in the strongest possible terms, each and every ingredient of which "Golden Medical Discovery" is composed.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. They may be used in conjunction with "Golden Medical Discovery" if bowels are much constipated. They're tiny and sugar-coated.

COLOMBIA'S INDUSTRIES.

Americans Have Charge of Most of the Constructive Work There.

Colombia's present attitude toward Americans is dignified and commendatory. Though scarcely meriting favorable treatment, they are preferred to other foreigners in the republic, and they obtain nearly all the concessions granted to aliens. They are as welcome in Colombia as they were before the secession of Panama, and it is chiefly they who have charge of constructive work throughout the country. Two railroads of importance are being constructed by Americans. One of these, from Buenaventura, on the Pacific, to Bogota, by way of Cali, will no doubt result in a thorough development of travel between the capital and the ocean from twelve days to forty-eight hours; the other, from the Gulf of Darien to Medellin, the second city in the republic, will place a rich region in touch with commerce. The country to be traversed by the roads is elevated and suitable for an industrial population, insuring colonization, which must start from the head waters of rivers. Employment is thereby given to 20,000 men.

As a result of all this constructive work gold fields will be developed. Once made accessible, the Choco region will be filled with prospectors. With the enactment of laws, similar to those prevailing in the Western American states, a great increase in the mining population will soon be brought about, and even a mining boom, "on the American plan," must occur. Important discoveries of gold will certainly be made. The purpose of President Reyes is to develop the country, and he realizes that mines are the best agents for the introduction of immigration on a large scale. The mining laws of Colombia, already the most liberal in South America, will be still further improved. Very probably the coinage tax on bar gold has been abolished, and before long mining will be made an untaxed industry. —Francis P. Savinien in the American Monthly Review of Reviews.

NO DAWDLING

A Man of 70 After Finding Coffee Hurt Him, Stopped Short.

When a man has lived to be 70 years old with a 40-year-old habit grown to him like a knot on a tree, chances are he'll stick to the habit till he dies.

But occasionally the spirit of youth and determination remains in some men to the last day of their lives. When such men do find any habit of life has been doing them harm, they surprise the Oslerites by a degree of will power that is supposed to belong to men under 40, only.

"I had been a user of coffee until three years ago—a period of 40 years—and am now 70," writes a N. Dak. man. "I was extremely nervous and debilitated, and saw plainly that I must make a change.

"I am thankful to say I had the nerve to quit coffee at once and take on Postum without any dawdling, and experienced no ill effects. On the contrary, I commenced to gain, losing my nervousness within two months, also gaining strength and health otherwise.

"For a man of my age, I am very well and hearty. I sometimes meet persons who have not made their Postum right and don't like it. But I tell them to boil it long enough, and call their attention to my looks now, and before I used it, that seems convincing.

"Now, when I have writing to do, or long columns of figures to cast up, I feel equal to it and can get through my work without the fagged out feeling of old." Name given by the Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read the book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a reason."

THE patrons of Paterson, N. J., route No. one, have presented the carrier with an automobile in which to make his deliveries. His route covers twenty seven miles and he made the trip in three and three-quarter hours, while with his old time horse and wagon it took eight hours to cover the ground. Of course the roads are good.

REV. Sam Jones, the noted Georgia evangelist, died suddenly in a sleeping car near Perry, Ark., while traveling on the Rock Island railroad. He had been conducting a revival at Oklahoma City, and was on his way home to Cartersville, Ga., when he was summoned to appear before his Maker.

THE apportionment of the school fund of the State for the year beginning October 1, has been made by Supt. Hill and certified to by the State Auditor. The fund amounts to $1,150,261, exclusive of poll taxes and special levies, and this gives $1.56 per capita to the 697,465 children of school age.

Chilton county has 6,706 school children and receives $10,461.96 as her portion, about $600 more than last year. In addition to this, Jemison, as a special school district with 141 children, receives $219 96.

VOLUME fifteen, number one, we have the pleasure of presenting to our readers this issue. Fourteen years have passed away since the establishment of The Banner, one-fifth of the allotted time of man upon this earth. It has been fourteen years of pleasure to the Editor and we sincerely hope to our readers also. On the whole it has been fourteen years of successful endeavor, each year adding to our number of subscribers, and we trust to the usefulness of the paper.

It has been our constant aim to serve the people of Chilton county without fear or favor, first by giving them all the news while it is news, and second by throwing wide open its columns to any discussion of interest to the people, giving equal rights to both sides of all questions

That we have made some enemies it is only fair to assume, but we feel deeply grateful to our many good friends who realize that the publishing of a newspaper has its trials as well as its pleasures, and who generously overlook all shortcomings, giving credit for best intentions.

Nearly 1500 subscribers grace our list and to each and every one we beg to assure them that whatever we can do in the future to improve THE BANNER it will give us pleasure to make the attempt. To one and all we most heartily tender our thanks for your kind support.

While visiting the Fair, you may need some little changes of linen or a fresh tie, an umbrella, in case of rain, an extra pair of trousers, or even a new suit and hat. We've arranged for your convenience, and you can make your change right here. We'll look after the old duds for you until you are ready for them. ALEX RICE, Court Square, Montgomery, Ala.

GULLEDGE ON THINGS IN GENERAL.

Verbena, Oct. 15, 1906

Editor Banner—From my observation I feel sure the farmers will ultimately do well notwithstanding the recent rain storm. Prices have and will, I think, about make up the loss in amount of cotton by the storm. This, however, depends upon the action of the man who grows the cotton. I fear there is a disposition to rush cotton on the market. If so, while prices may be what some would and do call good, yet if all would act in unison no one would be hurt, but all benefitted. I hear some say 10¢ is all cotton is worth. My! my! what sympathy. Did anyone ever hear the like. I, for one, want all I can get. I have over a hundred bales of 1905 crop still on hand, only sold small lot Nov. 10, 1905. notwithstanding *Un*just a Voter says I sold all my cotton while I asked my cotton association people to hold. Then he asks if I did not say some people in Chilton county did not know who the governor was. Certainly I did, and say so now, and that is the reason I want to go to the Legislature, so as to help those poor ignorant parents educate their children that when they grow up to manhood and womanhood they will know all this and more besides.

Why, you ought to have seen me the first time I went to make a trip on a train. It was Oct. 1, 1871, and just three days after my second child was born. Well, brother Ellis and I were making our way to Cooper afoot, when three and a half miles away our train blew at Mountain Creek, then came the test of speed, I in my brogan shoes and brown jeans clothes lit out for life to make three and a half miles while the train made six miles. Well, I got in sight and halloaed to the conductor to hold on, that I wanted him to wait for my crippled brother who was coming on behind. Now, who is going to get offended with me for telling this plain truth. The fact is and was I was densely ignorant, but thank the Lord I am out of the brush and don't want to go backward, but forward, and want all around me to do likewise.

Now, I want, Mr. Editor, to say a little something about this great big mud slinging for past few weeks. First, will say I don't think it the decent way to carry on a political campaign. Have never heard Fitts say one word against Traywick, I know Traywick has not against Fitts. I have never intended by word or act to injure the private character of my opponent, J. O. Middleton, nor I never will; have too much respect, 1st, for him as a man and his family, including his aged and respected father. 2d, for my own manhood I intend to so live as to enjoy the respect of my county people, except in political campaigns in Chilton county in which it appears I am the special subject of abuse.

By the way, the abuse I bear with such fortitude would or should naturally arouse the average reader and voter to rise up and exclaim: What manner of man is this fellow Gulledge that the opposition are so mindful of him? Surely there is something in him, for the good Book teaches "Blessed is he of whom all men speak evil."

I leave in the morning for a short sojourn among the "Red Skins" (Indians) and hope *Un*just a Voter and "Verbena Kid," Clanton Old Billy Goat, will give me a "rough house" this week. So come on, say what you please, I will own up. Lovingly,

F. A. GULLEDGE.

P. S. Yes, I tried last Friday night week to get whiskey for Traywick from Jesse Hayes; Mr. Traywick had heartburn and asked for some soda for it and I told him a tablespoonful of raw whiskey was present relief for it. All who are subject to heartburn, set this down. I or Traywick asked Mr. Hayes if he had any; he said no, and this ended it. You bet Traywick and myself always own up when caught. "Sis" and "Delia," our wives, will testify to this. Yes, it is honorable to own to your faults when you can't get out of it.

MONTGOMERY STATE FAIR.

Not in recent years has any exhibition so interested the people of Montgomery as the big State Fair which the Alabama Agricultural Association is to hold in this city during the week of October 22 to 27. Nothing of local interest has so held the public mind as this event, and even now crowds visit Vandiver Park to view the preparations which are rapidly nearing an end.

There are a number of reasons for this. In the first place, Montgomery has not had a State Fair for eleven years. The interest which formerly attached to the annual event has been revived and increased tenfold. Then, the valuable premiums which have been offered by the Association for winning exhibits have proved another important factor in arousing public interest. Not least of the drawing cards has been the number of special entertainment features which have been secured, both for day and evening attractions. Again, the Fair will mark a new era for Montgomery, inaugurating a movement—on which the capital city, from its geographical position in the center of the richest agricultural section of the state, should be the leader—towards benefitting the farmer and instructing him in improved methods of agriculture.

Perhaps the greatest drawing card the Fair will have, however, is the excellent and even program which has been arranged for Fair week. Every day will be a big day. The leading interests of the State will each be represented. And yet, no one day will overshadow the others, for every day's program is of the greatest moment to those whose interests lie in accord with those for which the day is set apart.

The opening day of the Fair will be set apart for the interests represented by the Southern Cotton Association and the Farmers Union. Cotton and other branches of agriculture in this State are so closely allied that it was thought advisable to unite the two. President Harvie Jordan and Financial Agent E. D. Smith of the Cotton Association and W. M. Morris of the Union will be the speakers.

Tuesday will be devoted to the Press of the State and will be named Editors' Day. Farmers' Day will follow, and on this occasion Secretary of Agriculture James Wilson will make an address, while on Thursday, Railroad Day, the speaker of prominence will be Samuel Spencer, President of the Southern Railway. On Friday, Immigration Day, Hon. Frank Surgent, Commissioner of Agriculture, will deliver the principal address The Fair will close with Negro Day, when Booker Washington and other prominent race leaders will be the speakers.

While these are the special features of the program, a fine card of races will be offered for every day of the exhibition, and some of the speediest horses in the country will appear on the big mile track which is now within a day or two of completion.

Henry E. Jones of Tampa, Fla., writes: "I can thank God for my present health, due to Foley's Kidney Cure. I tried doctors and all kinds of kidney cures, but nothing done me much good till I took Foley's Kidney Cure. Four bottles cured me, and I have no more pains in my back and shoulders. I am 62 years old and suffered long, but thanks to Foley,s Kidney Cure I am well and can walk and enjoy myself. It is a pleasure to recommend it to those needing a kidney medicine. Upchurch Drug co.

Letter to Upchurch Drug Co.

Clanton, Ala.

Dear Sirs: You know, diamonds don't go by size. So with paint.

We make paint, one gallon of which goes as far as two of another and lasts twice as long; that's four to one.

You know it is true in diamonds; they don't go by the gallon, do they?

If you are going to paint your house, you go first to your painter and say: "I'm going to paint; do you want the job? and what'll it cost?"

If he happens to know, he'll say; "Depends on the paint. I can do it for somewhere about $100 or $200, whichever you like; $100 will make a good job; $200 a poor one."

And you, if you happen to have your wits, 'll say: "I'll take the good one, when'll you do it?"

Painters ought, all, to know about paint; ane jewelers ought to be able to get a good job. We do what we can to help both.

One gallon Devoe is better than two of average paint, goes as far—that is, your house wiil take about 20 gallons Devoe and 40 of average paint—and, Devoe will wear a long time; the life of average paint is very uncertain, it may be a year, it may be five

Why is it that painters don't know about paint? Do jewelers know about diamonds? They know more than they tell sometimes. There are painters and painters; so there are jewelers; so there is paint, and the least-gallons paint is Devoe.

Yours truly
8 F W DEVOE & CO

Result of Neglect

In most cases consumption results from a neglected or improperly treated cold. Foley's Honey and Tar cures the most obstinate coughs and prevents serious results. THE CHILDREN.

Mother of many children I—sprung of my heart and my brain—
And some have been born in gladness and some have been born in pain.
But one has gone singing from out my door,
Never to come again.

Content and Ease and Comfort — they abide with me day by day;
They smooth my couch and place my chair as dutiful children may,
And Success and Power, my strong-limbed sons,
Stand ever to clear my way.

And these be the prudent children, the careful children and wise,
There was one, and only one, with a reckless dream in his eyes.
He who was one with the wind o' the dawn,
And kin to the wood and the skies.

Faithful and fond are my children, and they tend me well, in sooth;
Success and Content and Power, good proof are mine of their truth,
But the name of him that I lost was Joy,
Yes, my first-born Joy of Youth.

Well do my children guard me, jealous of this their right;
Carefully, soberly, ever by daylight and candlelight,
But oh, for my prodigal Joy of Youth,
Somewhere out in the night.

—Theodosia Garrison, in Smart Set.

Her House in Order.

Miss Dennett-Brown was much elated. The post had brought her two gratifying communications—one from her banker announcing the advantageous sale of some shares in a company she believed to be unsound; the other from her married sister in London telling her that Lady Macintyre had made up her mind to settle in Chipperton.

She was only the widow of a city knight, it is true, but she had a handle to her name, and was supposed to be wealthy.

"It is just what we want in Chipperton," Miss Dennett-Brown remarked to her unmarried sister, Olivia, "some one to give tone to the place and lead society."

And already she saw visions of garden parties, at which she would be an honored guest, and bazaars at which she would be asked to hold a stall. With her mind's eye she even began to range rapidly over her somewhat antiquated wardrobe, and to reckon up its possibilities.

"She will be a great acquisition, but"—turning to her letter—"she is not to be here till the end of the London season, Carrie says."

Having decided that this was to be regretted but could not be helped, she armed herself with a sheath of tracts and went forth in great good humor to visit those of her neighbors who, being poor, had apparently forfeited the Englishman's right to consider his house his castle.

She first went to some pretty chalet-like cottages just on the outskirts of the town, into two of which new tenants had lately come, whose acquaintance she was anxious to make.

The door of the first was invitingly open. Through it she saw, in the little sitting room opposite, a woman who was engaged in ironing some lacy-looking articles. She was of a pleasant but homely countenance, and wore her gown pinned up under a voluminous holland pinafore.

Miss Dennett-Brown rapped sharply on the door with the handle of her umbrella, and, without waiting for permission, entered.

"I hope I do not interrupt you," she said.

The woman's face expressed surprise—and—could it be possible?—a shade of annoyance. But she said politely:

"Oh, not at all; if you will go into the front room I will be with you in a minute."

"Don't move," exclaimed the other. "Go on with your work—I will sit here," and she plumped herself down into a chair by the table. "I love to watch people work."

"I expect it is fascinating sometimes to those who themselves have nothing to do."

Miss Dennett-Brown was a little taken aback, and tried to look severe.

"Oh, I am a very busy woman, I assure you. Do you always do your ironing in here?"

"No, not always. I sometimes iron in the kitchen—but to-day the kitchen is rather in a pickle."

"Ah, that is a pity. Do you not think it is a good rule to clean your kitchen early? An ill-kept kitchen is—well, you konw, so very untidy. I think I have a little paper on that very subject. I am sure you will find it useful," and diving into her string bag, she produced a tract. "'Her House in Order,' it is called," she said; "it is most interesting."

She was not observant of the countenances of the humble, or she would have noticed a curious twinkle in the eyes of the woman before her, as she replied:

"Thank you. Kindly put it down, and I will show it by-and-by to Susan."

"Read it yourself, my good woman—read it yourself—it will teach you a great deal."

And without stopping for a reply she jerked her thumb in the direction of the yard, whence came sounds of the clattering of pails, and asked significantly:

"Your daughter?"

"No, that is not my daughter—my daughter is in London."

"In service?"

"She is married."

"Indeed. I hope she has a good husband."

"I hope so—she has made no complaint so far."

"Any sons?"

"Yes, I have two sons."

"And what are they doing?"

"One is a collector, and the other a soldier."

"Oh, really—a 'collector?' Now what do you call a collector? What does he collect—taxes, I suppose?"

"Well, I believe he does, sometimes. But he does a great deal more than that—he is very hard worked, poor boy."

"That's better than having no work at all, like those poor wretched men who go about the streets. Hard work won't do him any harm—it will do him good. I don't believe in young men being too hard worked."

"No? I am afraid they are sometimes."

"Don't you believe it. And the one who is a soldier? Is he steady? I hope so, for your sake—but they are exposed to so many temptations, are they not? Now I have a touching little story here, which I should like you to send him when you write—it may help to keep him in the right way."

And again she had recourse to her bag, and drew forth another paper.

"Thank you, I will not fail to send it to him."

The ironing being now finished, the mistress of the house suggested an adjournment to another room, as her visitor seemed inclined to stay. The latter unceremoniously pushed open a door in the passage, looked with disfavor at a pile of unpacked luggage, and sniffed ostentatiously.

"A very unpleasant smell here," she said. "What is it? Stuffy—very stuffy! I should keep that window open if I were you. Let me see, when did you come in?"

"About ten days ago."

"Oh, you are not very quick in settling down, are you? I shall be round again next week with the "Parish Magazine," and shall hope to find you quite straight; in the meantime, mind you read the little paper—it will be a great help. No, I will not go into the other room—and, oh, don't forget to send the story to your soldier son."

"I will certainly send it. Who shall I say sent it to him?"

"I'm Miss Dennett-Brown—but you can tell him it was one of the parish visitors. Oh, and I have not asked your name."

"I am Lady Macintyre," the other replied sweetly. "I have come in here to be near the Poplars, which is being got ready for me—pretty, quaint little doll's house, isn't it?"

But Miss Dennett-Brown could not reply; she felt a cold, creepy sensation down her spine,, and finding herself suddenly bereft of speech—fled.

"How was I to know?" she asked plaintively when her sister reproached her with want of penetration. "She looked just like anyone else—not so aristocratic as Mrs. Wegg, the postman's wife, and she had on an old holland overall—and—and—" she went on breathlessly, "it was so mean of her not to say who she was at first, and to lead me on—and it was just like Carrie to say she wasn't coming yet—she always does get hold of the wrong end of a story—of course we shall not be invited to the Poplars now!" And the much-injured lady wept.—Ellis Wyburd, in Lady's Realm.

Perforated Sails.

Although the assertion recently made by an Italian sea captain that the power of sails was increased by their being perforated was ridiculed, it has just been proved that he was right. His theory was that the force of the wind cannot fairly take effect on an inflated sail because of the cushion of immovable air that fills up the hollow. To prevent the creation and presence of that cushion he pierced his sails with many holes, through which the wind blew, the balance of the air bressure striking against the canvas and exercising its full effect. Several experiments have been made on these lines, and the results are declared to have been eminently satisfactory.—Leeds Mercury.

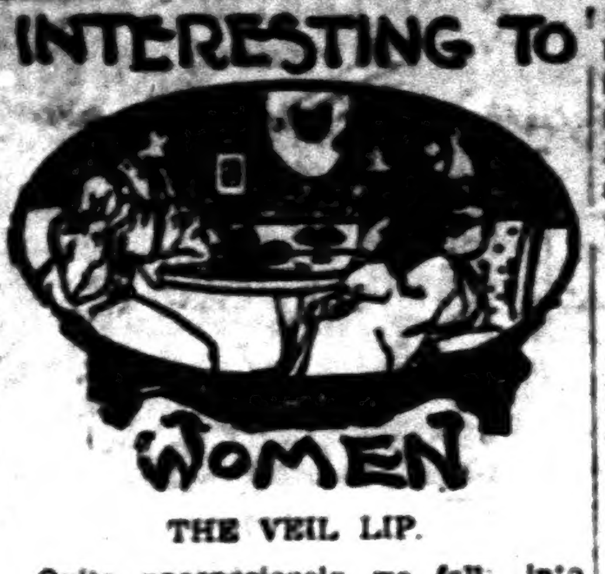
Picture Induces Hay Fever.

In Paris there is just now proceeding a seasonable discussion on hay fever, concerning which an amusing instance of the capricious nature of the infection is related. A lady was quite proof against catching the sneezings of hay fever from either hay or any other flower or plant except one. The mere sight of a rose used to set her sneezing violently. Knowing her weakness, she carefully avoided these flowers, but one day she carelessly stopped before a still life painting representing a basket of roses. Almost instantly she was seized with a sneezing fit. Clearly imagination has its part in the case.—London Globe.

A Sporting Event.

The taximeter system has been introduced in London and one of the papers there asked a "cabby" how he liked it. "You see," said the cabby frankly, "most of us likes a bit o' sport. I tike my keb out in a mornin', an' I don't know whether I'm goin' to mike my yard money or 'ave a quid over for meself. You tike my meanin'? It's like backin' 'osses." All the "cabby" wants is a sporting chance.—New York Tribune.

The shipments of marble to the United States in 1905 from the Carrara quarries, near Leghorn, Italy, amounted to $995,851, an increase of $52,369 over 1904.



INTERESTING TO WOMEN

THE VEIL LIP.

Quite unconsciously we fall into habits that render us less pleasing to behold; the wearers of veils therefore may be acquiring a habit which they would take every trouble to avoid if their attention were called to it.

When you are riding in an omnibus or other conveyance, when you have, in short, an opportunity of watching a woman who is wearing a veil, notice how she tries to keep the material from getting between her lips. The veil has this propensity. You will find that some ladies lift a hand to the edge of the stuff and gently pull it straight, but you will also perceive that many of them endeavor to keep it out of the mouth by various movements of the lip. The second method gives a disagreeable appearance to the countenance, and it is certain that they would avoid it if they were aware of the fact.

The worst of it is that the ugly action of the lip is likely to become a habit, so that the movement is made unknowingly when there is no veil to operate on. It would assuredly spoil the expression of the face, and would convey the notion that the lady was afflicted with some nervous ailment similar to, but more pronounced than the twitching of the eyelid which is so annoying to those who suffer from it.

There may be an inclination on the part of some readers to smile at this friendly warning; so much has been written of late about the different ailments and contortions produced by motoring, cycling, golfing and what not— many of which evils are either exaggerated or non-existent—that the "veil lip" will probably be accepted as the veiw of an alarmist.

Yet, it is an undoubted fact, verified by constant observation, that some wearers of veils fall into a face distorting habit, so it will do no harm to guard ourselves from following a bad example.—Home Notes.

CONSERVATION OF STRENGTH.

The conservation of strength is a subject few women think about.

Where there is much to be done, something must needs be slighted.

Since something must be slighted, it were well that one decides wisely just what it shall be.

Remembering at the same time that the worker's health or nerves is the most important of all things to be considered.

The ambitious, conscientious and energetic little housewife has been taught that all must be done thoroughly. "What is worth doing at all, is worth doing well," is an axiom which has been drilled into her as if it were the Eleventh Commandment.

As a girl, it may have been true that she was careless, apt to shirk things, and to hurry through them that she might be free.

So her mother labored hard to impress upon her the importance of thoroughness.

Now that she is married and has a home of her own to care for, the lesson bears fruit; and she is "thorough" to a nervous degree; goes on the trot all day that dust and dirt be banished, that all white things are snowy, all surfaces polished to a nicety.—New Haven Register.

SHE FELT LIKE A CHOO-CHOO BULLSEYE.

"It makes me feel exactly like the headlight of a locomotive," laughed a girl the other day as she arranged over her pretty head one of the new auto hoods that have an isinglass front to protect the eyes and face from dust. Still, she agreed that the hood was a decided improvement upon the disfiguring goggles. In the new hood soft silk crepe is gathered to the edges of the isinglass guard. By means of two little clasps concealed inside, the affair is firmly attached to the brim of the hat. Then the crepe hood is drawn back over the hat and hair, its two long ends being crossed in the back and passed around either side of the neck to be knotted in front. The isinglass reached from the top of the forehead to a point just above the mouth. A short piece of the crepe is gathered to its lower edge and this fastens to the coat collar with elastic bands, so that there is no possibility of the hood being disarranged by wind.—New York Press.

REDUCING FLESH.

In a rapid flesh reducing system hot water is substituted for breakfast. A cupful is taken on rising and one every hour through the morning until lunch, which is a light meal. It must not be forgoten that heroic measures like these are not to be undertaken by any but strong persons.

SIGHS FOR THE OLD DAYS.

What stopped the old housewife habit of taking the tablecloth out after each meal and shaking it on the ground, to the edification of the dog, cat, chickens and birds? As a boy we used to delight in that shake, especially if a comely matron or a pretty girl had hold of the cloth, her body swayed so gracefully as she handled it. No other motion, not even the rhythmic dance, set off her figure to better advantage, and the minxes knew it and always managed to give those flirts when admirers were handy by. But some one invented a brush and a pretty receiver and a new fashion was set.—Washington (Ia.) Post.

DETECTING SHAM JEWELRY.

The sea air and water affect even the most artfully imitative of sham jewelry in a remarkably quick way, and pretentious people who want to make a show with spurious articles often only show up the nakedness of the land.

The writer was very much amused in a large open yacht to witness the effect of sea water upon a half dozen very heavy and resplendent rings worn by a rather showy woman, who kept dipping the ringed hand into the sea, and then very ostentatiously holding up the same hand to show the "precious jewels."

The rings literally turned green and, as a rude young man remarked beneath his breath, it was only too evident that the gorgeous hoops were made of "the same sort of gold as they make brass candlesticks of."—Woman's Life.

PROTECTION TO PEARL BUTTONS

The big pearl buttons which decorate the front of so many shirt waist suits—both skirts and waist—are anything but improved by being treated to the vigorous tubbing the dress is subjected to.

Ingenious little devices have been invented for attaching the buttons—devices which can be released so that the buttons may be removed before each washing.

When buttons are set on in pairs, it is often possible to fasten them together by a strong cord or by long stitches of cotton, buttonholed to make the connecting link strong.

ONE WAY TO REST.

A widow of limited means and a good sized family to look after and do the work for spends her vacations at the home every summer. For two weeks she does no sewing or unnecessary work about the house, only that which is absolutely essential for health and comfort. During this time she rests, reads a good deal, goes for walks and trolley rides to nearby country and seaside resorts, and at the end of the two weeks feels she really has had a vacation and is ready to take up her busy life again.—New York Tribune.

WOMEN THE WORLD OVER.

One of the few women who have penetrated into Thibet is an English woman, Miss Duncan, whose book, "A Summer Ride Through Thibet," has just been published. At one village she was fortunate enough to see a festival that is held only once in thirty-six years. She traveled quite slowly and made a special study of the customs of the people.

There is a certain railroad in the mining district in the north of England that is the happy hunting ground of the women along the line who cannot afford to buy coal. According to an agent of the line 200 girls recently went to pick coal on the sidings, and, requiring also firewoods, they knocked the bottoms out of the trucks and carried away a large number of the sleepers.

According to Austrian newspapers the Crown Princess of Montenegro is ruining her country by her extravagant love for diamonds. The Crown Prince lavishes them upon her, the King is said to encourage it and the result is heavy taxation.

Ladies seldom rise in Spain to receive a male visitor and they rarely accompany him to the door. For a Spaniard to give a lady—even his wife—his arm when out walking is looked upon as a decided violation of propriety.

There is a deputy mineral surveyor in Nevada who is a woman. She has filed a $10,000 bond, has been given a commission by Surveyor General Kyle, of Reno, Nev., and has contracts for surveying large tracks of mining property in the mountains near Tonopah and Goldfield.

At an international dressmaking competition held recently a girl who is an Armenian dressmaker of the Caucasus, won for herself the grand prize as well as the title of the smartest dressmaker in the world. She made an entire gown of elaborate design single handed within twenty-four hours.—New York Mail.

FASHION NOTES.

Little straps across the low opening at the neck are used in lieu of a chemisette upon a small girl's dress.

Plaid silks are going to be used a great deal for linings for the new voiles and similar sheer wool dress fabrics.

On all sides we hear of black and white in every combination of check, stripe and plaid, while all black was never so popular.

White lawn with a neat embroidery design in Roman colors makes a smart tie and belt set.

Stripes and vertical trimmings promise to help out the slender effect demanded of femininity, whatever the actual avoirdupois.

The sparing use of soutache sewed on by the edge in open design is advocated as a novel and effective trimming for fall.

Good news for those who are suited by the severe type is the rumor that military effects will obtain among the modes for the season.

WEALTH OF RUSSIAN CHURCH

CATHEDRALS HAVE GOLD ROOFS AND COST MILLIONS TO BUILD.

It Caused an Outlay of Over $90,000,000 to Erect St. Isaac's in St. Petersburg—Name of the Almighty Blazes in Diamonds From a Gold Cloud.

Several English newspaper correspondents have, it is said, recently been inspecting the 15,913 gold ingots and 12,500 sacks of gold coin, representing some 65,000,000 pounds in hard cash, which are safely housed in the Imperial Bank of Russia and which form Russia's gold reserve, but the fabulous wealth of the Russian churches may be inspected by the ordinary tourists without consulting finance ministers or uniformed officials.

The dome of St. Isaac's Cathedral in St. Petersburg is the most conspicuous object in the city. It is covered with copper overlaid with pure gold, no less than 50,000 pounds worth of gold being melted down for the purpose. Entering the cathedral by the magnificent bronzed doors, 44 feet wide and 30 feet high, said to be the largest in the world, the visitor is overwhelmed by its richness and massive splendor. The dome of the shrine is supported by eight Corinthian pillars of malachite, given by Prince Demidoff and valued at 200,000 pounds. The total cost of this cathedral is estimated at 10,000,000 pounds.

In the cathedral of the Kazan the name of the Almighty blazes in diamonds from a cloud of beaten gold, under which are solid silver doors 20 feet high leading to the inner sanctuary. This church contains a beautiful picture of the Virgin Mary covered with gold and jewels valued at 15,000 pounds. In the monastery of St. Alexander Nevski, near the end of the Nevski Prospect, is the shrine of the founder, of pure silver, weighing no less than 3,250 pounds.

Many of the churches of Moscow—and they number some 1,400—contain treasures of enormous value. In the Cathedral of the Assumption, situated inside the Kremlin, is the most sacred picture of Russia, the "Virgin of Vladimir," painted by St. Luke. The jewels which adorn it are valued at 45,000 pounds, one emerald alone being said to be worth 10,000 pounds. Napoleon took from the church five tons of silver and five hundred-weight of gold, but its most precious treasures were concealed previous to the French invasion and afterward restored.

Near by, in the Cathedral of the Annunciation, with its many golden domes, are a pavement of agate and jasper and the celebrated icon of the virgin of the Don, its most prized possession.

The icon of the Iberian mother of God has a small chapel to itself, just outside the Kremlin. The icon is occasionally taken out in a gorgeous carriage drawn by six horses, with bare-headed attendants, to attend the sick or dying. The fees for such visits amount to 10,000 pounds.

The Cathedral of the Holy Savior in Moscow is probably the most magnificent church in the world. Its fine cupolas are covered with pure gold one-eighth inch in thickness. Its internal decorations are magnificent and very costly. This church is the nation's thank offering for the deliverance of Moscow from the French. It took 50 years to build and its cost has been estimated at 10,000,000 pounds.

The robes of the Russian clergy are the richest in the world. In the house of the holy synod, inside the Kremlin, may be seen vestments of fabulous value. One is embellished with the Nicene creed embroidered in pearls. There are no fewer than seven miters studded with diamonds, rubies and emeralds; also golden croziers of rare workmanship. The boundless wealth, gorgeous decorations and endless magnificence of the churches are in strange contrast to the poverty-stricken, unkempt peasants who throng the churches at all hours of the day.

SEVRES.

The Great Annual Output of Hideous Counterfeits.

Looking around in the curiosity stores of Paris we find everywhere conspicuously exhibited Sevres cups, Sevres statuettes, Sevres plates, all of them bearing genuine manufacture marks. Unfortunately, these Sevres are brutal, horrible, distasteful counterfeits, made in Berlin or even in Paris, for the manufacture of false Sevres has gained a nearly incredible expansion.

Year by year sixteen million francs worth of spurious Sevres are made, which are sold in Europe and in America, and give a return of forty-eight millions. A false Sevres plate, epoch of the Empire, has a manufacturing value of three francs, and sells at six francs to the commission merchant, who in turn conveys it to the curiosity dealer for nine francs. From this stage on any statement of prices becomes impossible, two plates of false Sevres, similar to each other in every particular and made of the same material, sell just according to the place they happen to be in, at the second-hand store in Orleans for twelve francs, at a profit of three francs, at the antiquities store in London for 175 francs, at 170 francs profit. Who wants to buy counterfeit Sevres needs not to look for secret factories, the counterfeit comes to your house, if you have an open store, as they are treated in by drummers. Nor is it to be presumed that

STEAMERS COLLIDE

Thrilling Experience on Hudson River Had By Sleepy Passengers.

CRASH IN THE DARK; ONE DEAD.

Seven Men Are Injured as a Result of the Collision.

Hudson, N. Y.—The passenger night boats Adirondack and Saratoga were in collision while off the village of Saugerties just below this city.

The Adirondack was struck on the port side near the bow and was ripped open for about 150 feet. The damage was done above the water line, however, and the vessel was able to keep afloat.

The steamer Onteora went to the rescue of the passengers of the Adirondack, most of whom had left their berths in a panic when the shock occurred. All were brought to this city.

The City of Troy went to the assistance of the Saratoga, from which she took the passengers. The Saratoga was in a sinking condition, and the work of rescue was rushed, all the passengers being safely rescued.

Three of the crew of the Adirondack are missing, and it was not known whether they were drowned or had been overlooked in the excitement.

Come After Operatives.

Charlotte, N. C.—Two Scotland Yard detectives have arrived from London, England, to investigate the alleged importation of cotton mill operatives from Manchester and other English cotton manufacturing towns under violation of the contract labor law. They decline to talk, but it is understood they are sent by the English government. Some weeks ago a mill at Gastonia, near here, employed a number of English operatives, mostly girls who say they came here at the solicitation of Immigrant Agent Costello, of North Carolina. They claim that promises were made them which have not been made good.

The mill managers say they are inefficient and that their services will be dispensed with.

Will Transfer Troops.

Washington, D. C.—A general transfer of artillery soldiers in the north to stations in the south, and vice versa, has been decided upon by the war department as a possible means of checking desertion, more frequent changes being thought advisable. Orders issued make about twenty changes in batteries stationed in the south and north.

The Eighth company, now at Fort Morgan, has been ordered to Fort Preble, Me., and the Seventy-fifth company, at that station, goes to the Alabama post.

Postoffice Appointments.

Washington, D. C.—Route No. 3 ordered established December 17 at Wedowee, Randolph county, serving 691 people and 117 families.

Robert D. Shipment appointed regular carrier; John W. Shipment, substitute rural carrier, at Clio.

Mail to Be Sent to Havana.

Washington, D. C.—The war department has received a cablegram from Brigadier-General Bell, commanding the troops in Cuba, requesting that mail intended for troops now in Cuba be forwarded to Havana, from which place the military authorities will distribute it throughout the island.

New Jersey Fire Chief Dies.

Jacksonville, Fla.—James W. Hodgkinson, chief of the Orange, N. J., fire department, died suddenly on a train en route here from Miami. He left New York by steamer for Dallas, Tex., to attend the convention of fire chiefs. He had a hemorrhage on board caused by internal rupture. He was compelled to leave the steamer at Key West, and was on his way home when taken with another severe hemorrhage on the train, which resulted fatally. The body was sent to Orange for interment.

St. Petersburg.—At the trial of the workingmen's delegates, M. Ostrogorski, director of Tennscheff College and editor of a well-known monthly newspaper, created a sensation by testifying that Count Witte, when he was premier, asked him at the end of last October to arrange a meeting with M. Krustaleff, president of the executive committee of the workmen's council, M. Ostragorski's idea being to prove that the authorities tacitly recognized the council of workmen's delegates as a representative body.

Los Angeles, Cal.—One man was instantly killed and upward of a score of people injured, many of them seriously and fatally, in the wrecking of a street car. The car got beyond the control of the motorman on the steep hill and rushed at lightning speed down the incline, left the track where there is a sharp curve, and crashing into a telephone pole, was overturned and completely wrecked.

Out of forty-three passengers on the car few escaped without some injuries.

WHAT JOY THEY BRING TO EVERY HOME

as with joyous hearts and smiling faces they romp and play—when in health—and how conducive to health the games in which they indulge, the outdoor life they enjoy, the cleanly, regular habits they should be taught to form and the wholesome diet of which they should partake. How tenderly their health should be preserved, not by constant medication, but by careful avoidance of every medicine of an injurious or objectionable nature, and if at any time a remedial agent is required, to assist nature, only those of known excellence should be used; remedies which are pure and wholesome and truly beneficial in effect, like the pleasant laxative remedy, Syrup of Figs, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. Syrup of Figs has come into general favor in many millions of well informed families, whose estimate of its quality and excellence is based upon personal knowledge and use.

Syrup of Figs has also met with the approval of physicians generally, because they know it is wholesome, simple and gentle in its action. We inform all reputable physicians as to the medicinal principles of Syrup of Figs, obtained, by an original method, from certain plants known to them to act most beneficially and presented in an agreeable syrup in which the wholesome Californian blue figs are used to promote the pleasant taste; therefore it is not a secret remedy and hence we are free to refer to all well informed physicians, who do not approve of patent medicines and never favor indiscriminate self-medication.

Please to remember and teach your children also that the genuine Syrup of Figs always has the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—plainly printed on the front of every package and that it is for sale in bottles of one size only. If any dealer offers any other than the regular Fifty cent size, or having printed thereon the name of any other company, do not accept it. If you fail to get the genuine you will not get its beneficial effects. Every family should always have a bottle on hand, as it is equally beneficial for the parents and the children, whenever a laxative remedy is required.

Derrick.

One of the big railroad systems is building new ferry slips on the North river front, and an enormous derrick was floating there the other day. A passenger crossing the stream said to his companion: "See that derrick? I'll bet you the best dinner at the St. Regis you don't know the origin of the name. You know what a derrick is, of course, and possibly have seen it at work, but why is it a derrick?" After some hesitation the companion gave it up; he had never thought of it before, as millions of smart folk would have to admit also. "Well," explained the quiz, "the earliest hangman whose name is known to mankind was called Derrick. He lived in the reign of James I. This powerful mechanism was named after him."—New York Press.

When Webster Was Wrong.

It is easy for even a good man to be mistaken.

Daniel Webster was a good man. Yet Daniel was positive that a steam railroad could never be made to work.

He was quite willing to concede that a locomotive might be able to skate along at a pretty good clip while attached to a string of cars running on iron or wooden rails.

But having admitted this much, he arose to call attention to an insurmountable obstacle to the further success of the undertaking. He said the train, once under way, could not be stopped—that it would keep right on going and ultimately crash into something and kill everybody aboard.

Thus we see that even with the best intentions it is easy to make mistakes.

Daniel Webster didn't own any canalboat stock nor was he for any other selfish reason desirous that railroads should not come into existence. He simply was expressing an opinion about something he had never seen in operation. And unfortunately for his reputation as a railway expert, he saw things that weren't there.—Detroit Times.

A special postage stamp was issued by the Japanese Government to commemorate the return of the troops from war. Two of these stamps, of the face value of one-half and three sens, respectively, were issued, and they were available for postage for letters only on the day of the recent great review. Not more than one of each kind was sold to every applicant at the geenral postoffice.

Railroad detectives at Chickasha, Okla. T., searching for lost tools taken by shopmen, found that one employe had hauled away a locomotive cab and attached it to his house for use as a kitchen.

Beware of Ointments For Catarrh That Contain Mercury, as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Editor Banner—If you will allow me a space in your paper I will say a few words, as it has been a long time since I have before. Farmers are busy gathering cotton, also peas and corn.

I am sorry to say that Mrs. Frank McGraw is on the sick list; I hope she will soon recover.

Miss Pearl Rasberry is spending a few days with her aunt at Prattville.

Misses Ethel Rasberry Lila Edwards and Mary and Catherine Atchison, and several young men spent Sunday evening at Mrs. Veazey's and had a nice time.

I am sorry to say that Mrs. Veazey has a badly hurt arm; hope it will soon get alright. Best wishes to the Banner and its many readers.

Editor Banner—Here I come again knocking at your door Well, Mr Editor, have you heard about that speech that Mr. Middleton made at Collins Chapel? Well, Mr Sam Pate introduced the candidate and says this is our nominee for Representative from Chilton county, and he didn't say what party he represented, and then Mr. Middleton got up and I thought to myself right now he is going to organize another Democratic club, but oh my, when he got through I thought again; but what did I think this time? Well, I thought he was running for President of the United States. Why, some fellow said that he made a better speech than old John T. Morgan could make. Poor fellow! Now, Mr. Middleton said that Republicans grew up in school houses and Democrats grew like dog fennel in the corners of fences. Say, Middleton, it looks like you grew up in the corner of the fence where there was not any washings at that.

Now, a word to Mr Lee Vickers. You wanted to know what Adams and Crichton's politics would be next, they have never been anything yet but Democrats. Why, Vickers, Adams and Crichton have got more sense than you and your whole bunch, and when the Republicans carry Alabama it will be a thousand years after you are dead. Say, Lee, who was it that tried to get those negroes registered so they could vote? Was it Democrats? Now, whoop 'em up, boys, we are going to win.

Billingsley.

There is a rumor in the air that there are advocates of stock law in parts of Chilton county We hope the rumor has no foundation. When we say this we voice the best thinking ones of all lovers of humanity.

Why should such take place while God so willingly and bountifully feeds the cattle on a thousand hills eight months in the twelve, because a few have been blessed with large fields in which to enclose their cattle, while their less fortunate neighbors would have to part with most all of their stock, thus taking the milk and butter out of their hungry children's mouths? God is cognizant of such transactions and will fail to countenance such as the golden rule All who favor this debauchery of human rights and privileges may beware of the safety of their future prosperity. Let reason and justice rule and all is well. The above is as much the truth as if Ella Wheeler Wilcox had pened it. All eyes are turned on the situation.

Verbena.

Editor Banner—Please allow me space in your paper to say a few words. Well, I guess the people are glad to see the sun shining once more on their cotton and corn as you know we have had a good season and a lasting one; cotton is badly injured in this part of the country; the principal part of the cotton that was open has sprouted in the bur. Corn crops are injured badly, but not as bad as the cotton.

Well, I see Prof. C. M. Baker has returned from his school at Jacksonville. Success to the Banner.

GUESS WHO.

Culp's Schoolhouse.

Farmers are badly behind with their work, due to so much rain. It seems that we have had the worst spell of weather that has ever been here, I am thankful that it isn't any worse than it is. Our crops are badly damaged, peas are rotten, and cotton seed have sprouted in the bur what didn't fall out on the ground; corn and peanuts are also damaged very badly. But all things work together for good to those that love and serve God. Well, I hope the farmers will see the need of holding their cotton for a fair price. Brother farmers, if we will all stick together like the boot blacks and other business men, we will have a right to price our own cotton and get the right price for our produce. Do you believe this? If so, let us try it. Let every farmer join the band and be a business man like a farmer ought to be. I hope the people will cast their votes for Mr. Gulledge in November, for I I think he is the man we need to fill the office; I don't think we need a man that is as changeable as the wind to fill any office, a Democrat and a lawyer yesterday and a doctor today and a Republican tomorrow and wants an office next day, do you?

MAKE MONEY.

Here is an interesting study: Make out a list of all the people you know, and estimate the amount of money each one earns in a year. Total it up. The amount will be surprisingly large. Now, of all those people, only the few who SAVE SOMETHING really MAKE anything at all. Simply earning money isn't making it; what slips through the earner's fingers is finally "made" by somebody else. Don't forget to count yourself in on the list, and if you are not "making" money, begin now to save with us. One dollar will open your bank account.

It is a bad wind that blows one way all the time and never changes I am strongly under the impression that the Democratic party is going to win this time; everything is bidding fair now for our ticket to be elected in November. If all qualified voters who profess to be Democrats will turn out on the day of election and vote, we will elect our men, and I wish to say if there ever was a time that every Democrat should be up and doing, it is now, and furthermore I wish to say to all men who are going to vote the Democratic ticket, to lay down all manner of work on the day of the election and go to the polls and cast their votes for our party. Don't stay at home on that day, go to the election and take someone with you. With success to the Democrats, I ring off. OLD MIKE

Verbena, October 16, 1906

Editor Banner—In my last letter to the Banner I forgot to mention one of the greatest reasons for my supporting Mr. Gulledge in his candidacy for Representative and that is his untiring effort in the S. C. A. Mr. Gulledge's work in the association is enough to prove to any thinking man that he is the friend of the laboring man. When a man will leave his business and pay his expenses to New Orleans and other places in the interest of the farmers, it but bespeaks his loyalty and devotion to his fellow man and as said last week I think we should lay aside party lines and vote for the man that can do us the most good. Hoping these few lines will not reach the waste basket, I am gratefully yours with success to the Banner. L. N HENDERSON

Verbena, Oct. 22, 1906

Editor Banner—Please allow me space in your paper to say some few words to Mr. Middleton. Mr. Middleton, I heard that you said you were going to challenge my vote because I had not paid poll tax. Sir, I am here to say that you have told falsehoods, for the man that told me you said this, tells the truth and nothing else, and more than this I don't like to hear a candidate mouthing and grumbling about someone voting for another man. I can tell you what I am going to do, Mr. Middleton, I am going to vote for Mr. Gulledge and get everybody else that I can to do the same and I want you to strictly understand that I think I am competent to attend to my own business and if I was not I would not call on you. Well, let us all go to the election and vote for Mr. Gulledge, as you know you will want to vote for a man that will be elected and will know what to do when he is elected. Success to the Banner.

Birmingham Fire.

Birmingham—Fire Wednesday night destroyed the six-story building on the south side of First avenue, near Nineteenth street, occupied by the Prowell Hardware Company, and the three-story building on the corner of Nineteenth street and Morris avenue. The total loss is estimated at about $300,000. Four firemen were injured.

Church Booth Fire Cost $150.000.

Kansas City.—A fire that started in a booth connected with a street fair in Kansas City, Kan., on Ann street, between Sixth and Seventh streets, caused a loss estimated at over $150,000 and for a time threatened the business center. A high wind made it difficult to fight the flames, and it was necessary to call for help from Kansas City, Mo.

The Masonic temple at Seventh and Ann streets, valued at $50,000, eighty booths containing valuable exhibits of various kinds and five residences were destroyed, and the Central Christian church, at Seventh and Armstrong streets, was damaged.

There were 5,000 spectators on the streets at the time, but no one was hurt. Dozens of persons from the crowd helped to fight the flames. The fire was caused by the overturning of a stove in one of the booths.

Bryan Speaks as Snow Falls.

Denver, Col.—William J. Bryan was compelled to abandon his arrangements to speak in Denver because of an engagement to speak at Indianapolis Monday, which required that he should leave Denver. He made an address to 1,000 people at the union station, however, while waiting for his train. While he was speaking snow fell steadily.

Mr. Bryan approved of the action of the Colorado democratic convention in unseating the Speer delegation from the city and county of Denver, admitting that the unseating of a regular delegation was unquestionably radical, but contending that sometimes it became necessary because of the influences which sought to control the organization. He declared that the great issue before the people now was whether the people should rule the country or corporations should be given the rein.

President Studies Isthmian Question.

Washington, D. C.—Isthmian canal affairs were discussed at a conference between President Roosevelt and Secretaries Root and Taft. In anticipation of his coming trip of inspection to the isthmus, the president is familiarizing himself was as many features of the undertaking as possible. He went over various details of the form of contract for the work of construction for the canal for which the committee invited bids several weeks ago. The president will leave New York on the battleship Louisiana on November 8.

Because of the limited time intervening before the convening of congress in December, he has decided to shorten his visit to the isthmus to three days. He will be accompanied by Mrs. Roosevelt.

Japan Indignant.

Tokio.—The anti-Japanese feeling existing in San Francisco, which was first received here with only moderate interest, being considered at first as directed purely in the interest of labor, has culminated in stormy indignation throughout all grades of Japanese society on the receipt of news that Japanese children have been compelled to enter the school in San Francisco devoted exclusively to Oriental children. Some of the newspapers are very angry, calling the action of the San Francisco school authorities an insult, but those well informed, while indignant, are trusting to President Roosevelt's moral courage and influence to nip a further growth of the unfortunate action.

Kills Whole Family.

Gage, Okla.—O. B. Heyworth, a well-to-do farmer, living seventeen miles north of this place, shot and killed his wife, two daughters, aged 22 and 18, and a son, aged 20. He then turned the weapon on himself, inflicting a mortal wound. Family trouble is given as the cause.

New Corporations Formed.

Valdosta, Ga.—There are more new corporations being formed in Valdosta now than ever before in the history of the city. The new concerns applying for charters are: The Ousley-Ashley Company, which will conduct a real estate business, with a capital stock of $15,000; the Wisenback Lumber Company, with a capital stock of $20,000, and the Stubbs-Byrd Company, capital $5,000, which will engage in the saw mill and lumber business. The Georgia Land and Timber Company, with a capital stock of $30,000; the Valdosta Stationery Company and the Forest Investment Company are among the concerns which have recently received articles of incorporation.

Chattanooga Times declares that if a tanyard dog had the disposition of some men he would be killed for general meanness.

ALABAMA GLEANINGS.

Items of Interest Gathered as They Transpire Over the Entire State.

Birmingham.—Fire in which Fourteen white men are believed to have lost their lives destroyed the house of Mrs. E. E. Moody, at 1131 Third avenue.

rMs. Moody ran a rooming house and had twenty men roomers, practicaly all of whom were employed as motormen and conductors by the Birmingham Railway, Light and Power Company.

Appeal Is Made.

Mobile, Ala.—The Coden-Bayou La Batre Relief Association, officered by J. A. Joullian, president; P. P. Andrews, vice-president; John Ewing, general secretary, and Rabbi A. C. Moses, treasurer, has issued a circular addressed to the state of Alabama, the state press and the world at large directing attention to the calamity inflicted on the south beach by the storm of September 27, in which they state the situation appeals tohe world and has been but feebly told.

End of Fair.

Birmingham, Ala.—With the horse show the Alabama State Fair came to an end Saturday night.

As a whole, it was generally agreed that the fair was considerably better than the one last year. In the first place the number of exhibits was larger and more varied, and in the second the racing program attracted more and finer horses. In the third place the fair was better than the first for the reason that the star attractions were more popular than last year. Dan Patch appeared this season, and the Beachey airship made its first flight in Alabama.

The number of people attending the fair is estimated as larger than last year, although the official figures are not available at present.

President Culpepper Exum states that the management is pleased because the patrons are pleased and because from every point of view the fair was a success.

Sunday was spent in removing the exhibits and in loading the horses in cars for their respective stables. Kopp's band gave a concert in the grand stand Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. Monday Vulcan was the only feature of the fair still occupying the field. It is said that the statue will continue to stand for an indefinite time at the fair grounds. The injury to Vulcan's right arm has been repaired.

Run Down by Trolley.

Birmingham, Ala.—Mrs. Vassie Ive, aged 30 years, who lived at 1030 First avenue, was run over and fatally injured by street car No. 136 on the Avenue B loop line. The accident happened on First avenue, between Twentieth and Twenty-first streets, and was witnessed by a large number of people.

To Protect Game.

Selma, Ala.—The Dallas County Protective Game Club was permanently organized with C. W. Hooper, president; Robert Coleman, secretary, and a board of control, composed of S. F. Houston, R. D. Sturdivant, W. W. Berry, the Rev. E. W. Gamble and J. H. Adams. A resolution endorsing the proposed legislative encatment of the Game and Fish Protective Association of Alabama was passed. The present laws of Dallas county will be rigidly enforced until the new enactments are put into effect.

Considers Successor to Brown.

Washington, D. C.—The president gave consideration to the question of the selection of a successor to Associate Justice Henry B. Brown, of the supreme court, retired, consulting with Associate Justices Day and Harlan, both of whom are republicans, and Justice White, a democrat, who at the president's invitation came to the White House. Justice Brown was appointed from Michigan, and it is considered likely that his successor will be a western man.

Cashier Offers to Resign.

St. Louis, Mo.—United State District Attorney Dyer, father of D. P. Dyer, Jr., receiving teller of the United States sub-treasury, who is under suspension pending the investigation of an alleged shortage of $61,000 in the government's funds, sent a letter to the attorney-general of the United States offering to resign if his connection with the government and his relation to Teller Dyer causes the administration any embarrassment.

Stands Collapsed.

Syracuse, N. Y.—During a football game between Syracuse and Colgate universities at New Star Park a portion of the uppersection of the bleacher stands collapsed. The stands were densely packed and 400 persons were precipitated into the enclosure under the stands. No one was killed outright, but of the 100 or more injured the death of three is expected.

Alabama Values $372,468,462.

Montgomery, Ala.—The assessed values of Alabama for the year ending September 30 last were $372,468,462, as compared to $344,224,221 the year before, an increase of $29,244,241. This is in excess of the estimated increase made a few weeks ago by Auditor Carmichael of $20,000,000.

The total receipts for the year ending last September were $3,776,546.95, compared to $3,353,537.89, an increase of $423,009.06. The total receipts from the counties last year were $2,733,084.20.

The following large counties show the following assessment values for the year, as compared to the year before:

	1906.	1905.
Jefferson	$57,870,008	$53,388,887
Mobile	29,356,548	26,347,670
Montgomery ..	24,614,273	23,533,274
Dallas	10,614,357	10,345,980
Calhoun	10,654,470	9,332,173

Large counties paid in the following sums in taxes: Jefferson, $469,005.04; Mobile, $171,362.62; Montgomery, $218,825.88; Calhoun, $73,383.60.

Rev. Tunnell Goes to Florence.

Florence, Ala.—The Rev. Mr. Spencer Tunnell, pastor of the First Baptist church at Columbia, Tenn., has accepted a call to the First Baptist church of this city, his pastorate to begin on November 1. The Rev. Mr. Tunnell is considered one of the strongest preachers in the Baptist denomination south, and the congregation here, which has been without a pastor for the past six months, is elated at his acceptance of the call.

Honor for Emma Sansom.

Gadsden, Ala.—Col. R. A. D. Dunlap, who attended the reunion of General Forrest's cavalry, which was held at Memphis last week, has returned and speaks most interestingly of his trip and the reunion. He said the most noticeable feature of the parade was the empty saddle on the back of a riderless horse, which was led by Col. James Dinkins, of New Orleans, in honor of the immortal Emma Sansom, whose home was near this city, and who rendered such valuable aid to General Forrest on his famous march through this section during the war. Colonel Dunlap also addressed the veterans in behalf of the Emma Sansom monument, which the ladies of Gadsden will erect at Riverside Park, in this city, and his talk will do much to assist the ladies in their noble enterprise.

Mistake Made in Medicine.

Birmingham, Ala.—Willie Clarence Miller, the 2 1-2-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Miller, who live at Rising Station, is dead as the result of being administered morphine for what had been bought by the parents as calomel. The child had been given several doses, when it fell over and died. The condition of the boy was discovered shortly before death, and Drs. M. C. Schoolar and J. W. Lane were called, but their efforts were of no avail, as too much morphine had been administered. The doses were administered hourly for several hours.

Meat Shop Robbed in Albertville.

Albertville, Ala.—The meat market of J. C. Bright was entered and robbed of several hundred pounds of meat. Among other meat the thieves got a 300-pound pig that Mr. Bright had killed. There is no clue to the thief. Albertville was represented last week at the Birmingham fair by a large number of its citizens.

Hanged Self in Veranda.

Comer, Ga.—Miss Letitia Key committed suicide by hanging herself in the back veranda of her nephew's home, about four miles from this place. She was about 45 years of age. Her mind had been unbalanced for some time.

Postoffice Appointments.

Washington, D. C.—W. E. Robertson, appointed postmaster at Romulus, Tuscaloosa county.

Rural route No. 1 ordered established December 17 at Cotton Hill, Barbour county, serving 404 people and 101 families.

Rural carriers appointed: Camden, route 1, Hugh H. Dale carrier, Alexander P. Suther substitute; Georgiana, route 2, William J. Thigpen carrier, Robert E. Till substitute; Grove Oak, route 1, William A. Light carrier, David A. May substitute; Nauvoo, routes 1 and 2, Albert H. Romine carrier, Alonzo Dodd substitute; Pratt City, route 1, Joseph T. Rhodes carrier, Christopher Rhodes substitute.

Heavy Snow Falling.

Sioux City, Ia.—Dispatches received at the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul office in this city state a heavy snow storm with high wind prevailed along the Rapid City extension of that road in South Dakota. The snow is drifting badly and snow plows have been ordered out.

Bank Clearings.

Atlanta, Ga.—Bank clearings of the week closing Saturday show an increase over the corresponding week of last year of $1,966,605.94. The clearings of Saturday show an increase over the same day of 1905 of $299,540.79. The report of the clearing house follows: Saturday, $826,031.77; corresponding day last year, $526,490.98; this week, $6,043,591.16; corresponding week last year, $4,076,985.22.

HUNDREDS ENGULFED

Nine Barges Filled With Workmen Lost Off Bahama.

FORTY-NINE MEN WERE RESCUED

Passing Vessels Pick Up Victims Struggling in the Water—Searchlights Fail to Show Traces.

Key West, Fla.—The Austrian steamer Jennie, Captain Dudnitch, bound from Gulfport for Genoa, has called at this port to land forty-nine workmen picked up at sea near the Baham coast, 160 miles from Key West. The men were part of a force of 150 workmen belonging to barge No. 4, engaged on east coast extension work. Most of the others were either killed or drowned in the storm early Thursday. Nine other barges crowded with workmen engaged in extension work were at sea with barge No. 4. There is no news of them, and it is feared all were lost. W. P. Duzenberry, one of the engineers saved by the steamer Jennie, says the storm struck barge No. 4 at 5 o'clock Thursday morning. One moment later the house boat went to pieces in the raging sea and thirty to forty men were killed in the crash. Duzenberry says nine other boats were working on the extension at Long Key and went to sea with barge No. 4. He has no intelligence of their fate and fears for their safety.

Officers of the rescuing steamer Jennie say they heard cries for help Thursday night, and following the direction of the sounds came upon a lot of men floating in the sea, clinging to logs, lumber and small crafts. Boats were lowered and the forty-nine men brought here were rescued.

Three other steamers, using searchlights, came on the scene and assisted in saving life. How many they rescued was not ascertained by those on board the steamer Jennie.

Great Damage Done.

Havana.—Reports of the damage done by the storm in the interior of the island continue to come in slowly. The extent of the damage done to the tobacco crop in the province of Pinar del Rio is not yet fully known, but it is believed to be great.

The tobacco was planted late this year on account of the continued rains, hence the plants have not yet sprouted and many of the seed beds have washed away, necessitating replanting, which will retard the crop. The storm is reported to have been very severe in the Vuelta Abajo district of Pinar del Rio.

The principal havoc outside of Havana is reported to have been at Batabano, where seven men were drowned, the American steamers Campbell and Sara were wrecked, many houses destroyed and 200 person rendered homeless. The moyor of Batabano has issued an appeal for relief for the destitute, and Governor Nunez, of Havana province, will proceed there with funds and food supplies.

The brunt of the storm seems to have been sustained by the city of Havana and its suburbs. No more deaths have been reported.

Island Engulfed by Tidal Wave.

Miami, Fla.—The reported loss of the steamer St. Lucie, Captain Bravo commanding, has been confirmed. A steamer arriving in port brought sixty injured, which were taken to the hospital. It is said there are twenty-eight dead bodies, which will be brougt up.

It is believed now that a portion of the Florida Fish and Produce Company's fleet was lost, with loss of life. Manager Adams sent out one of their boats to search for the men and boats, and on its return the crew reported no sign of the fleet. The fishing nets were found strewn upon the shore.

Captain Bravo says that he anchored on the lee side of Elliot's Key, twenty-five miles south of Miami, Thursday.

Grain Export Reduced.

Boston, Mass.—A shortage of freight cars on nearly all of the railroad lines carrying grain to this port is interfering to a considerable extent with Boston's grain export business. Because of the delay the Leyland line steamer Cambrian, which was scheduled to have sailed for London, was unable to leave. Eighty thousand bushels was scheduled as a part of her cargo, but as yet she has received but 25,000 bushels. Nearly every steamer in the grain carrying business which has sailed from this port has met with the same delay and have been forced to depart with only a portion of their scheduled cargoes.

Tricked the Burgomaster.

New York.—Cable advices from Berlin received here state that Herr Langenhans, the burgomaster of Coepenick, has resigned owing to the number of anonymous and sarcastic letters he has been receiving about his adventure with the bogus army captain who arrested him and sent him to Berlin, while he remained behind to clean out the town safe. The military sash worn by the impostor has been found in a field near Berlin.

Injured in Bargain Rush.

Louisville, Ky.—Twelve persons were injured in a panic during a bargain sale at a store here.

Fully 2,000 persons were in the store, attracted by a cut rate sale of some articles of chinaware of trivial value.

During the rush for the counters in the rear of the establishment, where the bargains were on display, there was a cry of "There's a $5 bill on the floor" by some person evidently facetiously inclined. Several persons bent over to pick up the bill, and in the wild scramble that ensued women and children were thrown from their feet and trod on. Others were thrown over and crushed against the counters.

A cry of "thief" by some woman whose pocketbook had been snatched heightened the excitement. At this juncture the doors were closed and the human avalanche stopped.

Physicians were hastily summoned and medical aid given.

Five Killed by Collapsing Walls.

San Francisco, Cal.—Five men were killed and two injured under collapsing walls, toppled over by the high winds. Three unknown Italian laborers were crushed to death under a wall at Commercial and Montgomery streets and another badly crushed. Two were killed and one probably fatally injured under the ruins of the walls of the John Hooy Furniture Company, on Mission street.

John Riordan, foreman of the Mission street work, noticed the wall swaying ominously a few minutes before it fell. He called to the men to come out, and all but Johns, Durand and Charles O'Connor obeyed. When it was too late Johns and Durand rushed frantically for the street. The wall came down with a crash. O'Connor was pinned against the opposite wall. He was carried out terribly crushed.

The others were buried under tons of brick. When the rescuers reached them they were crushed beyond recognition.

In the other accident the victims were engaged in salving brass in the ruins of the brick building.

Cuba Is Tranquil.

Havana.—While tranquility prevails generally in Cuba, reports received here show the existence of roving armed bands at various places. At Guines armed ex-rebels are hovering in the outskirts of the town and declare that they fear to enter because of alleged threats of persecution by the police.

At San Domingo bands of armed ex-rebels, dissatisfied with the terms of peace, threaten to commit depredations, but are overawed by the garrison marines. In the vicinity of Cienfuegos small bands are reported to be engaged in depredations.

A delegation of six liberal members of the provincial council visited Governor Magoon and announced that they would attend no meetings of the council because the moderate members of the body were illegally seated at the last election. Governor Magoon, however, argued with the disgruntled councilmen and induced all of them to reconsider their decision.

Goluchowski to Retire.

Vienna.—There is now no doubt that Count Goluchowski, the Austro-Hungarian minister of foreign affairs, will retire the last of the month. Dr. Wekerle, the Hungarian premier, had a long audience with Emperor Francis Joseph and informed the emperor that he would be unable to secure a majority in the delegations for Count Goluchowski's policy, and that any effort in this direction would even endanger the position of the Hungarian cabinet. Under these circumstances he said Count Goluchowski had resolved to retire.

Among those mentioned as most probable successors to Count Goluchowski are Count von Mensdorff, Austro-Hungarian minister to Great Britain, and Baron von Burian, the Austro-Hungarian finance minister.

Breaking Up Juntas.

El Paso, Tex.—Acting in conjunction with Mexican Consul Mallen, the El Paso police made a raid on the local junta of the alleged Mexican revolutionists. Pedro Gonzales was the only man arrested here. Simultaneously with the raid on the American side of the line the police of Juarez raided several well-known quarters in that city where the revolutionists were thought to meet and fifteen men arrested. Documents were secured in El Paso showing connection of the local organizations with those of St. Louis, Douglas, Del Rio, Laredo and Eagle Pass. The raid on the Del Rio organization during the early part of the week led to the raid here.

Actress Dead.

Ottawa, Ont.—Miss Minnie B. Jordon, a member of the Gingerbread Man company, died here. Miss Jordan's stage name was Miss Howe. She was 22 years old. Her body will be taken to her home in Nashville, Tenn.

Heflin to Begin Speeches.

Washington, D. C.—Representative Heflin, of Alabama, will be here next week to report to the democratic congressional committee for speeches in Maryland and Delaware.

New York.—The grand jury has begun an investigation of charges that one of the magistrates of the city courts has been a party to the use of money in obtaining decisions of the courts or disposal of cases without trial.

"We shall burn air," he firmly answered and then stood at attention again.

"Professor," we continued, "when all the light giving elements in the world have been consumed, how shall we get illumination to lighten us by night?"

"We shall take the air and make an illuminating gas out of it," he answered with increased firmness and stood at attention more stiffly than before.

"Professor," we went on, as we turned to the paper for the third time, "when all the food in the world has been eaten and the fields become barren, what shall we eat then?"

"We shall eat air," he cried. "Yes, we shall eat aerial tablets. What is man that he should let a chameleon get ahead of him?"

With a strong effort we succeeded in keeping our mouth from opening again with astonishment. The professor looked disappointed.

"You ought to have opened your mouth at that," he muttered somewhat impatiently. "Now here is a working drawing of the aerial tablet machine. It compresses the air. That's the idea. It compresses the air into solid form, into tablets of convenient size for the waistcoat pocket, and there you are. Isn't it wonderful? Isn't it startling?" he cried, keeping a close watch on our mouth. "Isn't it astonishing?"

We turned our head and opened our mouth (so that the professor couldn't see it) to relieve the horrid tension, and then we turned to him again with wide open eyes.

"I find," said the professor dreamily—"I find that the Chinese invented talking machines in the year 1000 B. C. It was during the reign of the ninety-third emperor, who, you will recall, had so many wives that there weren't enough to go around for the rest. So they invented talking machines and married them. But of course a talking machine has its limits. It can make only just so much noise and no more. It was unable to stimulate a real good family rumpus. So then what do you suppose the Chinese did?"

We shook our head.

"They invented gunpowder," he replied softly. He turned to a print on the wall.

"See this?" he inquired. "That's a photograph of a man's mind just as he is about to say 'Yes.' I'll admit that it's a poor negative. Now here's the model of a dynamic machine for determining the horsepower of the changeability of a woman's mind. Do you know," he continued, as he followed us into the hall—"do you know that it is a scientific fact that a man always laughs when a truck horse falls on him?"

"Why so?" we demanded.

"Because the horse is on him," explained the professor. "Ah!" he continued triumphantly, "that's the time you opened your mouth in astonishment—utter and abject astonishment. Eh?"

And we couldn't deny it.

Stuffing For Kansas Pillows.

Mrs Gilyeat, clerk in the State auditor's office, Topeka, is making a sofa pillow that will represent between $12,000,000 and $15,000,000 in bonds which have been cancelled by the State school fund commission during the time Mrs. Gilyeat has been in the auditor's office. When bonds are paid or refunded the auditor punches holes in them. These small round pieces of paper Mrs. Gilyeat has saved for her pillow, and she has kept note of the value of the bonds cancelled. She now has the clippings from more than $10,000,000 worth of the bonds.—Leslie's Weekly.

The Youngest Veteran.

The officials of the pension office think they have discovered in Lyston D. Howe, of Streator, Ill., the youngest volunteer of the Civil War. He enlisted in 1861, when only ten years and nine months old, and served for four months, when he was discharged on account of his youth. He enlisted again in 1862, when eleven years and five months old, and served until the end of the war. The record was brought out in connection with an application for increased pension, which was granted. The first service was in the Fifteenth and the second in the Fifty-fifth Illinois Volunteers. —The Army and Navy Journal.

Women as Travelers.

As a matter of genuine fact women, in nine cases out of ten, are better travelers than men are. To begin with, if not so stodgily accurate, although that by no manner of means follows, they are more fluent in modern languages. They chatter in them, say the male things. Ergo, they are the more colloquial—the readier to circumvent the wiles and extortions of Kellner and of Garcon.—The Gentlewoman.

A Real Fish Story.

In the Severn at Buildwas early the other morning a man who had set an eel line found that an eel had been caught and that a pike of two pounds weight had taken the eel while the latter was fast on the line. The eel, which was over a foot long, had worked out through the gills of the pike and had wrapped the line around the pike so fast that it could not move at all.—London Globe.

The farmers of Somersetshire, England, say that thanks to the dust raised by motor cars there is a remarkable freedom from blight in their orchards this season.

FARM AND GARDEN

APPLES FOR MARKET.

We have much to learn. The points usually in evidence are (a) loose pack, the apples not well settled in the barrel or not filled full enough but what they are slack on arrival at destination. (b) Bad sorting, a few or many number twos left in to lower the grade. (c) Poor facing, the apples not of an even size or color on the face end or not fitted into the face tight enough to preserve it in good condition. (d) Rough handling, which means throwing the fruit into the basket instead of handling it like eggs should be handled, and of emptying the fruit from the basket into the barrel from the top of the barrel instead of lowering it, and carefully transfering it with the least possible injury. I have seen otherwise good fruit rendered unfit for market in this way. Another method of rough handling is to shake the fruit from the trees and pass or try to pass it for hand picked. I have bought fruit and had the grower whose duty it was, under the contract, to pick the fruit, to shake it down. This was in the days when fruit was picked and piled and packed afterwards. It would not be possible under present methods. (e) Pulling fruit instead of picking it is what nearly all of us as growers are guilty of even up to the present time.

An apple should be picked off, not pulled off, and to do this requires a little knack. Placing the finger against the stem of the fruit and gently turning it backward, as it were, or in varieties with short stems simply turning the apple back or sideways a little will release it from the limb with the stem still attached to the apple and not pulled out of it, as is often the case in average picking. It is fruit as well as its keeping quality that the stem remains on the apple. This is much more noticeable on pears than on apples. Just try pulling off a basket of pears and then pick a basket properly and see which in your own judgment will bring the most money. It is the same with apples, only in less degree. In all these essentials of good packing and picking, also, for they go together, the far West is greatly in our advance. Attention to details in picking and packing will tend greatly to better marketing of our apples.

Therefore, I say: Grow good fruit. Pick carefully. Pack well and honestly, and you will have but little difficulty in disposing of your crop. But we must learn to do all these things well before we lay all the blame for poor prices on the commission merchant. No doubt he has much to answer for, but so has the slovenly, indifferent grower and shipper who fails to grow good fruit through neglect, handles it roughly and packs recklessly and ships indiscriminately.—H. M. Dunlap.

RIGHT FEEDING OF YOUNG STOCK.

We must be sure that we are started right, and then push and push hard —no experiment—but liberal feeding of the right kind of feed. It must be right and it must be liberal. With plenty of fresh air at a proper temperature, and with sanitary surroundings, we have our system started on the right, broad guage road.

But they will take on the pinched appearance at short notice if the proper feed or conditions are not forthcoming, and right here is where multitudes "fall down." They start the chick along in nice shape, and after the first interest wanes or other work presses, the chickens are fed when they think of it, with whatever comes handy, and then they wonder why their pullets do not lay as early as theis neighbor's across the street and that the cockerels are lean, lank, thin fellows when they should be fat and bringing good prices. Again they have let an opportunity slip past them.

The pullets from our hit or miss feeder after being placed in winter quarters and liberally fed will start laying in time, but they must first get a good comfortable layer of fat over them before they join the ranks of the producers. This wastes valuable time, and when eggs are high it seems to take longer. If the same feed had been added to the growing ration they would have come to laying from one to two months earlier and in the case of the cockerel have gone to market at least six weeks sooner and at much better prices. Look which way we may, we can find no excuse for scanty feeding, unless you wish to work off some sour, musty stuff on your birds and by keeping them half starved get them to eat it and exist (we cannot say "thrive") in a half-hearted way.—G. E. Pollard.
